Coup Victim

Tearful Lagos Buries Premier

LAGOS (Reuters) — Nigerian Prime Minister Sir Abubakar Tafawa Balewa was buried Saturday, 24 hours after his decomposed body was found on the outskirts of Lagos, a victim of the uprising that swept his government from power a week ago.

Many of the hundreds of mourners wept at the funeral near Sir Abubakar's family home at Bauchi, 750 miles from Lagos. A six-man delegation represented the military government of Moslem Northern Nigeria, the premier's homeland.

KIDNAP VICTIM

Balewa, 55, was kidnapped at the start of the military revolt and was the subject of a wide-spread search after it was quelled. His body was found Friday near a lonely roadside 27 miles from Lagos.

Bauchi was hushed as the body arrived by air, accompanied by two senior police officers, a few hours after the end of the Moslem Fast of Ramadan. Balewa was a devout Moslem.

CALLS FOR PRAYERS

The region's military governor, Maj. Hassan Kasina, cancelled all the traditional ceremonies which usually follow the ending of Ramadan and called for special prayers for the late prime minister.

Sir Abubakar was one of the West's best friends in turbulent Africa and had especially close ties with Britain.

'GREAT SON'

The military government issued Saturday morning a statement confirming Balewa's body had been found.

The announcement expressed deep regret at the death of "this great son of Nigeria." It ordered

Kids 'Corner' Phones

VANCOUVER (CP)—Lines have been so busy in West and North Vancouver that the B.C. Telephone Co. has appealed to parents to control their gossiping children.

The company says gangs of youngsters have discovered a way to conduct communal chats over the phone from their homes.

Angry subscribers who use the 11,440 party lines in the areas complain they find the lines blocked for long periods. The company says there is nothing it can do about it, other than appealing to the parents.

"We don't want to let out how they can all talk to each other," a company spokesman said Friday.

"People phone up a party line and all they hear are youngsters talking to each other and making dates."

Engineers, who could not detect who was making the calls, cut in on the line to tell the youngsters to hang up.

"All they get is abuse."

'U.S. Losing Peace Blue Chip'

Pressure Is On: Resume Bombing

WASHINGTON (AP)—Senators made public Saturday a vigorous plea by a top U.S. military leader, Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, to resume bombing of North Viet Nam.

"If you stop bombing North Viet Nam, in effect, you throw one of your blue chips for negotiation over your shoulder," the chairman of the joint chiefs of staff told a closed session of the Senate armed services and appropriations committee.

President Johnson ordered a halt to the bombing of North Viet Nam 30 days ago in an attempt to induce North Vietnamese and Viet Cong leaders to negotiate a ceasefire or peace.

Senator Richard B. Russell (Dem.-Ga.), chairman of the two Senate panels who have been listening to secret testimony by the general and Defence Secretary Robert McNamara, made public the testimony with Wheeler's permission.

Wheeler appeared before the committees on Thursday and Friday. The testimony released today was given Thursday.

His advocacy of heavy bombing of North Viet Nam came when he was asked about proposals by James Gavin, retired general and former ambassador, that the U.S. halt bombing and offensive warfare in South Viet Nam and withdraw its forces to a group of military enclaves or centres which could be stoutly defended.

'Can't Close Eyes To Hanoi Hostility'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson renewed Saturday night a pledge to continue his efforts for peace in Viet Nam but had some somber observations about "continuing hostility and aggressiveness in Hanoi."

In a letter to a group of 76 Democratic members of the House of Representatives who urged him to persevere in his month-old peace offensive, Johnson wrote:

"We are making no hasty assumptions of any sort, but it is quite another matter to close our eyes to the heavy weight of evidence which has accumulated in the last month."

The president's sober appraisal of peace prospects was released by the White House a few hours after it was learned that Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, feels that any permanent halt in the bombing of North Viet Nam would weaken this nation's efforts to arrange peace negotiations.

The congressmen in a letter to Johnson urged him Friday to ask the United Nations to arrange an effective cease-fire.

On this point the president wrote that he is "firmly determined to make every possible use of the UN in moving toward peace, and toward an effective cease-fire as part of that purpose."

Step-Up Likely In Jungle War

SAIGON (AP) — The tattered truce of the Lunar New Year entered its final hours today and allied forces braced against the possibility of fresh combat operations before Monday's dawn.

Factors on both sides, including the landing of 7,000 additional American troops in Viet Nam last week and broadcast calls from Hanoi Friday for harder Communist strikes, suggested the war will be intensified.

U.S. military authorities attributed 66 violations of the truce to the Viet Cong, one a terrorist bombing early Saturday of a U.S. Signal Corps billet a mile from Saigon's Tan Son Nhut airport.

Adrift on Ice 52 Rescued

PORT CLINTON, Ohio (UPI) — An ice floe jammed with fishermen broke loose from shore during a heavy snowstorm Saturday and drifted a half mile into Lake Erie. The Coast Guard said the wind played a part in the quick recovery.

"The wind was blowing north-east so that it pushed the floe toward the shore," Nygren said. "If it had been a south-west wind, it would have blown them further into the lake."

'Avoid Politics' Ministers Press For Clemency

SALISBURY (Reuters) — Two Methodist ministers are appealing to the British and Rhodesian prime ministers on behalf of more than 20 Negroes under sentence of death here.

The ministers, who act as prison chaplains to the men in the condemned cells of Salisbury jail, are asking Prime Ministers Wilson and Ian Smith for an early review of each case with a view to commuting the death sentence.

Huge Dam 'Symbol Of Peace'

ACCRA (Reuters) — President Kwame Nkrumah Saturday inaugurated the $425,000 Volta River hydroelectric scheme at Akumasi northeast of here, the Ghana news agency reported.

Nkrumah called the project a concrete symbol of the type of international co-operation which can help forge world peace.

Britain was not represented at ceremonies because Ghana has broken off relations over Rhodesia.

Avalanche Blocks Road

AOSTA, Italy (UPI) — An avalanche roared down the Aosta valley's main road Saturday, blocking car traffic to and from France through the Mount Blanc tunnel.

The avalanche half-buried a number of cars, but there were no injuries. Authorities said they hoped snowplows could clear the road before midnight.

Uncensored Report Out at Last

How Nation Lost Its Head

TORONTO (CP) — How Sir Abubakar Tafawa Balewa died was told for the first time Saturday when The Star printed a censor-delayed story by Mark Harrison.

The story detailed the early-morning shooting of the Nigerian prime minister and gave details too of how other top government officials were dispatched.

Harrison, filing his story from London after censors in Lagos refused to pass it, said Balewa and three other officials were shot by soldiers in three separate cities during simultaneous raids at 3 a.m. Saturday, Jan. 15.

Harrison flew into Lagos from the Congo last weekend, a few hours after Balewa's government was overthrown. He was still in Africa after leaving Lagos where he had covered the Commonwealth conference a few days earlier.

Balewa was missing for a week after the military overthrow of his government.

(Reuters news agency reported Saturday that his body had been found Friday 27 miles from Lagos. Government officials reported his death but gave no details of the circumstances.)

Harrison also described the shootings of:

Finance Minister Festus Okotie-Eboh, whose body was found with gunshot wounds Wednesday.

Sir Ahmadu Bello, 56-year-old Sardauna of Sokoto, premier of Nigeria's Northern region; and Chief Samuel Akintola, 55-year-old premier of the Western region.

Harrison gave these details of the killing of the 53-year-old Balewa at his Lagos home:

CONSPIRATORS

"Armed conspirators broke into the home . . . overpowered his police bodyguard, and carried off the man regarded as one of the most respected leaders of the Commonwealth."

"He, too, was shot dead but his body was hidden. . . . Next door, another group of

No 'Avon' Profiteers by Churchill Grave

Bladon Shuts Out Hucksters

By WALTER DAVIS

BLADON, England (Reuters) — This tiny Oxfordshire village where Sir Winston Churchill lies buried today shows signs of winning its battle against commercialization despite the arrival of more than 1,000,000 visitors since the statesman's death.

The parish council is determined that Churchill will "not do for Bladon what Shakespeare has done for Stratford," parish clerk Charles French said.

"We must prevent the exploitation of private profit or greed in the last resting place of one of England's greatest sons."

Bladon is a simple workaday village of stone houses, three stores, two bars and a filling station. It has none of the thatched cottages of the nearby Cotswold Hills, a noted scenic spot.

However, its 388 inhabitants want to retain their rural way of life and avoid the hustle and bustle associated with such shrines as Stratford on Avon.

The villagers object to the slamming of car doors and dislike having people stare over their fences while lining up to see Churchill's grave. One woman says she will never sunbathe in her garden again.

The villagers also want to avoid the opening of tea gardens, hot-dog stands and bus stations, and so far the council has succeeded in preventing this.

Since the great statesman was buried on Jan. 30, 1965, in the yard of the village Church of St. Martin, the churchyard walk has been bordered by Churchill's own gardeners with roses.

Visitors often wonder why such a great man lies buried in the country churchyard when he could have been laid to rest in such great national shrines as Westminster Abbey or St. Paul's Cathedral. The decision to be buried at Bladon was Churchill's own, however.

A man with a great sense of history and family tradition, he chose to be buried next to his parents and brother in sight of his birthplace, built for his famous warrior ancestor, the first Duke of Marlborough.

Tapping with a stick at the spot where he now lies, Churchill once told the church sexton: "This is my place, here."

Prince Has to Rough It

Tough Time Ahead in Australian Bush

By JOHN FITZGERALD
MELBOURNE, Australia (AP)—When Prince Charles ends his three-month term at Timbertop school he will be expected to swing an axe with the authority of a lumberjack, run six miles up and down a mountainside with no strain, land a trout with little fuss—and pass all his scholastic examinations. He will rise at 7:20 a.m., take a cold shower and make his own bed before breakfast. And at the end of each day in class, he will take an hour's cross-country run.

Charles

INDEPENDENCE
Timbertop is the school in Australian mid country 150 miles northeast of Melbourne that claims to make self-reliant, independent, practical and physically competent men out of boys. It is a branch of the Geelong Church of England grammar school at Australia's Corio Bay and it has ties with Gordonstoun school in Scotland which the 17-year-old future king has been attending since 1962.

Charles leaves London Jan. 28 and starts at Timbertop Feb. 3. The operations at Timbertop are left almost entirely to the 130 boys of 15 years or older. They select their own leaders and boiler room. They must maintain their own living quarters, sweeping the floors, making beds, keeping the area tidy and chopping firewood.

Residents in the area of Timbertop have been screened by security officials and local farmers have been asked not to lay dingo (wild dog) traps in areas where Timbertop boys go walking.

SIMPLY 'CHARLIE'

Masters at Timbertop will call the British heir Prince Charles but to the boys he will be simply Charles.

On weekends, the boys hike off with 40-pound packs on their backs and sleep in the woods. Often weekend hikes cover 60 miles.

In sending Prince Charles to Gordonstoun and Timbertop, the Queen and Prince Philip have shown they want to emphasize physical toughness—along with scholarship—in preparing their son for the throne.

Some Britons scoff at the idea but many approve, London reporters have found.

QUESTIONS EDUCATION
Woodrow Wyatt, a Labor member of the British Parliament, questioned whether the Prince was getting the right kind of training for this highly technological world.

"Is he going to be a lumberjack, a steepjack, or just an acrobat?" thundered Wyatt in London recently. "In the name of humanity, what are they doing to the boy?"

ABOVE AVERAGE

Charles is not pictured as an intellectual or scholar. But his grades at Gordonstoun are above average. He has none of his father's gift of lightning repartee but has a sensitive and imaginative mind. The young prince's leanings are more toward English and history than to science and he is regarded as one of the best actors in the dramatic classes at Gordonstoun.

Bombings Hold Up Infiltrators

SAIGON (Reuters)—Heavy bombing of the Ho Chi Minh Trail through Laos by U.S. and South Vietnamese aircraft has considerably hampered the infiltration of North Vietnamese troops into this country, according to Gen. Nguyen Van Thieu, South Vietnam's chief of state.

His remark, quoted Saturday by Viet Nam Press, the official news agency, was the first public reference to bombing in Laos, which was first unofficially reported in the press late last year.

An American spokesman reported comment on the report or on the question of any bombing raids on Laotian territory.

Editorial Views Threaten Contract

Council Minutes Printed For County at $1 a Head

LETHBRIDGE (CP)—Lethbridge County Council has agreed the Coalville Sun-South News must stop publishing reports of council news if it wants to keep a county printing contract.

Councillors voted 4 to 2 in favor of a motion to renew a 1964 contract for printing council minutes providing the weekly doesn't publish anything arising from the meetings held in the county office.

Councillor Leonard Haney of Picture Butte originally proposed the paper "cease to publish items of its own journalistic origin in connection with school and county matters and would continue to print only official releases by the county secretary."

Councillor J. Rogers Davis of Chelhurst opposed the motion.

saying "it smacks too much of press censorship." Councillor Miro Tomasta of Coalville supported him.

The newspaper's publisher, J. B. R. Staddon, declined comment, Mr. Haney said.

"Our ratepayers regard the Sunny South News as the official mouthpiece of the councillors and articles about county meetings are frequently flavored with the editor's opinion."

"Thus our ratepayers are understanding us saying things and doing things that we have never heard of."

Under the agreement, the newspaper printed official minutes of county, municipal committee and agricultural committee meetings in return for $1 for every ratepayer in the county. This amounts to about $2,300.

The council also decided to renew the contract for one year instead of the three agreed on in the original contract.

Woman's Body Found By Tracking Dog

PENDER HARBOR (CP)—The body of a woman missing since she went on a shrubbery hunt Friday was found by RCMP Saturday. Suicide 'Ridiculous'

Man Suspected Of Spying By Soviets

SHEFFIELD, Mass. (UPI)—Newcomb Mott had been suspected by the Soviet Secret Police of being a U.S. Central Intelligence Agency agent and had considered taking his own life, his father said Saturday night.

Howard Mott, a Sheffield rare book dealer, said, however, that his 27-year-old son had dismissed the idea of suicide as "ridiculous."

"During the first three months of his incarceration in Russia, my son did mention to me that the thought of suicide had crossed his mind," the elder Mott said. "But later, his letters indicated he was looking to the future and not this kind of self-destruction."

BEING TRANSFERRED

Soviet officials said Friday that young Mott, a book salesman for a Princeton, N.J. firm had committed suicide while being transferred to a forced labor camp where he was to serve an 18-month sentence on a conviction of illegally crossing the Soviet border.

'GOOD SPIRITS'

The elder Mott said his son's letters indicated he was in the best of health and in good spirits. Mott said his son wrote: "Please have all the newspaper accounts of the trial as I want to read them when I come home. I hope I will be able to return to my old job because I have a two-year stake in it."

'SEEMED RESIGNED'

The elder Mott said his son seemed "resigned to being shunted off to a distant penal institution." Quoting again from his son's letters, Mott said: "He wrote that 'if my appeal fails, I will be journeying to a labor camp just before Christmas. This had not been a total loss... and I don't suppose a labor camp will be either.'"

Dodging an Issue

ONE THING that would have marked the centennial of Confederation next year with appropriate panache would have been the so-called repatriation of Canada's constitution. It is too late now for that goal to be reached in time for the 1967 national celebration, but judging by the Throne speech such a move is not even on its way.

It remains the objective of the Pearson government, said the speech in terms so vague as to mean nothing, "to provide that the constitution of Canada be amended in Canada." There is no hint here of any positive action to bring this about.

There has been much ado on the subject in recent years and even a proposed formula agreed to in principle by all provinces except Quebec, but the latter's reaction to any measure is always such as to inhibit Mr. Pearson, and so far as his government is concerned apparently nothing further will be done about the matter.

Repatriation is a somewhat misleading term, since by definition it means a return or restoration to native habitat. The BNA Act, the present constitution conceded on all sides to be badly out of date, never was here, being a British statute. That it continues to be Canada's and not Britain's fault. The Westminster parliament has long wished to be rid of it, and must be bored by Canadian inability to take its constitution into its own bosom.

It never will be so taken except by direct steps in the required direction, and the leadership to effect these should come from the government of which Mr. Pearson is the head.

Amending off its own bat the BNA Act or drafting an entirely new constitution is not an easy proposition in view of the traditional jealousy that exists between provincial capitals and Ottawa. But governance is charged not only with the easy tasks but with the difficult ones as well. And it is in grappling with the latter that real statesmanship shows itself.

So long as Canada labors under the handicap of a century-old constitution that could not have foreseen the changes that time and progress would bring, so long will the nation be held back by documentation that impedes its national interests and creates many of the problems that cause federal-provincial disagreement.

It is a black mark against the maturity of all ten governments of Canada that they have not approached the subject with the urgency that the situation demands. If all the lip service paid to national unity was given visible expression by unified action the drafting of a new constitution should pose no insuperable barriers.

But Mr. Pearson apparently prefers to let the matter remain in suspense as though it would settle itself, which it can never do.

A Better Chance

THE INTERMUNICIPAL Committee of Greater Victoria last week took up the suggestion of Reeve Allan Cox of Oak Bay and approved a resolution asking the provincial government to appoint a select committee to look into the whole question of the sharing of tax resources and responsibilities between the province and its municipalities. It was left to the council to represent on the committee to adopt the resolution individually and send it to the government.

Victoria city council subsequently chose to ask instead for a royal commission on the subject, a decision that might seem to invite similar action by the other parts of the capital district.

The reason behind the change was that a royal commission would be truly independent in studying the situation and making its recommendations; a government-appointed committee of the legislature would tend to be on the government's side, rather than acting as an impartial referee. The political ramifications of accepting or refusing financial and administrative changes would certainly be to the fore in the minds of politicians.

There is also the point, although it was not mentioned in the city council debate, that a committee of the legislature could cease to exist were the House dissolved for an election—not a totally unlikely event—while a royal commission would carry on.

It is worth noting, on the other hand, that perhaps a request for a committee study of the predicament of the municipalities and their property-owners would stand a better chance of acceptance.

At least Municipal Affairs Minister Campbell indicated in the fall that he was aware of ills in the field of municipal governance and inclined toward having a committee of the legislature look into possible alterations to the Municipal Act to combat such things as voter apathy on money bylaws and poor election turnouts. If this is still Mr. Campbell's intention, an examination of the sore points of provincial-municipal relations is a logical extension of such a study.

How Things Change

IT IS INTERESTING to note how political views can change; the difference for example when bidding for re-election and when re-installed in office.

During the election campaign of last fall Mr. Pearson said that if he didn't win a majority mandate he wouldn't be averse to someone else forming the government. He has a different idea on the subject now that he is back again as prime minister, even as a minority leader.

Mr. Diefenbaker has suggested that a House vote defeating the Pearson regime doesn't necessarily involve another election, but instead that another party, his own, could be given the chance to form a government. The reply of the prime minister is that this wouldn't conform to our parliamentary system, meaning that in such event there would be another recourse to the electorate.

Intriguingly this is in notable contrast to his suggestion in 1958 when he called on the then Prime Minister Diefenbaker to resign and hand over the reins of office to him. What was sauce for the goose then is not equally sauce for the gander now.

There is not much fear that the Opposition groups in Parliament will combine to defeat the government, any more than was instanced during the two-and-a-half years of the last Parliament. Nor is another early test at the polls desirable, which in any case probably wouldn't resolve the present situation of minority rule. It is up to Parliament to get on with the many pressing problems awaiting its attention and forget about elections for a while.

But as observed above it is interesting to see how the sweets of office induce a different frame of mind when it is a question of letting someone else be prime minister.

Widening Difference in Averages

A Canada-U.S. Education Gap

By SHAUN HERMON
(First of two articles)

WE make certain comforting assumptions and repeat them through several generations. We used to say "A Scottish degree is worth another $5,000 a year in the U.S." Indeed the Americans themselves said that sort of thing just the day before yesterday and rushed off to get Scottish degrees—but rarely the extra $5,000 when they came home.

In Canada I heard it 20 years ago and hear it occasionally today. "Of course, most American universities are equivalent to our high schools."

But how are such generalizations sustained? If you have a child in a Saskatchewan school putting marks in the low 70s and move him to Ontario, his marks will drop to the low 70s or 80s.

If you have a child in one of Boston's public high schools, his reading comprehension is likely to be 38 per cent below the U.S. national average. But if he is in a similar school in Newton—part of Greater Boston—he is apt to be above the national average and at least the equal of the best Canada has to offer in its public or private schools.

When the Economic Council reported on the bearing of education upon our national development they tried to reach some conclusions about this business of the alleged disparity in the quality of Canadian-American education. Their conclusions should act like a Mexican rowl on our complacent Canadian hides.

Taking into account all the possible grounds of disparity (local differences, teacher training, facilities, curricula, etc.) within Canada and the U.S. and between them, the council says: "... There does not appear to be a consensus as to whether the overall quality of education is higher or lower in the U.S." The council therefore adopted as its working assumption, the position that "the average quality of education is roughly similar in the two countries. It is an excellent working assumption on the ground that it also happens to be the truth.

From this position the council goes on to reach conclusions that ought to shock us out of any assumptions of superiority. That would seem to be a necessary pre-condition of radical action to correct what is in fact our rather alarming inferiority in particular respects.

When the Economic Council uses the words "labor force" it means the employable, from university presidents to office boys. But it says "having regard for the very large numbers of people already in the labor force who have received only limited education, it would take many, many years" to bring our educational position to the present American level "and a large and sustained effort over a period of many decades to close the gap with the U.S."

There is at present "a widening educational gap between the two countries." In spite of a substantial rise in the educational levels of Canada's labor force the Canadian average level is considerably lower than the American and has improved more slowly. For example, the Canadian male labor force, which in 1911 had an average of seven years schooling, in 1961 had increased its average schooling by only a little more than two years (two-and-a-half years over a 50-year period), or a prodigious old "Law of the one half of one per cent per year.

The American condition is startlingly different. From 1910 to 1960 the average years of schooling showed "gains of approximately nine to ten per cent in each decade over the 50-year period."

Here are the comparable figures for those who finished four years of high school in Canada and the U.S. Over the male work force aged from 25 to 64, the Canadian figure is 8.7; the American figure is 24.6. In the age group 25 to 34 the Canadian figure remained at 8.7, the American rose to 30.8. Figures for university graduates in the 25 to 34 age group are: Canadian 6.0 per cent; American 14.7. Perhaps this statement from the report will carry its own impact.

"... In 1960 about 45 per cent of the U.S. male labor force had four years of high school or more education, compared to 24 per cent in Canada in 1961... (the years, by the way, are census years in each country.)

"It might also be noted that in the 35 to 44 age group in Canada, there is a slightly higher proportion of persons with university degrees than in the younger 25 to 34 age group. This reflects the post-war up-surge of veterans who completed university degrees. But in the U.S. where there was a similar post-war upsurge... enforcements were maintained at a high level resulting in a further expansion in the proportion of the younger age groups obtaining university degrees."

This of course leaves in the air the question of who should go to university and why, and in Canada we might hope to find a better answer to the question than the Americans have so far settled for. ONE of the most interesting phenomena in contemporary Russia is the debate over the future of education. Public opinion seems highly interested while the government observes a cautious wait-and-see attitude.

The school programs of the Stalin and post-Stalin era were centered on natural sciences. The most intelligent and promising youngsters were all oriented towards these studies; they were favored in the allocation of time and funds. The U.S.S.R. wanted to surpass the rest of the world with the number of its scientists and technicians. The result of these efforts cannot be denied.

Impressed by the race into space, the official Communist youth organizations wanted to go one step further. Especially in the second half of 1964, when a number of their leaders demanded an added scientific education in natural sciences.

But after the election, when Pick and his political pals, save for one token seat, were shut out of the Prairies, mournful Mayor Juba, a hoie suddenly was discovered in that bag Mr. P. had talked about, through which a flipped Winnipeg's promised Canadian air service to Chicago.

And to hear the Conservative MPs from the West, there are other suspicious signs of further punitive applications of the principle of the "Pickersgill Protocol"—like perhaps, they worry—a financially judicious slimming down at least a few of the many fat farm benefits promised BN before November 8.)

Pension Action

THIS session of Parliament may be the last chance for those elderly citizens who are at present struggling to exist on the totally inadequate old-age pension of $75 per month, to make their protests carry some weight.

A government which can increase high civil servants' salaries, which normally, are already $25,000 and $30,000 a year, and a government which can pay a pension of $25,000 to a former governor of the Bank of Canada who only served 11 years, surely cannot plead that it is unable to "afford" $100 per month old-age pension to those senior citizens in the small income bracket.

There is no need to make it a universal increase from the present $75. It should be granted to all elderly people with net incomes of $1,200 or less a year, when they reach the age of 65. This is a very minimum for decent living, for those who built Canada in the less prosperous days.

In 1967 there will be a lot of bally-hoo about the valiant pioneers of our country. Well, some of them are still living (?) today, but a lot of them in such appalling circumstances, that, if details were fully published, it would shame this nation.

Unless every single elderly person and group bombards the halls of Parliament this session, nothing is likely to be done. Write, therefore, to your MP, or, if you prefer, to the political leader of your choice. But write, and do it soon!

Opportunity

It is reported that China has broken its trade agreement with Cuba and will not take their sugar in exchange for rice as heretofore.

This would give the U.S.A. a good opportunity to renew its contract with Cuba and thereby earn the gratitude of the Cuban people. There is no doubt the hard line adopted by America pushed the Cuban revolution into the arms of the Communist world.

I wonder if the government and the people of the U.S.A. are capable of such a gesture which would make for peace and remove a danger spot in the Western hemisphere.

After all, a powerful nation can afford to be big enough to offer the hand of friendship to one it now considers an enemy or will it rely on brute force alone?

For Peace

May I be allowed to answer Mr. Ashwell's letter of Jan. 16, "Minding Our Own Business." In reference to Mr. Pearson's trip to Nigeria.

Mr. Pearson is no yes man to any nation, unless circumstances justify him doing so.

I like to think he went not in a sense of interference, but for a peaceful settlement, and if possible at all to prevent horrible rioting, loss of life and bloodshed.

However I will agree with Mr. Ashwell that in the field of business and government we will as an independent nation mind our own business.

While on the topic of Commonwealth affairs, the news item or article by Mr. Enoch Powell, "British People Fed Up With Commonwealth," Jan. 16, to my mind is one of the most realistic viewpoints that I have seen in print for some time. The source and manner of his writing seems to have a down-to-earth reliability.

Lagos Meeting

Mr. Arnold Smith, Canadian secretary-general of the British Commonwealth Secretariat, is quoted as stating in London that the Commonwealth is "a real democracy on the basis of majority rule." (The capitals are mine.)

Mr. Smith had just returned from the Lagos conference which all the most important Commonwealth countries, except Canada, had boycotted—call it what you will. The conference had been called by Nigeria with the intention, of course, of using its influence and example to force Rhodesia into a replica of its own brand of democracy.

are considered "officials" against whom the young love to show their intellectual independence.

The government, as we already remarked, seems undecided. We have here an evolution very similar to the one which followed the first initiatives of Professor Liberman. There, too, both sides had full freedom. When the debate turned against the representatives of the official line, the authorities were able to make concessions without losing face.

Of course, in the Soviet Union the change will take place very gradually. Nobody should expect dramatic moves. Nevertheless, it is worth while to note the trend. It could be a salutary lesson to certain Westerners, who still demand that we imitate the examples of Stalinist Russia in our educational programs.

It is now reported from Russia that the debate clearly evolves in favor of the defenders of humanities. Their arguments, expounded by popular personalities, seem to impress the students, while the advocates of an exclusive specialization in natural sciences suffer from the fact that they Unfortunately for Mr. Arnold within a matter of hours after he held forth, Nigeria experienced a revolt, its prime minister and other ministers abducted. It should also be noted that two previous political disturbances in Nigeria in the last 12 months resulted in the loss of hundreds of lives.

The remarks of Mr. Smith appear to reflect also the views of Mr. Lester Pearson, who even went so far as to visualize the use of force by the UN to bring about conditions of political chaos in Rhodesia, similar to those which existed in Lagos right under his nose, and must have been obvious to any observant and experienced political observer.

The Canadian people are justified in demanding from Mr. Pearson an unequivocal explanation of his conduct in this matter.

Infamous

From Colonist Files

WARTIME gave rise to a suspicion, 25 years ago: RCMP and local police converged on Crescent Beach, near White Rock, when residents reported a "spy" car transmitting messages on a short-wave radio set.

At Ocean Park, another nearby resort, the police overtook the spy car—and found it was a telephone company car conducting educational operations in co-operation with the University of British Columbia.

A letter from a corporal with the 10th Battalion, Canadian Scottish, at the front, to Chief Langley of the Victoria police force, angrily denied that British troops were given a drink of rum before being required to make a charge, 38 years ago.

"A worse or more infamous libel on brave men has never been uttered," wrote Cpl. J. C. Scott, a former licence commissioner in Victoria.

An Englishman does not require to resort to any artificial stimulation in order to do his duty, no matter how hard or difficult that duty may be... The only time that rum is issued to us is after a charge or after extra physical exertion on working parties, listening post, reconnoitering patrols, etc. in order to induce necessary sleep and rest. This is not very often as one thing follows another so quickly out here...

"We men out here... resent any such unjust imputations. It is about time some of those armchair critics commenced to accomplish something instead of sitting in the security we buy for them and finding fault."

Lucky purchasers of lots at "Oak Bay Beach, the coming summer resort of Victoria," were in divide $3,000 among them, 15 years ago.

The $3,000 was to be split into six cash premiums to be drawn for after all lots had been sold in a portion of the Fuller Estate "lying between the Driving Park and Oak Bay Beach."

"Good roads now lead to the beach," prospective buyers were assured; "a hotel site has been reserved and plans prepared for a spacious summer hotel; the electric railway cars now run within a short distance of this property, and arrangements will be made to extend the line to the Driving Park, which is opposite this property, and will bring it within ten minutes' ride of the Post Office."

The Colonist reported that new rules had just come into force for the use of the telephone.

"Two sharp rings will call up the central office. Immediately take down the handle and listen for the still, small voice (from the central office) which will answer well—or—hello."

"Ask for the number you want in this way: 5-24 (not five hundred and 24). Listen for the shrill, small voice, which will ask you to ring. Then, if you wish, you can torment the person at the other end of the line as much as you please, if ringing will do it."

"Don't ring off."

"As an instance of legislative folly," the Colonist said 100 years ago, "yesterday's vote in the Committee of Supply (of the House of Assembly) stands unparalleled."

The folly referred to was the decision not to vote the amount necessary to rent the public school buildings in Victoria, and this, said the paper, "is simply to turn the children into the streets and put an end to free education. It is well the public should note men who have either so much malice in their constitution as to compass the destruction of our school system, or who are so stupid as not to know the subject on which they vote."

Byelection Crucial for Wilson

Quotable Quotes

While sitting doing nothing has its value—it is restorative—doing useless, unnecessary jobs as an escape from the great jobs in life is of no value whatever. —Charlotte Mitchell.

We fear Germany because we do not know what in fact is simmering in the German soul.—Archbishop Kominek of Wrocław, Poland.

By JOSEPH MacSWEEEN from London

The way the Tories tell it, this week's by-election in North Hull could well blow the roof off the House of Commons in London. To hear the socialists talk, you'd swear the political life of Edward Heath, the new Tory leader can last only a few hours, beyond the close of polls in North Hull Thursday.

In less politically-charged language, the by-election will either reduce Prime Minister Wilson's Labor government majority to one or else give Heath's fledgling leadership a black eye. It could presage a spring general election in March or May, with May regarded as more likely.

Meanwhile the voters of easy-going Hull—a city described by one writer as a "living anti-climax"—appear as taciturn as ever despite the sudden burst of national and international attention attracted by the eccentric campaign.

The issue is crucial in the timing of the next general election since Wilson's Labor forces, with a present majority of only two in the 630-member Commons, is striving to hold the marginal seat at a time of considerable political and industrial turmoil.

North Hull was captured from the Tories by a mere 1,181 votes in the October, 1964, general election that brought Wilson to power. The by-election was made necessary by the death of Labor member Harry Solomon.

This weekend the electors are receiving the full weight of party machinery, with more than 850 volunteers pouring into the constituency in support of the Labor, Conservative and Liberal candidates, fighting the by-election along with three other hopefuls.

Biggest speculation in the city of 300,000 beside the Humber River centres around 27-year-old Richard Gott, London journalist who is the candidate of the Radical Alliance, a leftist splinter group.

Described as a "cross between a young Bernard Shaw and John the Baptist," red-bearded Gott attacks Wilson's Viet Nam policy and demands nuclear disarmament. The question is how many votes he may take from Labor candidate Kevin McNamara, 31, college lecturer in law, who stands on Wilson's record.

Toby Jesse, a 31-year-old exporter is conducting a whirlwind hand-shaking tour for the Tories.

Mrs. Laurie Millward, 36, Hull councillor and housewife, increased the Liberal vote in the general election and is trying for another surge by preaching the gospel of Britain entering the European Common Market.

One of the Independents advocates world government, another claims support from "the legions of God" and the third Richard Gott, London journalist has not been seen since he filed his nomination papers.

Parliament reassembles here Tuesday following the Christmas recess with indications of an all-out opposition attack on three fronts—a threatened railway strike, a power crisis during a cold spell and a recent spate of price increases.

The Tories, on their side, have been split three ways over the Rhodesian question and Heath's leadership has received criticism from within his own ranks resulting in one front-bench Tory spokesman being relegated to the back benches.

Current standing in the House: Mrs. L. Millward (Lib) 7,570; North Hull results in the 1964 election: H. Solomons (Lab) 20,964; J. O. Coulson (C) 19,483; M. L. Millward (Lib) 7,570.

Is This Madness Really Necessary?

By A. H. MURPHY

I'll never understand why a municipality has to go into a convulsion every time an anniversary comes around and, still less do I understand why Greater Victoria has to have a professionally-planned seizure in 1967 which could cost the taxpayers a lot of money. What's the philosophy behind displays such as that planned for Canada's centennial year? Is it a tremendous achievement to have survived for 100 years? Is it designed as a bond to unify the divergent factions in Canada?

Or is it just a tourist gimmick?

If Ottawa wants to beat the drums in 1967 there is not much we can do about it and if the province wants to shout burrah this year and spend a lot of money we are more or less helpless. However, there should be something we can do about our own part in this whoop-de-do.

Surely we don't have to let this idiosyncrasy infect us to the point where we bring in a firm of professional U.S. promoters and spend thousands of our dollars to put on a show similar to that seen in scores of cities hundreds of times and which, I am sure, will leave a lot of people completely unmoved.

People in Victoria are a reasonably sophisticated lot. They are older than the average in most cities and have come here from all parts of the world. I'll bet many of them could call the turns, in the type of program proposed for Victoria, long before it is staged.

Perhaps it is our leaders rather than our people who are naive.

Civic business is big business (nearly $15,000,000 in the City of Victoria) and the cry has gone out for years for businessmen to run such enterprises. And we are getting an ever-greater proportion of businessmen in our legislative set-up.

Could it be that so-called hard-headed businessmen are the easiest of all people to sell on a slick well put-together, professional-looking packages. And, accustomed as they are to dealing in large sums, they don't cavil at the expenditure of big chunks of public money if they think results will follow.

And, furthermore, they are inclined to believe that a professional job is insurance against failure—and in some cases it is.

A lot of people are pretty upset about this whole business. Why, they ask, does it have to be a year-long celebration. Why does it have to be put on by a firm of American professionals? Isn't it bad management to celebrate two centennials in two consecutive years—B.C. this year and Canada next?

If it is going to be a money-losing proposition, and this is almost a certainty, why don't we spend our losses on local people rather than an outside firm?

Even if the local people don't have the success of the professionals—and this is only conjecture—the city would be making an investment in providing training and experience for a group for which it has, by reason of promised subsidies, a fatherly interest.

And finally, people ask: How in the devil do we get into fixes like this?

Who is this man?

This man is Victor James, a chartered accountant who came to us with his financial problems in providing an advanced education for his children, maintaining a large household and a new car. Victor James has no income, is unemployed by a large number of accountants, earning monthly payments totaling a third less than $25,000 in obligations. Lower Finance consolidated his obligations under one Homeowner's Plan. Here the kind of HELP he really needed. Now he pays only $101.09 a month, much less than half his former payment at much less interest.

Victor James can be found at the bottom of every advertisement representing just one of the many thousands of Canadians who have come to us for a sensible solution to their financial problems. Why not give us a call today—we may have the solution to your financial problems as well.

TOWER FINANCE CO. OF CANADA

CAPITAL REPORT

By JACK FRY

Investment fever is sweeping through provincial government departmental offices where employees have formed nearly a dozen clubs to play the stock market.

Operation of these clubs, one of which has 24 members, has nothing to do with the government and members claim they have "no inside information" which gives them an advantage over the general public.

The more highly organized clubs elect officers and agents, have bylaws printed and hold semi-monthly meetings to discuss investments and plan their stock market strategy.

Members generally contribute an initiation fee and monthly payments into a common fund which is used for both blue chip and speculative investment, with the profits or losses to be shared at a later date.

Two Men Die In Flames

MONTREAL (UPI) — The bodies of two men were found by firemen in a west side apartment building after a stubborn blaze whipped through upper levels of the structure and forced 40 tenants to flee.

The blaze apparently broke out in a third floor apartment where men were occupying, firemen said. Flames spread to adjacent rooms of the dwelling, causing heavy damage.

The idea is that by pooling their spare money the government employees can share in the excitement which was fostered by the recent emphasis placed on rapid development of British Columbia's rich mineral resources.

It is understood that some of these clubs have reaped profits of 100 per cent, while one is now down 14 per cent and others are just about breaking even.

My informant is a member of a club in the latter category. He paid a $50 initiation fee and has placed a total of $180 into his investment pool, only to report that "we are holding our own and may be up $1 per member when brokerage fees are considered."

Government employee investment groups sometimes hold business sessions during their lunch breaks, and city stockbrokers occasionally give lectures at the evening meetings, he said.

Some clubs restrict speculative spending to 20 per cent of total funds; other clubs permit up to 50 per cent.

The attitude seems to be that if the right choices are made there is money to be had and if the wrong ones are made the consolation will be a working knowledge of the stock market.

There is, however, a strong undercurrent of feeling that now is the time to invest, while the province is in a period of economic expansion.

Inspired Teacher Teaches Teachers

By WILLIAM THOMAS

Boris Rubakine is a pianist and teacher with a sense of dedication to his mission in the world of music.

He is preoccupied with bringing piano teachers back to the music of the composing giants. He feels many who are now guiding the efforts of young musicians have allowed themselves to become so involved in teaching they have moved away from the spirit of the music they are trying to teach others to love.

As with most missionaries his quest involves much travel. Rubakine has, of course, been around the globe on concert tours. For many years he was accompanied by the virtuoso violinist Bronislaw Huberman travelling about Europe and North and South America.

Now, for the major portion of the year he restricts himself to Western Canada.

Once each month he is in Victoria to participate in a program organized by the local Registered Music Teachers.

I met him after hearing him at work last week in Victoria. In his soft Swiss-French accent he was explaining his approach to Beethoven. He played the Appassionata and then offered his comments.

He is able to communicate his love of the music to his teacher audience.

Rubakine is a man who supplements his comments with expressive gestures and almost invariably turns to the piano letting Beethoven illustrate the points first heard from the music.

It is easy to see how teachers might, in the pressure of handing out assignments and hearing many pupils, lose track of the nature of the wood from the density of the trees.

Rubakine primes away gently and precisely.

His comments are cogent and learned.

When he has completed the present session here he hopes to return with another program. This will include teachers actually playing works in the study periods so they may have the benefit of his and the other participants' analysis.

This, says Boris Rubakine, is of particular value to those preparing senior students.

He is able to dissect the difficult passages and offer advice on correcting fingering and technique.

The value for the teachers is immense, not only from this standpoint but also in building a wider repertoire.

The Victoria branch of the Registered Music Teachers must be commended for this effort in advancing their own further education. Boris Rubakine will not allow them to stagnate.

A recent suggestion contained in a letter to this newspaper by Thomas Tredaway is most commendable.

His point that the Victoria Symphony Society should establish a public relations committee is well taken.

Some effort should be made to bring the activities of the orchestra to a wider public so that the symphony can operate with a broader base of support.

The society makes no effort on its own behalf to tell its story except when it is hard up and canvassing for funds.

Possibly if they told what they are doing then more help might be volunteered.

Mr. Tredaway is perfectly correct. The formation of an active public relations committee is long, long overdue.

Don't miss the Victoria School Orchestra this afternoon in the McPherson Playhouse. They will offer the Slavonic Dances, Handel's Fastidious Shepherd and Mozart's Eine Kleine Nachtmusik. The concert starts at 2 p.m.

New Play Excites Bastion

'We Have Found New Playwright'

Patrick O'Neill, who writes the weekly Bookings column in the Daily Colonist, has been involved in theatrical activities for many years.

He has had four plays produced by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation. His most recent was The Great Canadian Fiddlehead (radio) on CBC Wednesday Night last September. Previous work was produced by CBC Montreal (two television plays) and a radio play on Montreal's radio.

Before coming to Victoria, Mr. O'Neill produced some of his own plays in Montreal and Courtenay for the same network.

The young playwright is a B.C. producer of the Dominion Drama Festival.

Festival Entry

Guild's Farce Opens Saturday

Victoria Theatre Guild's entry in the Dominion Drama Festival and a children's musical both open Saturday.

At 10 a.m. and at 2 p.m. Bastion Theatre's Young Company will present The Red Shoes, which will be repeated for morning and afternoon matinees Feb. 5, at McPherson Playhouse.

Saturday night, 8:15, Langham Court, months of intensive rehearsal will be eliminated by the opening performance of Victoria Theatre Guild's One-Way Pendulum.

FESTIVAL HOPE

The N.F. Simpson farce, directed by Bert Farr, runs to Feb. 5, and stars Ken Bostock, John Dren and Evans Murray.

During the run it will be seen by an adjudicator for pre-adjudication in the Dominion Drama Festival.

If the adjudicator likes the group's work in this production, they will go on to the Metro Theatre Centre in Vancouver for the B.C. Regional DDF festival.

The winner of that show will be back in Victoria at the end of the season to compete in the national Dominion Drama Festival at the McPherson.

FINGERS CROSSED

Mr. Farr won't say it out loud, but both he and the cast know they need adjudicators who know something about, and appreciate, the work of Simpson.

This English playwright has created sidesplitting farce while conveying subtle messages on the conduct of human beings.

And the main conduct that has come through in his plays is the lack of real communication between people.

Thus, the dialogue between the characters on stage is a mixed-up, funny, caricature of

Julie Holds Beachhead As—

British Girls Launch Invasion of Hollywood

By CHARLES CHAMPLIN

HOLLYWOOD (LAT) — Last year having been the year of the British males—Burton, O'Toole, Courtenay, Stamp, Caine, ad infinitum—it would have been only fitting that this should be the year of some other island, subcontinent or political entity.

Alas, it is not to be. Only the sex has changed. This looks to be the year of the British females. Julie Andrews had, of course, landed and seized a large beachhead.

Now the second wave is landing or has landed.

Julie Christie, who lit up the screen with unprecedented warmth in Billy Liar, has with Darling and Dr. Zhivago become the hottest feminine property in the business.

With The Collector most particularly, Samantha Eggar overnight became another very important property.

With Goldfinger and opposite Hugh O'Brian in the forthcoming Ten Little Indians, Shirley Eaton emerges as an uncharacteristically sexy English rose.

Honor Blackman in Goldfinger, Life at the Top and momentarily in Marwyn Levy's Moment to Moment is shaping up as a kind of trans-channel Jacqueline Bisset.

PREFERS PEANUTS

On the strength of The VIPs and Young Cassidy, Maggie Smith is ready for international stardom now, although she exasperatingly elects to emote for peanuts at Sir Laurence Olivier's National Theatre in London.

There are several more among them. Susan Hampshire, a willowy, brown-eyed blonde whose success in Paris in August, made in French with Charles Aznavour, is playing to capacity and fine reviews in Paris but has not yet been seen in North America.

SURPRISES

England has never lacked for fine actresses and the conspicuous exports ahead of Miss Andrews include Greer Garson and Deborah Kerr. But the present flowering of English stardom has rather surprised even the English.

What the new girls share with the menfolk is the expertise at their craft born of long apprenticeship, which has included serving galleons of tea in scruffy provincial repertory companies and smiling gamely through films so bad the press agents issued official denials instead of publicity releases.

SEXY AND ALIVE

What the new girls also share with the British acting menfolk, but not with most of the English actresses who preceded them, is a splendidly continental animal magnetism. They are sexy and alive.

It is significant, in fact, that the new breed could only have come out of a new Britain, whatever that means. And it means, among other things, a Britain far more closely attuned to the continent and a Britain kicking over the old social restraints, the old reserve, the old processes of watering down whatever threatened to become artistically vivid.

INCREDIBLE

"The writer's feeling for language is incredible to me," said Mr. Manning. "Even the play's rapid-fire exchanges combine elements of poetry and a sense of music rare among contemporary playwrights."

He said Three Parts Benedict, which has a cast of seven (plus a live pig), "has a kind of vitality and ribaldry of the Elizabethan era."

Several readings of the play have been held by actors of the company. When the cast is complete, rehearsals will begin, probably after The Boy Friend production early next month.

WIDE APPEAL

Mr. Manning will direct the production, with Helen Simpson, Bostock stage manager.

"This play," said Mr. Manning, "has its roots in theatre of the absurd; but rather than using the tricks of this very specialized form of theatre, the writer has taken the essential elements of satire, surprise and occasional horror, and created a world that can be enjoyed by a wide audience."

Seclusion Assured For Newlyweds

LONDON (Reuters) — Beatle George Harrison started married life Saturday behind a 14-foot brick wall, an electrically operated sliding door and two body guards with Liverpool

Harrison, son of a Liverpool bus conductor, is the third Beatle to marry. He met blonde Patti while filming A Hard Day's Night in March, 1964.

The 23-year-old lead guitarist of the mop-haired group was on honeymoon at his $50,000 bungalow in an exclusive London suburb with his bride, 21-year-old model Patti Boyd.

The seven-minute wedding at a registry office Friday was a quiet affair attended by a few friends, including the Liverpool group's manager, Brian Epstein, who was best man, and fellow Beatle Paul McCartney.

Famed Hotel Will Close

NEW YORK (AP) — When the last guest checks out at the end of the year the Astor Hotel will close down after 61 years and be pulled down to make way for a 40-story office building.

The hotel, one of Times Square's last ties with its elegant past, was sold to Sam Minskoff and Sons for about $10,500,000.

If folk music is dying, Victoria hasn't seen the obituary.

Places like the Dungeon are keeping the flame alive with weekly sessions.

The Dungeon is on campus, and is run by student Kevan Hull.

The place features groups like The Noneuch Trio, Dennis Donnelly, Roberta Veale and Grant Crittenden.

Members of the group are all originally from Nanaimo. Their debut was in the Village Coffeehouse, Qualicum, last summer. Playing at the Dungeon, as they did last night, they use a wide range of material from contemporary Bob Dylan songs to old English madrigals.

Also on the folk scene, rumor indicated THAT coffeehouse may again open downtown, but plans at the moment are a deep dark secret.

Ed Simpson-Baile has been named chairman of the folk people in Victoria.

Jerry Gossley is on a trip to Amsterdam, London, Ireland, and New York "searching for inspiration and material to ensure a fresh look for the 1966 edition of the Smile Show."

While in New York he is appearing on television and radio to perform and talk about Victoria and the Smile Show.

The show in New York is with Ralph Carroll, who saw the Smile Show three years ago.

Bastion Theatre's Royal Gambit isn't the only waterhole in the desert. Lady Smith produced the same play Friday and Saturday for pre-adjudication in the Dominion Drama Festival.

Two B.C. entries in the DDF have dropped out. West Vancouver Theatre Guild and Emerald Players, both in the Greater Vancouver area, planned to do original Canadian plays, but couldn't find the right casts.

Bastion Theatre officials got a shock when they read in the Colonist recently that on several municipal agendas was "a grant for Bastion Theatre."

The company officials didn't know anything about it, but were pleased to find University Women's Club had gone to bat for them. Councils asked for the grants did not make immediate decisions.

Modern Theatre, Profile in Action is the title of the Northwest Drama Conference at University of Oregon this year.

Among discussions Feb. 10-12 will be Government and the Arts, Innovations in Production, and Training Techniques.

Musicians union in Victoria is cracking down on some of the members who have been playing for below-scale pay.

Viet Cong Missed Martha

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Comedienne Martha Raye says she missed being trapped in a bloody Viet Cong battle at a remote South Viet Nam outpost by minutes.

"Our helicopter took off just before they attacked," said Martha on her return here from 2½ months of entertaining troops.

It was the 48-year-old comedienne's second tour in a year in Viet Nam, and her third war. The Second World War and Korea came before.

Spring Thaw has a new producer, some new actors, but much of the same material that has been used many times since the satirical revue was born in 1948.

While the show promises some new faces and some new scenes, much of what comes to Victoria this week has been a staple of the show.

Chile to Order New Freighters

SANTIAGO, Chile (Reuters)—The Chilean Inter-Ocean Navigation Company plans to order two 10,000-ton freighters in Japan or Brazil, initially to ply between here and Vancouver, a company spokesman announced.

The ships would later become part of a Latin-American joint fleet to serve North and South American ports, he said.

Heart Attack Kills Herbert Marshall

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Actor Herbert Marshall, 75, 50 years in show business, died Saturday of a heart attack.

The handsome actor led an adventurous life. He lost a leg during the First World War when he and Ronald Colman were in the 14th London Scots Regiment.

He was married five times. Three marriages ended in divorce; to model Lee Russell, actress Edna Best and model Molly Mailand. His fourth wife, ex-showgirl Boots Mallory, died.

In 1958, he married his fifth wife, Mrs. Dee Anne Kahmann, a department store buyer, in Los Angeles in 1960.

His movies included Secrets of a Secretary, Blonde Venus, The Dark Angel, A Bill of Divorcement, Razor's Edge, Duel in the Sun, Virgin Queen and Portrait in Smoke.

Messrs. Toone, Bryant, Cox and Curtis are urging "Why wait for spring—do it now."

This approach might be a necessity in the frozen East—but have you been out the last couple of Sundays?

The birds are singing, the forsythias buds are quivering, peonies are stretching their red fingers out of the ground, the pussy willows are purring and the daffs have fixed bayonets.

Tonight it will still be light at almost 5:30. We might be snowed upon before this gets into print, but there's hardly a job that couldn't be done right now. In fact, we're going to wash the car—right after we have a little nap.

Trustees Demand No More School Votes

NANAIMO—Island school trustees want to do away with school referendums. "No more referendums" became the policy aim of the island trustees in a meeting here Saturday.

The resolution came from the Nanaimo school board. The meeting will ask the B.C. School Trustees Association to ask the education department to get this policy incorporated into the Schools Act.

It was repercussions from last November when $1,200,000 building bylaw was defeated by taxpayers in Ladysmith district. Representing Ladysmith was Trustee Alex Smith, and he brought forward several arguments in favor of the resolution.

He maintained only one-third of the voting population have children of school age, leaving the vast majority with little or no concern in education, while at referendum time, well below 50 per cent of eligible voters turn out.

Only two provinces in the whole of Canada, he said, vote on building programs: B.C. and Manitoba, and in Manitoba only a simple majority is required.

"Many districts on the island are in the unhappy position of having two separate communities in the district. If one community objects then you might as well forget about it," Mr. Smith said.

This was the position in the Ladysmith district where Che-manus solidly turned down its last referendum.

Mr. Smith said at the start of the new term in September his district will have to rent four portable classrooms at a cost of $325 per month, and "We didn't have to get permission from the voter to spend this sort of money," he added.

At any gathering of school trustees, talk eventually turns to teachers' salaries, and Saturday was no different.

Retiring branch president Jim Campbell from the Gulf Islands district came up with an idea which he hopes will bring the same salary scale to all districts between Courtenay and Victoria. He wants to set up a negotiating team picked from island

Trustees which will be responsible for salary negotiations to the branch, which in turn will be responsible to the individual board.

The delegates accepted this idea in principle, and now have to sell their individual boards on the proposal.

Mr. Campbell said it made sense for the various boards to delegate salary negotiations to some kind of corporation, which they could control, in a similar manner to organizations set up by industry.

Ron Gray, B.C.T.A.'s director of public relations and research, explained a highly successful pilot project to recruit teachers for the 10 northern interior school boards.

Advertisements are being placed in magazines throughout the world outlining the needs and facilities of the area.

So far two ads have been placed in Sydney, Australia, and one in Oregon, and more than 200 replies have been received.

"We didn't expect to get this many, and we've not given any serious thought on what to do with any surplus," Mr. Gray said.

Mrs. A. I. Reader from the Sooke district asked the delegates if they "ever feel guilty-ridden stealing teachers from other countries. We should be training our own."

Carl Anshelm from the Alberni district defended the action and pointed out these teachers would probably go to other countries anyway.

The spring meeting of the branch will take place in Victoria toward the end of May.

A new executive was elected Saturday, which saw Mr. Anshelm become president succeeding Jim Campbell; John Porteous, Victoria School District, first vice-president; Bill Lerch, chairman of the Nanaimo board, second vice-president; and Mrs. Joan Sturdy, Gulf Islands Board, secretary-treasurer.

Students May Unite

A B.C. union of students may result from a conference being held at the University of Victoria this weekend.

More than 30 student leaders from 10 post-secondary schools are meeting to debate common problems. B.C.'s four universities, a junior college, four schools of nursing and the B.C. Institute of Technology are represented.

It is the first conference of its kind in this province. Organizers were Paul Williamson and Kathleen Harvey, president and secretary of the University of Victoria student council.

Today's discussion may produce a draft proposal for a provincial union of students, likely to be debated for months before any new student group is born.

Student autonomy occupied much of Saturday's talks in the Student Union Building. Autonomy varies widely in B.C. post-secondary schools, from the independent student councils and newspapers of the universities to the tight discipline exercised by the administration of nursing schools.

Formation of any provincial student union will largely depend on whether the weekend's talks produce enough common interests among the schools.

UBC delegate Mike Sommer, treasurer of his student council, administers a budget of more than $750,000. One student nurse reported that her council could not even establish a club without permission of the school of nursing.

Clubs-UBC has 120-occupy much extra-curricular time of university students. But Ken McLean, president of the student council at the B.C. Institute of Technology at Burnaby, said eight hours daily in class plus home study left no time for campus activities.

Formation of any provincial student union will largely depend on whether the weekend's talks produce enough common interests among the schools.

Union men and women across the country are aware of its importance, the paper says.

It is more remarkable, the Labor Statesman suggests, because "the said B.C. capital is noted for its small-and-large-c conservatism."

But the paper then proceeds to drop a clanger.

Company Pledges Fallout Program

By MARY TAYLOR

ALBERNI — MacPowell has promised a major effort to end fallout.

The company has told mayors of the Twin Cities it will institute a costly program immediately to cut down fly-ash, Mayor Les Hammer of Portland and Mayor Fred Bishop of Alberni made the announcement Saturday.

The mayors said: "Talks have been held with local mill management and also top officials from the firm's Vancouver headquarters, to express concern of the councils regarding the serious condition, the worst ever experienced."

"The company has emphasized it is also concerned, and after top-level discussions we have been informed immediate expensive steps are to be taken to substantially reduce and eventually almost eliminate the fly-ash problem." The technical details of this plan will be held in a public meeting in three or four days.

"In view of this action by the company, and as it is understood the company will have no fly-ash, engineers and other experts present at Sunday night's public meeting, it is felt little could be accomplished by civic representation."

Mayor Bishop said the mayors had been unable to decide earlier whether or not to attend the protest meeting, because they were awaiting word from the company.

The company made its promise late Saturday.

Scott Bucks Buck At Communist Meet

By JIM BRAMAN

Victoria lighthouse philosopher W. A. Scott's needle drew blood Saturday at a Communist meeting in Hollywood House.

Tim Buck, retired leader of the Canadian Communist party, was the main speaker at the meeting, and related an eyewitness account of his December stay in North Viet Nam.

LARGE AUDIENCE

Last night's audience of more than 100 overflowed the meeting room and many listened from the stairway.

A few young people were in evidence, but few stayed for the full meeting.

The Victoria philosopher described the listeners as "intolerant personified."

"HIS 'EM UP"

"Whenever I see an audience just sitting there soaking it all in, I want to get them stirred up and start them thinking," he claimed.

He did—with three questions. He asked Mr. Buck, "Wouldn't you agree this is an audience of the most uncritical yes-men you have ever addressed in Canada?"

"Would you not agree it is just as much an exercise of critical judgment to say yes, as to say no?"

His third question was, "Do you not think China would disown the lot of them?"

ABUSE HURLED

At this point a riled audience began to hurl abuse at Mr. Scott.

"I'LL HAMMER YOU"

"Keep quiet before I hammer you," one member threatened. "Oh, but you are a big guy," taunted Mr. Scott.

After the ruckus died down Mr. Buck answered the questions.

NO HIS ANSWER

A categorical no, was the answer to the first.

He answered the second question, but few heard him because the skirt of his pants drifted in from another room and drowned out Mr. Buck's answer.

STOP JOHNSON

Mr. Buck called on the audience to help "stop Johnson before it is too late."

A collection taken during the meeting brought $80.

After the meeting Mr. Scott, who returned from a visit to Red China last November, described himself as an Anglo-Chinese-Canadian, and Tim Buck as a fascist-minded communist.

Sheep Owner Hunts In America

SIDNEY ISLAND—Owner of more than 80 sheep missing from Sidney Island went hunting on American soil Friday, but came up with no clues.

Jack Todd, who was accompanied by RCMP on his trip to Friday Island, believes the sheep have been rustled and taken across the border.

MANY CALLS

Numerous phone calls have flowed in since announcement of a $1,000 reward for information. None have been helpful.

Mr. Todd spotted the sheep gone around Christmas time. He says there had also been thefts from other Gulf Islands.

REWARD

He said Friday the reward announcement was being circulated in the U.S. in the hope of information.

He also disclosed that the sheep missing from Sidney Island were marked with red dye behind the neck.

Toone's Success Labor Milestone

Current issue of The Labor Statesman, organ of the Vancouver Labor Council calls former labor executive A. W. Toone's election as mayor of Victoria "the most dramatic illustration of the growing successes of labor candidates in the municipal field."

Union men and women across the country are aware of its importance, the paper says.

It is more remarkable, the Labor Statesman suggests, because "the said B.C. capital is noted for its small-and-large-c conservatism."

Recall Exercise Successful

An exercise on emergency recall aboard HMCS Yukon this week met with great success, a naval spokesman said Saturday.

Within 90 minutes of recall, 92 per cent of the ship's company of 245 officers and men was mustered aboard and the ship put to sea on an exercise.

The naval spokesman said each ship's company was left to its own devices on a recall exercise.

Oak Bay Yields Spring

It took three tries to beat the wind at Oak Bay, but when we got out fishing with guide Howard Pepper and his son-in-law Bob McMillan we hit some fine winter spring salmon fishing.

Last Sunday we got four fighting springs, all over 10 pounds, well before lunch time and we released a number of keeper-size coho grise as well.

We got all our salmon between the end of the breakwater off the Oak Bay Marina and Golf Links Point and we weren't any more than 100 to 300 yards from the kelp beds along the shore at any time.

Teasers

Super Strip-Teaser and Minnow-Teaser lures caught all the fish and each of the four lines hooked a salmon.

We had wire line and planers at 50 and 75 feet on the outside lines and nylon line with six ounces at 100 feet and eight ounces at 75 feet on the inside lines.

Wife Taffy hooked a salmon on the lightest line which screamed off all but 25 feet of her line. We all thought she had hooked into a 20 to 30-pounder, but when it was hooked it turned out to be the biggest of the day, but only about 13 pounds.

That is the way those winter springs fight. That cold water seems to really pep up their energy.

Early Catch

We were on the water about 8 a.m. and almost as we arrived Joe Gilmour in a boat beside us was playing a fish.

By 8:30 a.m. we hooked into our first fish, off the 8th green, where we saw most of our action. From then on we hooked a fish at about half-hour intervals, almost on the identical runs.

We fished both sides of the flood tide with a change about 10:30. "We go by the Fulford Harbor tide table for Oak Bay waters," explained Pepper. "We find the tide change is one hour ahead for Oak Bay, but when daylight saving time comes in it is right in the last hour."

Best time to fish off the golf links is on the flood or badge

McMillan and Pepper with Oak Bay winter springs catch the ebb. In full ebb at trolling speed a boat moves backwards, explained McMillan. Only way to fish when would be to pull up gear, zoom back and then fish back with the tide.

When the tide ebbs they go to the Fiddle reef waters and fish cross tide.

Grise

But on Sunday when we tried that, we found the waters filled with grise between Cattle Point, Strongside Island and Fiddle Reef, but we hit into no salmon there. With big salmon around we weren't interested in grise fishing, so we packed it up shortly after noon.

McMillan used a three-quarter-size Super Strip-Teaser which he had cut down in an effort to match the needlefish. Pepper liked to use a fluorescent green Teaser as well as the clear plastic Teasers. They cut their own strip from frozen herring right on the boat.

Outdoors with Alec Merriman

They are continually attending to their lines to make sure the lures have the right action. "As the strip rolls in the water the last two or three inches should give quite a flutter," says Pepper.

Bend Them

"We bend the Teasers to fit the thumb. You must get a close roll. If the tail end flies away it is no good. Let the hook hang loose," explains McMillan.

Pepper is the official Oak Bay Marina guide in his own 27-foot launch which rents out with guide at $6 an hour for three people. McMillan sometimes helps him and between them they have a boat at Oak Bay, another at Brentwood, and a third for Cowichan Bay.

They have been fishing buddies at Brentwood and Cowichan Bay for many years, and when they moved to Oak Bay they brought wire line fishing to those waters.

"Wire line gets more fish, we use planers and can get the depth to catch the fish," explains Pepper.

At Bottom

"But other anglers use the nylon line and they get fish also," he explained.

"The winter springs are close to the bottom and you must get down to them," he explained. "But they use mainly nylon line for charter fishing, because many people can't handle a fish on wire line."

In the winter time they find the best fishing not too far from the boathouse.

The fishing waters for winter springs are from the Golf Links, past the Marina to Fiddle Reef, which is the lighthouse almost in front of the boathouse, by Jimmy Jones Island to Ten Mile Point and off the mouth of Cadboro Bay. It is between 40 and 55 feet deep all the way along the shore.

"Fish as close in to shore as you can go at that depth," advises McMillan.

"We fish about 100 yards away from the kelp," says Pepper.

Plugs Good

They use Strip-Teasers and Minnow Teaser mostly, but do use the Turnip plugs with good success at times.

Wine line and planer with about 75 feet of line and a shock absorber mounted to the planer before the nylon line is standard equipment. Then they have 15 to 25 feet of 35-pound test nylon to the swivel and four or five feet of 25-pound test nylon to the Teaser head.

Although many Oak Bay fishermen do, Pepper and McMillan never use flashers in the winter. They make their own planers out of arborite or plastic.

Herring

For the nylon lines they use six to 12 ounces of weight, 50-pound test line and about 25-pound test leader. They fish with about 125 feet of line with the weight eight to 10 feet from the swivel. They use six feet of leader to the Teaser head.

When cutting their strip they use both sides of the herring and find either side as good fishing as the other.

With minnows they put the hook in the side below the dorsal fin and get a bit of a bend, enough to give a tight roll.

"I troll as slowly as I can and zig-zag to keep one rod going a little faster than the other to change the bait speed," says Pepper.

He fishes a number of setups until he finds what the fish are taking.

Green

On dull, dark days he finds a fluorescent green Super Strip-Teaser works best. "I prefer the Super Strip for springs and coho. We find a Super troll just as well fast or slow," Pepper says.

He says The Gap and Discovery Light are good fishing grounds, "but in winter weather you don't really have to leave the Oak Bay waterfront."

Spring fishing has been good since November and Pepper expects it to remain good until March or April and maybe into May.

Pepper and McMillan always use a chart to guide their fishing. "It has been expensive on tackle to learn to fish these waters deep," says Pepper. "They find recorder reels almost essential equipment."

Early mornings and just before tide changes are best times for winter springs, the say.

Dean Tells Student Conference

More Ottawa Aid Needed To Bolster Universities

By BILL STAVDAL

Canada needs more federal participation in education, the University of Victoria's Dean Ronald Jeffels said Saturday.

He made the statement before a student conference while hailing last week's announcement of vastly-increased operating grants for universities by Ottawa.

"Regardless of what the BNA Act says, it's high time that Canada give more attention to planning of education on the federal level," said the university registrar and dean of student affairs.

"The British North America Act made education a provincial responsibility and preserve."

NOT ECONOMIC
"It's just not economic to have anything but national planning," Dean Jeffels said.

The soaring cost of building universities calls for co-ordination to avoid duplication of nearby schools, he said.

"More and more we have to think in terms of strategic planning of research centres."

DURING LUNCHEON

The dean spoke at a luncheon meeting of more than 30 student leaders from 10 B.C. centres of post-secondary education.

The raising of federal operating grants from $2 per capita to

Jeffels

$5 indicates federal recognition of the crises in higher education which Canadian universities have known of for years, he said.

"NAME AWARENESS"
"We are delighted to see that federally we have the same kind of awareness."

The biggest problem in post-secondary education is still the staffing of lecture rooms, he said.

ENROLLMENT TO DOUBLE

It takes between seven and 10 years to produce a professor, yet university enrollment is expected to double in the 60s, he said.

The dean said he was encouraged by B.C.'s curriculum revision in the public schools, which allowed flexibility in career choice and left the way open to more education.

"INTELLIGENT PLAN"
"This is a remarkably intelligent sort of plan to have," he said.

"The province of B.C. has displayed energy and imagination."

"I am convinced that the tertiary (university) phase of education is going to get close attention and support."

OPPOSES BARRIERS

Dean Jeffels told the students he was opposed to "artificial barriers" to higher education.

"The sole criterion for entry to any post-secondary institution should be the capacity of the student," he said.

Master Plan Needed

'Rally the Arts For Centre Downtown'

The Community Arts Council should rally the forces of the arts behind a master plan for a downtown arts centre and an appeal to the city or provincial government for funds.

This was the consensus of a symposium on "arts and the community" at the Phoenix Theatre at University of Victoria Saturday.

During a discussion period, the meeting was told from the floor that the city had already supported the arts with about $150,000 in grants and absorbing losses of theatre groups.

HARD-HEADED "They are hard-headed businessmen, but if they see a possible return — and it doesn't have to be in money — they'll listen to a reasonable and specific plan," the spokesman said.

Panel member Robin Wood of the Victoria School of Music agreed, and urged the arts council to seek representation from the city's myriad art groups and organize a presentation.

WANT BUILDING It was specifically suggested that the city hand over the Hecate building in Bastion Square to serve as rehearsal space and as a place where local graphic artists could show their work and sell it.

A FOCAL POINT "In Victoria, as far as the arts are concerned, there is just nowhere to go," another member of the audience said.

SUPPORT ITSELF "I rather suspect it could support itself through sales," he said.

During the panel discussion, Mr. Giofmarra said the Vic-

KITZBUHEL, Austria (AP) — Karl Schranz of Austria won the Hahnenkamm downhill ski race Saturday ahead of fellow-Austrian Stran Gerhard Nenz.

Constable Kenneth Horsman said about 15 teen-agers were at the party, including three juvenile girls. Excessive noise was coming from the house, he said.

McCrae refused the police entry to the house and one 18-year-old youth went outside and was subsequently arrested for being intoxicated in a public place.

"The accused came out shouting and swearing," Constable Horsman said. "He made an unsuccessful attempt to rescue the 18-year-old."

McCrae told Magistrate Harold Alder: "I didn't know about all this going on outside the house, though."

Magistrate Alder: "Situations of this sort are most disturbing and disgusting to the public."

Robert Seddon ducked and dodged among the traffic on Douglas early Saturday morning.

Seddon, 15, Lotus, pleaded guilty to dangerous driving and was fined $180. His licence was suspended for six months.

Prosecutor Walter Anderson said Seddon achieved speeds of up to 50 miles an hour. Within three blocks, he changed lanes seven times and did not use his signal lights.

Seddon drove in the right-hand-turn lane at one stage and then cut in front of the cars he had passed, Mr. Anderson said.

He narrowly avoided a collision with one car, and three other vehicles had to change direction to avoid being hit, court was told.

Seddon said: "I had a few friends in the car. I hadn't had it very long. I was showing off."

Actor-director Tony Nicholson said Victoria "is not far behind other centres in sophistication and knowing what is good in art."

Constable Kenneth Horsman said about 15 teen-agers were at the party, including three juvenile girls. Excessive noise was coming from the house, he said.

McCrae refused the police entry to the house and one 18-year-old youth went outside and was subsequently arrested for being intoxicated in a public place.

"The accused came out shouting and swearing," Constable Horsman said. "He made an unsuccessful attempt to rescue the 18-year-old."

McCrae told Magistrate Harold Alder: "I didn't know about all this going on outside the house, though."

Magistrate Alder: "Situations of this sort are most disturbing and disgusting to the public."

Robert Seddon ducked and dodged among the traffic on Douglas early Saturday morning.

Seddon, 15, Lotus, pleaded guilty to dangerous driving and was fined $180. His licence was suspended for six months.

Prosecutor Walter Anderson said Seddon achieved speeds of up to 50 miles an hour. Within three blocks, he changed lanes seven times and did not use his signal lights.

Seddon drove in the right-hand-turn lane at one stage and then cut in front of the cars he had passed, Mr. Anderson said.

He narrowly avoided a collision with one car, and three other vehicles had to change direction to avoid being hit, court was told.

Seddon said: "I had a few friends in the car. I hadn't had it very long. I was showing off."

Former minister of external affairs Howard Green will be in Victoria for an 8 p.m., Tuesday panel discussion in St. John Ambulance Hall, 941 Pandora, on Should Canada

Join the Organisation of American States. Other speakers at public meeting sponsored by World Federalists of Canada will be Professor C. S. Barchill, Royal Roads, Dr. J. C. M. Ogilby, University of Victoria, and Tony Keble, University of Victoria student.

Undergraduate student fees for the year 1963-64 averaged $480, he said.

He estimated average summer earnings per student at $710.

With a federal grant of $1,000, "such an arrangement would provide all students with the cash required to attend university."

Cambodia Hits Thai Village

BANGKOK (UPI)—Cambodia has shelled a Thai village on the Gulf of Siam and deployed four battalions of troops offshore as it planning an invasion, Thai authorities charged today.

The village of Haadlek, near the town of Klong Yai, was the target of the attack. It was the second attack on the Haadlek area in three weeks.

Mr. H. A. Hampson, President of All-Canadian Group Distributors Limited, is pleased to announce the appointment of Mr. W. G. Fergie to the Board of Directors, A.C.G.D.

Mr. Fergie is a member of the Power Corporation group of companies, and is the nation-wide distributor of the very successful All-Canadian Funds with assets of over $94,000,000.00.

Mr. Fergie is well known throughout the Province, having managed the company's British Columbia operation for the past four years.

$1,000 Student Grant Urged

An annual grant of $1,000 paid directly to each university student in Canada by the federal government was proposed Saturday by Professor Gideon Rosenbluth of the department of economics at UBC.

Such a grant, he told the Fabian Forum of B.C. at its weekend school on financing education held in the Sidney Hotel, would provide equality of opportunity and act as a protection against the danger of provincial government control.

"The danger of excessive dependence on provincial governments must be stressed," said Dr. Rosenbluth.

CONTINUED FEES
To further ensure independence from excessive provincial financing, the speaker favored continuation of student fees.

Undergraduate student fees for the year 1963-64 averaged $480, he said.

He estimated average summer earnings per student at $710.

With a federal grant of $1,000, "such an arrangement would provide all students with the cash required to attend university."

Dr. Rosenbluth criticized the Bladen Commission report with "its emphasis on loans and means tests" as "second-best solutions."

Repayment of loans hit a graduate student at a time when he was starting to establish a household and his line of work.

"Obnoxious" was the term he used.

professor gave to means tests as a method of assistance.

The Rosenbluth proposal for generous grants to students could be a policy for the future "without fear of rising taxes."

A University of Victoria economist, Paul A. Phillips, told the forum that higher education was estimated to have contributed a 25 per cent increase to the Canadian economy.

"In the United States, the contribution is perhaps 40 per cent."

O'NEAL TO SPEAK
The 24 delegates also heard from Norman K. Preston, B.C. Teachers' Federation chairman of the committee on education finance on Problems of Public School Finance.

The speaker today will be E. P. O'Neal, secretary-treasurer of the B.C. Federation of Labor, on Vocational Training and Retraining.

Further "schools" are planned by the Fabian Forum for next September, and possibly this summer, said financing education school director Paul Phillips.

"Our purpose is to help those interested in social and economic policy to find solutions in rational, rather than in political terms," said Mr. Phillips.

Hunt Again Double Winner In City Badminton Meet

Bob Hunt is still the king of Victoria badminton, and without a serious challenger.

Hunt won the Victoria men's singles championship for the ninth time, the last six in a row, last night when he defeated Richard O'Neill in the finals, 15-1, 15-3.

JUNT A HABIT

And Hunt teamed with Ed Hedley for still another victory in the men's doubles, defeating veterans George Lane and Eric Hibbertson, 15-4, 15-12.

It was the eighth time in nine years and the third time in a row that the Hunt-Hedley combination had won. Their victory skinn was temporarily halted by Lane and Hibbertson in 1963.

Gillian Thomas and Jean Massey were also double winners last night. Miss Thomas defeated Miss Massey, 11-6, 11-1, in the ladies' singles final, then teamed with her defeated opponent to best the mother-daughter pairing of Muriel and Pat Knott, 15-8, 15-5, in the doubles final.

Miss Massey teamed with Lloyd Park to score a bit of an upset in the mixed doubles by defeating defending champions Diane Godfrey and Hedley, 15-8, 15-5.

CHAMPS UPSET

Another upset was scored in the men's veteran doubles when Lane and Bob McMurchie, six-time champions who had a three-year unbeaten streak going, were destroyed by Jim Wells and Hibbertson.

Kay Woodland and Joyce Folbigg won the women's doubles from Elsie Radford and Ileana Beale and Muriel Knott and Lane defeated Jim and Rene Wells in the mixed doubles.

Men's handicap doubles were won by Peter Isbister and Frank Brix, who bested Dave Bishop and John Meija in the final.

The women's doubles saw Leslie Woodland and Wendy Aaronson defeat Lorna McLean and Carol Meija and Mrs. Radford and Bill Powell teamed to win the mixed doubles from Mrs. McLean and Meija.

Not Many

First entry

First entry was already on hand for Daily Colonist Victoria's first badminton tournament, starting at 8 p.m. on Saturday night, when entry-taking started yesterday. Four Vs are a family team led by Marg Vickery and including some George, second from top, and Gordon and daughter-in-law Dot. (Wm. E. John)

Financial Crisis Endangers Canadian Davis Cup Entry

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada will not be able to send a team to the annual Davis Cup tennis competition this year unless the Canadian Lawn Tennis Association receives a grant from the National Council on Physical Fitness and amateur sport.

National President James R. Macken of Vancouver said the association's annual meeting Saturday the organization is in the midst of a "critical financial situation."

He said the association had already submitted a request for the fitness council grant of $27,000, which has been given in other years, but the council had asked for a new set of detailed information.

"We won't know for sure what the federal government will give us until the end of March, and we may have to play competition tennis the first of May."

TO PLAY IN EUROPE

The association was notified this week that Canada has been accepted to play for the first time in the European division of the Davis Cup competition, rather than the North American division it has played in the past.

Canada is scheduled to play Finland May 1 at a place still to be decided. But Association officials said they hope to have the first match put off until May 10.

"May first is awfully early in the season for us to muster a team," said one member. "Our young players will still be in university the end of April."

LOSE SPONSOR
The association's financial situation is made more precarious by the fact that Pepsi-Cola of Canada Ltd. has withdrawn its annual sponsoring grant of $8,000.

The money, which for the last eight years has backed the Canadian junior tennis championships held in Ottawa, will leave a large gap in the organization's budget.

NEED $5,000
Fred Bolton of Vancouver, the association's honorary secretary, said it would take a minimum of $5,000 to send a four-man team to the Davis Cup finals and three of Canada's top women tennis players to the women's counterpart, the Federation Cup competition which is to be held in Italy this year.

"If we don't get that grant from the government, we can't field a team," said Bolton.

The association was pleased that Canada has a chance to enter the European competition.

"Usually we play Mexico or the United States in the Davis Cup—two of the strongest tennis nations in the world. In Europe, we have a chance of going two or three rounds and it will give our team lots of good experience."

MONTREAL—British Columbia stars were strongly represented yesterday in the list of charter members of the Canadian Lacrosse Hall of Fame, to be built in New Westminster as one of the city's centennial projects.

Charter members are split in three categories—builders, field lacrosse members and box lacrosse players.

HUME NAMED
Among the builders are Fred Hume, Con Jones, Jim McConaghy of Vancouver and Dan McKenzie of New Westminster. Other are Dr. W. G. Beers, Dr. W. A. Daffoe, Gene Dopp, Rudy Glauser, Mike Kelly, Joe Leidy, Pat MacDonald, Jim Murphy, Jack McDonald and Fred Waghorn.

B.C. members in the field lacrosse players list include Jim Clifford, Alex "Dad" Turnbull and Clifford "Doughy" Spring, all of New Westminster. The B.C. box lacrosse players are Bill Anthony, Alf Dwyer, Jim Douglas and Bill Wilkes Sr., of New Westminster; Salmonbellies, Henry Baker, the North Shore Indian star; Bill Dickinson, with Burrards and Salmonbellies; and Bill Isaacs of North Shore.

WOOTTON THERE
Eastern box lacrosse stars named included the fabulous Peterborough goaltender, Lloyd Wootton.

Most impressive of the latter was set by Vancouver's Elaine Turner. Miss Turner set a native record in the 100-yard butterfly for girls 13 and 14. Miss Turner's time of 59.6 seconds was also 1.4 seconds faster than the U.S. record set in 1963.

Miss Tanner also clocked 1:02.1 in the 100-yard backstroke for a Canadian senior record. Louise Kennedy of London, Ont., swimming in the 15-17 age group, set a Canadian senior mark in the 200-yard freestyle with a 2:04.5 time.

Jim Shaw of Toronto swam the 100-yard backstroke in 56.8 seconds in the 15-17 category for another Canadian senior record. Another competition is scheduled for Toronto today.

(No report was received on Victorians Jim Gollmer and Vito Dunford who were picked for the Canadian team.)

Esquimalt midget hockey all-stars conceded an early first period goal and then came roaring back to beat North Vancouver, 6-2, at the Esquimalt Sports Centre yesterday.

Getting outstanding goalkeeping from Ron Grahame, Esquimalt was ahead, 3-1, at the end of the first period on goals by Len Hesjedal, Glen Blake and Steve Andrejick.

Steve Mainprize, Gerry Adolph and Dave Mick scored Esquimalt's other goals.

Blades Head Back Home Sure They Were Bilked

By JIM TAYLOR

In the eyes of Bunker Hill, Victoria Maple Leafs were winners by inches at Memorial Arena last night, and in this case his eyes have it no matter how many others say nay.

Milan Marcetta's breakaway goal with 41 seconds left gave the Leafs a 3-2 victory over Los Angeles. Blades, built them a five-point lead in the Western Hockey League, and proved again that when you're a loser nothing ever goes right.

WHO WAS RIGHT?

And it was a call—or, rather, the lack of a call—by Hill that made Marcetta's goal legal and sent the Blades into a disbelieving rage.

The goal, Marcetta's 22nd of the season, came on a play the Blades insist was offside. The puck went from Fred Hucul in his own zone, to Bob Barlow at the Victoria blue line and out to Marcetta over the red line. A deke, push, and the puck was past Jack Norris. And then it started.

LOST THIS ONE, TOO

Blades claim that Barlow was inside the blue line when he touched the puck. Hill said no. The Blades backed referee Lloyd Gilmour into the boards, and for a good five minutes captain Marc Boileau followed him around the ice, screaming.

"Ask him, damn it, ask him," Boileau yelled, pointing to the other linesman, John Smith. Put the goal stand, and the Blades eventually skated off the ice, losers again.

And you had to shed a tear or two for Jack Norris, who made 46 stops and temporarily lost his job.

When you play goal for the Blades, you stay in until you lose, and with this team that doesn't make for steady employment. But if Norris doesn't play next game, he should sue for non-support.

The Blades defence was atrocious. The Leafs outplayed them from here to there, could have had half a dozen other goals, then got the tying one on a break bounce and the winner on a disputed play.

Claude Labrosse's second goal of the season, set up nicely by Marcetta with the game 2-37 old, put the Leafs ahead. War-horse Hynes tied it before the period ended, and Willie O'Ree streaked in for as pretty a goal as you're likely to see at 16:50 of the second period to send the Blades ahead.

ALMOST MADE IT
Norris was hot—19 stops hot in that second period—and he made that lead stand up until 3:46 of the third period.

The Aut Erickson skied from the blue line while partially screened by Mike Labadie. The puck landed on its edge in front of Norris, and bounced over his shoulder.

Each club sweated out a penalty. Norris made a good save off John Slevator from a faceoff, and overtime seemed a safe bet. But in the last minute the Blades played every man up, and they paid for it with Marcetta's goal.

THE BEST ONE
O'Ree's goal came on a long pass from Camille Bedard, a great shift to elude Fred Hucul, and a fine shot. It was the prettiest of the night. They also got the best goaltending, but what they didn't get was points.

Marvel Pelletier put it best, sitting in the press box watching his fellow Blades blow another one.

"When you're a winner," he said, "these things don't happen. When you're a loser, they always happen."

It was as good an epitaph as any.

FIRST PERIOD
1. Victoria, Labrosse (Marcetta, Barlow) 2:07.
2. Los Angeles, Hynes (O'Ree, Dechamps) 14:30.
Penalties—Erickson (V) 12:34, Young (LA) (misconduct) 19:41.

SECOND PERIOD
3. Los Angeles, O'Ree (Bedard, Dechamps) 18:00.
Penalty—Labrosse (V) 12:18.

THIRD PERIOD
4. Victoria, Erickson (Labadie) 3:46.
Penalties—Marcetta (Barlow, Hynes) 19:18, Wilkes (LA) 4:04, Erickson (V) 9:08.
Goals: 3-2 V, 2-3 LA.
Attendance—5,237.

One of Many That Missed

Los Angeles goalkeeper Jack Norris had to contend with 49 shots on goal and worry about dozens of others that missed last night. This was one of misses as puck goes behind goal with

Chinooks Given Surprise But League Lead Was Safe

CYO Saints didn't make the inter-city junior men's basketball playoffs, but they handed the Victoria Chinooks, league champs for the third season in a row and defending Canadian title-holders, a king-sized kick in the morale as the league program wound up last night.

LAST-SECOND

The Saints ripped Chinooks, 55-53, on a last-second lay-up. It was Chinooks' second loss of the season and left them tied with UBC Jaycees at the head of the final standings. But Chinooks got the championship on the strength of their two wins against UBC.

Chinooks meet fourth-place North Shore Mountaineers in the first game of the best-of-three semi-finals in Victoria Saturday. North Shore squeezed into the playoffs last night on the strength of UBC's 85-61 victory over fifth-place Kerrisdale. The floor in the first half (they trailed, 22-17, at halftime), got 15 points from Ron Bowker. CYO—Hutchinson 8, Borovich 14, Williams 6, Collins 7, Kohn 18. Total: 55. CHINOOKS—Rubbings 8, Hunter 2, Frampton 9, Birch 2, Jackson 17, Spaven 2, Gregory 2, Bowler 13, Brunswell 2. Total: 53.

Mountaineers lost, 71-56, to Vancouver YMCA last night. Victoria Vikings in an inter-collegiate hockey game Saturday.

UBC jumped to a 2-0 lead in the first period on goals by Miles Desharnais and Ron Morris before, Victoria made the scoreboard with three quick goals early in the second period. Mickey McDowall lead the UBC attack with two goals while Keith Clements and Len Bousque rounded out the scoring for UBC.

Terry Foreman, Jim Wilson, Glen Harper and Ted Skarsian scored for the losers.

Vikings Lose To UBC In Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP)—University of B.C. Thunderbirds broke a 3-3 deadlock at the end of the second period and took a 6-4 victory over University of Victoria Vikings in an inter-collegiate hockey game Saturday.

UBC jumped to a 2-0 lead in the first period on goals by Miles Desharnais and Ron Morris before, Victoria made the scoreboard with three quick goals early in the second period. Mickey McDowall lead the UBC attack with two goals while Keith Clements and Len Bousque rounded out the scoring for UBC.

Terry Foreman, Jim Wilson, Glen Harper and Ted Skarsian scored for the losers.

Barons Bombard Leg-Weary Totes

CLEVELAND (AP)—Seattle Totens, playing their fifth game in seven days on a road trip which took them from Los Angeles to Baltimore to Pittsburgh to Rochester to Cleveland, took a 6-1 thumping from Cleveland Barons Saturday night.

The Western Hockey League club, which plays in Buffalo Sunday and in Hershey Wednesday before completing its tour of the American Hockey League, got the first goal and then all but collapsed.

Barons fired 63 shots at Jim McLeod, who performed outstandingly in managing to get in front of 57. McLeod didn't yield until the last period, when the Barons got five of 24 shots past him.

City Team Still Has Way to Go

Victoria Hawks Chiefs, using newcomer Glenn Westfall, still weren't strong enough for Dave Way and Vancouver Ex-Bys' at Conrad Junior High School last night.

Way scored 28 points as Ex-Bys beat the Chiefs, 76-58. Westfall, a U.S. navy reservist who Chiefs hope will make his home in Victoria when he leaves the reserve in September, got 11 points. Darrell Lormer was Chiefs' high scorer with 15.

Ex-Bys led 39-18 at the half and Way got 17 of his points after the break. Of his 28 points, 12 came from the free-throw line.

SCORERS:
EX-BYS—Bedford 4, Todorovich 4, Way 28, Davidson 15, Hunter 13, Carter 4. Total: 76.
HAIDA CHIEFS—Lormer 15, Westfall 11, Laidlaw 10, Gregory 12, Patterson 9. Total: 58.

Records Tumble At Swim Meet

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—A total of 22 Canadian open and native records fell here yesterday in the 13th annual Canadian-American dual swim meet, won by the Americans, 278-159, for the 10th year in a row.

American swimmers lowered the best Canadian times in 15 events, to establish Canadian open marks, while Canadians set seven native records.

BEST ONE
Most impressive of the latter was set by Vancouver's Elaine Turner. Miss Turner set a native record in the 100-yard butterfly for girls 13 and 14. Miss Turner's time of 59.6 seconds was also 1.4 seconds faster than the U.S. record set in 1963.

Miss Tanner also clocked 1:02.1 in the 100-yard backstroke for a Canadian senior record. Louise Kennedy of London, Ont., swimming in the 15-17 age group, set a Canadian senior mark in the 200-yard freestyle with a 2:04.5 time.

Jim Shaw of Toronto swam the 100-yard backstroke in 56.8 seconds in the 15-17 category for another Canadian senior record. Another competition is scheduled for Toronto today.

(No report was received on Victorians Jim Gollmer and Vito Dunford who were picked for the Canadian team.)

Boxla Hall of Fame Gets First Members

MONTREAL—British Columbia stars were strongly represented yesterday in the list of charter members of the Canadian Lacrosse Hall of Fame, to be built in New Westminster as one of the city's centennial projects.

Charter members are split in three categories—builders, field lacrosse members and box lacrosse players.

HUME NAMED
Among the builders are Fred Hume, Con Jones, Jim McConaghy of Vancouver and Dan McKenzie of New Westminster. Other are Dr. W. G. Beers, Dr. W. A. Daffoe, Gene Dopp, Rudy Glauser, Mike Kelly, Joe Leidy, Pat MacDonald, Jim Murphy, Jack McDonald and Fred Waghorn.

B.C. members in the field lacrosse players list include Jim Clifford, Alex "Dad" Turnbull and Clifford "Doughy" Spring, all of New Westminster. The B.C. box lacrosse players are Bill Anthony, Alf Dwyer, Jim Douglas and Bill Wilkes Sr., of New Westminster; Salmonbellies, Henry Baker, the North Shore Indian star; Bill Dickinson, with Burrards and Salmonbellies; and Bill Isaacs of North Shore.

WOOTTON THERE
Eastern box lacrosse stars named included the fabulous Peterborough goaltender, Lloyd Wootton.

Most impressive of the latter was set by Vancouver's Elaine Turner. Miss Turner set a native record in the 100-yard butterfly for girls 13 and 14. Miss Turner's time of 59.6 seconds was also 1.4 seconds faster than the U.S. record set in 1963.

Miss Tanner also clocked 1:02.1 in the 100-yard backstroke for a Canadian senior record. Louise Kennedy of London, Ont., swimming in the 15-17 age group, set a Canadian senior mark in the 200-yard freestyle with a 2:04.5 time.

Jim Shaw of Toronto swam the 100-yard backstroke in 56.8 seconds in the 15-17 category for another Canadian senior record. Another competition is scheduled for Toronto today.

(No report was received on Victorians Jim Gollmer and Vito Dunford who were picked for the Canadian team.)

Esquimalt midget hockey all-stars conceded an early first period goal and then came roaring back to beat North Vancouver, 6-2, at the Esquimalt Sports Centre yesterday.

Steve Mainprize, Gerry Adolph and Dave Mick scored Esquimalt's other goals.

league standings Saturday by defeating Burnaby Villa 3-1. The victory was the 11th in 12 games this season for the undefeated Firefighters and gave them 23 points.

BIRDS DROP BACK
Second place UBC Thunderbirds lost ground in their bid for the title by going down to a 2-1 defeat at the hands of Westminster Royals in a game at UBC.

In a third PCHL game, North Shore Luckies moved out of the league cellar with their first victory of the season — a 1-0 win over St. Andrews at North Vancouver.

The win gave North Shore six points and moved the club one point ahead of St. Andrews.

Rangers' New Bounty-Hunter Bit Over-Eager in First Try

The bounty that New York Rangers put on the head of Boston tough guy Teddy Green is already running into money, but the results aren't justifying the expense.

Reggie Fleming of the Rangers took out after Green in his own subtle fashion yesterday. When the battle was over Green had a minor penalty and Fleming two minors, a misconduct and a game misconduct — the latter costing an automatic $75. The incident occurred yesterday in Boston, where the Bruins put together a two-game winning streak by beating New York, 5-3, moving them to within four points of the fifth-place Rangers in the National Hockey League.

Later, Detroit Red Wings got their 19th victory in 24 games (they're unbeaten with seven wins and a tie in 1966) by blanking Montreal Canadiens, 3-0, and Toronto Maple Leafs shut out Chicago, 4-0.

HE TRIED

But the real battle was in the netting regions, between Boston and New York.

Ex-Bruin Fleming, playing his first game against Boston since being traded to the Rangers, apparently decided to try for the reward his new employers had put on Green.

They tangled at 16:54 of the second period, Fleming getting two minors and Green one. Fleming argued the call with Frank Udvari, getting a misconduct, then attempted to whack Green as the two entered the penalty box.

ARM WAS BAD

Fleming missed Green and hit linesman Brian Sopp with his stick. Sopp suffered a gash over his left eye and retired for five stitches as Udvari Montreal's J. C. Tremblay passed the puck right on his stick.

NOW FIVE GAMES

Johnny Bower recorder his second shutout of the season in Toronto, where Dave Keon scored two goals, including the winner. Frank Mahovlich and Bob Pulford got the others as the Hawks had their winless streak extended to five games. Montreal plays the Hawks in Chicago tonight while the Leafs are at Boston and the Rangers at Detroit.

City Rink Reaches B.C. Final

VANCOUVER — Fifteen-year-old Jim Armstrong and his Equilmalt rink of Gord Paterson, Keith Hecy and Dave Vyner Saturday advanced to the provincial high school curling final with an easy 11-3 win over Westminster's Tom Kirse in a playoff.

Armstrong forced a playoff by defeating Carl Wallace of West Vancouver, 4-4, after splitting his first two games in the round-robin final.

The Equilmalt rink now goes to the provincial final in Kamloops on Feb. 17 and 18 to play for the chance to carry on to the Canadian final as British Columbia champions.

Tie for Cup

Mrs. T. Christie and Mrs. Mike Pryce tied for first place in the Uplands Golf Club Simple Cup competition with net 78.

Mrs. R. Merryweather and Mrs. Joan Lawson each shot net 79 in the "B" division. Mrs. Merryweather winning for a better score on the back nine. "C" division winner was Mrs. R. Powell, net 80.

Wings Plucked By Cold Thieves

MONTREAL (CP) — The Detroit Red Wings' jerseys for last night's National Hockey League game against Montreal Canadiens were stolen from the Forum early Saturday, said Ron Canera, publicity director for the Red Wings.

A total of 56 jerseys were stolen, including 25 red jerseys used in Friday night's Detroit Red Wing-Quebec NHL Oldtimers game, with 25 white jerseys for tonight's game.

The Red Wings will borrow a set of white jerseys from the Hamilton Red Wings of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series for tonight's game, he said. "We may not have the same numbers, though."

"Likely for us the Hamilton Red Wings are in town to play a game against the Montreal Junior Canadiens Sunday night."

"We have a set of red jerseys back in Detroit which we'll use for Sunday night's game against New York Rangers in Detroit, but there may still be problems about numbering."

course. But he hit the shots to take a three-stroke lead going into today's final round of the 72-hole tournament.

While most of the big names were playing at Pebble Beach for Crosby's video production, Geiberger turned in his torrid round at Cypress Point, one of the other two courses played in this event.

FEW SAW IT

Thousands swarmed the gallery to watch Arnold Palmer shoot a 73 and 213 total at Pebble Beach while only several hundred among the overall crowd of 33,500 saw Geiberger. Just a handful saw Bill Marlandale of Jacksonville, Tex., grab second place with a 69 and 212.

Don Massengale, the Texan who held the midway lead, slipped to a 76 and his 213 total. Tony Lema remained in contention with a 72 at Pebble Beach and a 214 total.

At 215 came Jack Rule with a third-round 70 and Bob Goalby with a 67.

STUMBLED AT PEBBLE

The six-foot-2½-inch Geiberger, who scales only 165 pounds, led the first round with a 68 at Monterey and followed with a 74 at Pebble Beach. Although there was careful screening to put the outstanding golfer before the TV cameras, he was overlooked. But he'll draw star billing today.

Palmer missed two chances for birdies on the final holes as he headed a 73.

Palmer finished his round with the comment: "These greens are the fastest I've ever seen. I've been working on my game and it still needs some sharpening."

Palmer, however, has already won the Los Angeles Open this year. Billy Casper, who won at San Diego last Sunday, carded a 73 and 218 total.

KNUDSON AT 220

George Knudson was top Canadian after three rounds. His 74-70-76 for 220 was 11 strokes off the pace. Al Balding was another three strokes back after a 76 Saturday.

Everybody Regrets It But Says It's Inevitable

Sweden Plans Republic When Old King Dies

Gustav VI

By RON POULTON

LONDON (TNS) — In the vast old palace where Sweden's legislators sit there is a move afoot to create a republic without dethroning a king.

It now seems inevitable that Gustav VI Adolf, now 83, will be the last of his line to reign; and the Bernadottes, like the Hapsburgs, the Hohenzollerns and the Bourbons, will be consigned to gilded retirement.

Crown Prince Carl Gustav, born April 30, 1946, grandson of the king, will stand aside, severing a line of succession established by the Constitution of 1809.

Tremors

And inter-related royal houses will shake to the tremors of change all the way back to Buckingham Palace because Gustav VI's late Queen was born Lady Louise Mountbatten, Princess Margaret of Connaught.

The inevitability of all this was signalled after Sweden's parliament opened Jan. 10. Thirty-two members of the governing Social Democratic Party moved that a committee be appointed to study means of turning Sweden into a republic with a "democratically elected president."

The resolution is now being debated. No one is overly happy about it, even though only one party — the Conservatives — are expected to oppose it.

Admired

The trouble is no one wants to offend the man who is widely admired as the scholar king.

The authors of the resolution like him as much as anyone. But they are impelled by the belief that Sweden, one of the world's most progressive countries, must keep pace with the times — and the times are not monarchical.

A government spokesman hastened to tell me: "No one intends to dethrone His Majesty."

But he is getting old and it was decided that the time had come when something must be done."

With masterful understatement, he added: "We have not hurried. An eventual republic has been part of the Social Democrats' program since it was formed in 1889."

No Haste

As if to remove any lingering suspicions that unseemly haste was being employed, he expected the debate to continue until March. "And don't forget it is only a motion asking for a study, and the study could go on for years."

The delicacy of all this is plain to those who have studied Sweden's prime minister, Tage Erlander, leader of the Social Democrats. It is common knowledge he favors the motion. But neither he nor his ministers appear on its list of sponsors.

Death First

All parties to the motion, in fact, exude the hope that they will wait a long time for a republic. It will not happen until the king dies — and none intends that it should.

Hope is encouraged because King Gustav, who has reigned since 1950, is the third of his line to rule past 80. His father was 92 when he died.

Tradition, too, is hard to sever for the passive and sensible Swedes. Sweden has been a monarchy for centuries. Its reminders are found from the 719-room palace that rests in the heart of Stockholm to the seemingly insignificant mound known as Asize Hill, two miles from the village of Gamla Uppsala where pagan kings traditionally addressed their subjects.

Inevitable

All this rich history, ringing with the kingly names of Vasa, Pfalz-Zweibrücken, Hesse, Holstein-Gottorp and Bernadotte, will almost certainly change when Gustav dies.

The inevitability of it has been evident for years in the open argument between older

Swedes, who cling to the monarchical idea, and the younger ones who reject it.

Since then, the most optimistic monarchist that I could find would go no further than to say: "Quite possibly Crown Prince Carl will never reign."

King Gustav has never renounced the talk. Between his archaeological expeditions and fishing trips he has presided over his cabinet, accepting the knowledge that his decisions must, according to the Constitution, always reflect the will of the government.

Old Trend

Kingly powers began to wane early in the 18th century. They were cut still more in 1809 when one king was overthrown and another, with lesser authority, was elected. A still later parliament decreed that the king would cease to be a political power.

Underlying the latest move toward a republic is the fact that Gustav trained as Crown Prince for 43 years until his father died. But the kingly qualities of the schoolboy, who is now 64 years younger than he, are unknown.

Still a Boy

The latest move is a reflection of all this. The same guarded attitude was plain in acts of parliament, going back to 1956, when the age of accession to the throne was raised from 19 to 21 and again from 21 to 25. This was hinted when a government spokesman explained to me: "A regency would be needed, you see, because Crown Prince Carl is after all, a boy."

The regent would have been Prince Bertil, King Gustav's 52-year-old son. Now it appears certain Bertil will be free to employ his extensive knowledge of Sweden's industrial complex and the interests that have seen him described as "Sweden's most exclusive bachelor."

Royal lips are sealed but no one believes Crown Prince Carl will regret missing his chance to reign if the change comes about. He is fun loving and sports minded. He will merge easily into the heady round that occupies most of Europe's young princes today.

Can the republicans be denied? The chance is faint. The motion is being debated simultaneously in both houses of parliament. They have equal power.

Municipal elections, by which members of the upper house are selected, will take place next September. A general vote for members of the lower house will occur in 1968. But no one seriously believes in Sweden now that republicans can be voted out.

Mellowed

Times have changed and kings and commoners both have mellowed since the days when the divine right of kings invited assassination or banishment.

Mellowed to the point, it seems, where a parliament, however regrettably, must vote a president in and rulers will, quite willingly, depart.

'Censors' Too Numerous

AUCKLAND, N.Z. (CP)—Unofficially invited spectators at film censoring have finally been banned in the South Pacific island of Niue after the amateur censors had multiplied to the size of a full audience.

A public hall is the only suitable place for censoring films in Niue. Gradually more and more islanders formed the habit of dropping in to advise the censor until, in the words of the chief of police the audience was "past all reasonable limit and practical control."

Fishy Problem

WELLINGTON, N.Z. (CP)—Tropical fish owners who empty fish tanks and bowls into lakes are believed by scientists to be responsible for a grave weed problem which may cost a huge sum to eradicate.

Varities of oxygen weed, of the kind commonly grown in goldfish tanks, have taken hold and increased into huge mats of weed in some lakes. The weed represents a serious danger in lakes behind hydro-electric dams.

The Stamp Packet

Overprint Warning Given

By FAITH ANGUS

Warning has been given in a recent issue of Stamp Collecting (UK), that the World Scout Jamboree Marathon stamps issued by Dubai in 1963 are coming into the market carrying a bogus Winter Olympic Games Innsbruck overprint.

It is pointed out in the report that the genuine overprint appeared in July, 1964. This overprint—the five Olympic rings and "Innsbruck 1964" in black and a shield in red—was officially printed only on the five high values of the set of 10 stamps.

Those now being offered have the colors reversed; the five rings and "Innsbruck 1964" are in red and the shield in black; also the overprint appears on all of the 10 stamps in the set, not just on the original air stamps (S.G. 52-56) as was the case with the genuine overprint.

New Zealand issued a special stamp on Jan. 5, to mark the Fourth National Scout Jamboree. The vertical 4d. stamp, 21mm and 37mm, depicts an arrowhead motif symbol of progress, superimposed on a pattern of dark green diamonds. The outline of the arrowhead is in gold.

The words "Progress Jamboree Scouts New Zealand" and the year 1964 appear around the edges of the design. Lettering and denomination are in dark green.

The pattern surround includes sections of traditional tuku tuku panel design known as potamo.

There are 120 stamps to a sheet which is valued at £2. They were printed by photographic process by Harrison & Sons. Unless stocks are exhausted earlier—the stamp will remain on sale until Feb. 28.

Newfoundland's "Floral Emblem" stamp will be released on Feb. 23. The large five cent stamp will be printed in shades of black, green and red. The provincial emblem, the Pitcher Plant, which was adopted in 1954, will be printed by offset process. The intaglio method will be used for the coat of arms.

Group Plans Aid for Aged

By JIM BRAHAN

Another step to help solve the housing problem for Greater Victoria's senior citizens is being taken by the membership of the Plymouth Brethren.

They plan to construct a $250,000, 15-suite housing project on one and two fifths acres at the corner of Tolmie and Linwood.

They have formed the Fairhaven Foundation, a non-profit organization incorporated under the B.C. Societies Act, to sponsor the low-cost housing project.

Like Vancouver Foundation chairman Frank Hamilton says construction plans have not been finalized, but he expects the development will be built along the same lines as the Vancouver brethren's housing project.

"Their buildings are two-story and have 135 suites," he said.

The project planned for this area may be all single-story buildings.

"We still have to settle this with the architects," the chairman said.

SUITES ROOMY
Wade Stockhill Armour and Partners are the architects for the proposed project.

The chairman said although the dimensions of the suites were not available, he envisaged them to be quite commodious.

Tentative plans for the units call for an L-shaped room, complete with electric stove and refrigerator, and each to have a three-piece bathroom. Each unit will have its own heat control.

Mr. Hamilton said accommodation would be restricted to those who are able to look after themselves, and have a monthly income of less than $145.

40 A MONTH
They will rent for about $40 a month for single persons, and at a slightly higher rate for married tenants, he said.

"It is intended that old-age pensioners could live there on their pensions," the chairman said.

He said the foundation hoped to add more accommodation as the need arises and when more funds become available.

"Funds are raised from voluntary contributions from members," Mr. Hamilton said.

He explained the foundation only puts up 10 per cent of the money, the provincial government gives a one-third grant, and the federal government through the Central Mortgage puts up 57 per cent to be repaid over 40 years.

ENCOURAGED
Mr. Hamilton said projects such as this are encouraged by the government.

"There are too many elderly people living lonely existences in boarding houses," he said.

The other directors of Fairhaven Foundation are: William Hamilton, Charles Ellington, Roy Hawes, Joseph Hitchens, Hubert Munday, Thomas McPike and David McCartney.

Pacific, Atlantic Commands Join Exercise

For the first time in 10 years, ships of the Pacific and Atlantic Commands of the Royal Canadian Navy will stage manoeuvres as a team.

HMCS Ste. Croix, Stettler, Amalgamated and Grimsby, linked communications with 10 ships of Atlantic Command entering the Caribbean from the Panama Canal Zone. They are now in Port of Spain, Trinidad.

Together, the 14 ships will take part in Exercise Maple Spring along with aircraft from the RCN and RCAF.

SOUTH AMERICA

After visiting West Indies ports, the ships will call at South American ports, including Rio de Janeiro and Buenos Aires.

The Pacific Command ships return here April 7.

Two militia army officers' courses are being given for 17 reserve army personnel from Manitoba and British Columbia.

The course is being taught at Macaulay Point in Esquimalt by a staff from B.C. area headquarters in Vancouver, with the co-operation of the Esquimalt Administrative Wing, the First Battalion, Queen's Own Rifles, and the RCN.

STUDENTS VISIT

Twenty-five students from Campbell River High School will visit Pacific Maritime Command Feb. 1. It will be the ninth year for the program, which is arranged by Crown Zellerbach Canada, Ltd.

The students will tour the base and go to sea in an 80-foot naval auxiliary vessel to tour the harbor.

CHANGES

With retirement of Commander A. G. Boulton, the executive officer of Esquimalt barracks, Cmdr. C. G. Smith will take over temporary command.

In the fleet, Lt.-Cmdr. R. D. Okros has taken command of HMCS Mackenzie, succeeding Cmdr. H. J. Wade. Beacon Hill's new captain is Lt.-Cmdr. G. V. Hartman who succeeds Lt.-Cmdr. W. A. Hughes; HMCS Saskatchewan will have Lt.-Cmdr. P. J. Traves as captain. He succeeds Cmdr. M. A. Turner. Saskatchewan's new executive officer will be Lt.-Cmdr. T. S. Murphy.

Painstaking Search Recovers Thin Dime

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — It cost the telephone company a small fortune in manpower, but Tom Young got back his cherished dime.

The dime was minted in 1876 and has the name "Mamie" engraved on its smooth, worn back. Young, of Suburban Swydd, plans to send it to the wife of former President Eisenhower, whose name is Mamie, for her birthday.

Last week, however, he made a phone call from a pay station in Lansdale, Pa., and later discovered he used the "Mamie" dime for the call.

Young went to Bell Telephone in Lansdale and asked for help to get it back. Manager Ernie Brownman called the company's collection department and the hunt began.

For three days, telephone employees sifted through millions of coins. Finally, they hit the jackpot. Young got back the coin and he said he will watch it closely until he sends it to Mrs. Eisenhower.

SANTO DOMINGO — Dominican rebel leader Col. Francisco Caamaño Deras and four other officers have bowed to government demands and left the country for diplomatic posts abroad. Caamaño, the husky army officer who led last April's bloody revolt, was one of 34 officers ordered out of the country by provisional president Hecker Garcia-Godoy.

MIAMI — Richard Duncan Pearson, 35-year-old playboy, has been fined $10,000 and sentenced to 10 years in prison for his part in ransoming the De-Long ruby, stolen with other gems in 1964 from the New York Museum of Natural History. Ironically, the three who stole the jewels were given only three-year terms and may be out on parole late this year.

BOSTON — Men close to the late President John Kennedy gathered at a $15-a-plate dinner to launch the Massachusetts gubernatorial campaign of one of their members, Kenneth P. O'Donnell. Present were Senators Edward and Robert Kennedy, David Powers, Timothy J. Roemer Jr., Andrew Hatcher and featured speaker Sen. Mike Mansfield.

MIAMI, Fla. — The villa of a wealthy New York socialite was rifled of $500,000 in jewels while she was at a race track. Police said Mrs. Frederick Ernest, 56, took the loss calmly. She insisted on eating her dinner before she would allow detectives and FBI agents to question her.

CAMBRIDGE, England — Rt. Rev. Frederick Dudley Vaughan Warburton, 70, known as the Swinging Bishop of the Anglican Church, has died. Bishop Warburton, who resigned from his Anglican Colchester diocese in October, was a stocky, jolly man and jazz enthusiast.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — The titular head of the Episcopal Anglican Church in the United States says the "God is dead" theorists may have a "valid point." "We are living in a racial world of change and we are beginning to see that God is limited by institutionalism," said Bishop John E. Hines Jr. "In this respect, God is dead."

DUBLIN — The Irish government says it has refused to allow its army chief of staff, Gen. Seán MacEoin, to go to Cyprus as head of the United Nations peace force because it does not want further involvement in the island.

MILWAUKEE, Wis. — A Milwaukee driver has pleaded guilty to failure to yield the right of way to an airplane. Richard W. Grams, 38, was fined $25 on the charge that his auto skidded into the whirling propeller of a single-engine plane at Gen. Mitchell Field where he works. Neither Grams nor the pilot was injured.

MOSCOW — Foreign Minister Flourens Shchegolev of Japan has ended a six-day Soviet visit that failed to change the Russian position on Viet Nam peace efforts.

VANCOUVER — Paul G. Sondergaard, 40, of Vancouver, was sentenced to 15 months in jail for making false statements to induce people to become shareholders of a syndicate. An assize court jury found Sondergaard guilty after prosecutor George Chambliss said eight persons had invested between $5,000 and $8,000.

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. — Mrs. Beulah Winkler was arrested on charges of operating a house of prostitution next door to Police Chief Woodrow W. Malphre and across the street from Police Sgt. John Nagy.

NEW DELHI (Reuters) — Army chiefs of India and Pakistan agreed on a plan to end the confrontation of their forces along the Indo-Pakistani border. Agreement was announced in a communique after a meeting between Gen. Mohammed Musa of Pakistan and Gen. Jayanto Nath Chaudhary of India.

Clothing Tips Needed

"What sort of clothing should I wear on a trip to Victoria?"

This is one question which should be answered in literature about this part of the world, directors of the Victoria Visitors' Bureau were told Friday when they met at City Hall. They saw a draft copy of a booklet to be produced by the bureau.

Assistant manager of the B.C. Ferry Authority, Ronald Worley, who recently returned from a travel show in Los Angeles at which a pitch was made for the province, said the answers to such simple questions must be given.

TV personality Andy Stephen was assured the booklet would be largely pictorial.

Transportation executive Pat Frumento was not happy with the "tweedy, daffodilish" introduction and was assured that an alternative could be offered.

The bureau will distribute 500,000 of the booklets.

PTA Activities

● Belmont-Elizabeth Fisher PTA will meet at 7:30 p.m. Monday.

● Victoria and District PTA Council will meet at 8 p.m. on Thursday at Central Jr. High School.

Crash Kills Teen-Agers

VANCOUVER (CP) — A spectacular car crash on the University of British Columbia endowment lands has claimed the lives of two teen-agers.

Rick Turner and Susan Margaret Bates, both 18 and both of Vancouver, died when their car went out of control about one half mile from the UBC main gate.

U.S. Officials Visit Pope

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul told a group of American space officials in a private audience that as man reached for the stars he would come to recognize God as the creator.

"You are going to recognize God as the author of creation and the laws of love and fraternity predominating in it (the creation)," he said.

Nothing Wrong With Sweeps

McLaren

By BARRY JOHNSON
In spite of at least one church's adamant opposition to national lotteries, the man in the street seems to be for them.

The Colonist asked seven citizens in downtown Victoria their views on such lotteries as the Irish Sweepstake. F. S. McLaren, 2814 Rock Bay: "I don't see anything wrong with them. You buy one ticket and you're living on hope. I've been doing it all my life."

W. F. Parker, 203 Charter House, the only one in the mini-survey to oppose gambling: "I used to gamble quite a lot, but I quit. 'I wouldn't vote for it if it came up, but I wouldn't kick it if it got in. Other people are entitled to do what they want." Gerry Johnson, 1875 Lee: "There's nothing wrong with it. And we certainly do need hospitals."

Al Howe, 181 Regina: "I'm all for it. Who wouldn't like to get rich quick? And what's the use of sending all that money out of the country?" David Yuen, 2845 Oakdowns:

Howe

"There's a lot to be said for a hospital lottery. People complain about having to have hospital referendums. Maybe they wouldn't have to if we had a sweepstake."

Mrs. Judy Barclay, 241 Cook: "I don't see why we should be sending all our money to Ireland. I can't see why they shouldn't be legal here. If people want to gamble, it's their own money and personally, I love it."

Judy Hancock, 625 Mountain View: "There's nothing wrong with sweepstakes. I bet half the people who raid ticket-sellers buy tickets themselves."

Rev. Robert Morris of the United Church, however, said his church still stood firmly against gambling in any form.

Monsignor M. T. O'Connell said he didn't believe the Catholic Church had an official stand on lotteries.

Attack by Harbord Spurs Bevis Retort

"If the labor unions want to fight, it is time somebody started to fight with them."

With those words, Justin Harbord, president of the Insurance Agents' Association of B.C., Saturday night threatened a counter-campaign against the "inflationists" who he said are attacking his profession.

The "co-enemy," the New Democratic Party, has already begun circulating petitions in the Greater Victoria area protesting car insurance increases and calling for setting up of a public car insurance agency in B.C.

"ATTACK SOURCE"
"We must attack the source of the problem—labor's constant effort to secure higher wages which automatically raise the price of very commodity and service," Mr. Harbord said.

F. J. Bevis, president of the Victoria New Democratic Party Constituency Association, sharply denied that either labor or politics were behind the petition.

"The local campaign began when I was approached last year by a number of private citizens none of whom, as far as I know, are either trade unionists or members of the NDP."

NEITHER ONE
Mr. Bevis said the petition, when completed, will be presented to the provincial cabinet by a group that will include neither politicians nor labor officials.

In his hard-hitting statement, Mr. Harbord said: "It is time we organized all those people, 1,800 members, "so that the who are affected by inflationary demands."

As to what practical steps he had in mind, he foresaw an advertising and publicity campaign waged by the association's

And he warned, "Our people are as influential as any in the province. I don't think there will be any lack of support."

Missing Boys

Sea Search 'Running Out'

An RCMP patrol boat Saturday discovered the second car belonging to a boat found Thursday on Dungeness Spit.

The car, found Saturday afternoon on Protection Island, about two miles east of Dungeness Spit, was identified by boat owner Ralph Wherry, 838 Esquimalt, as one belonging to his boat.

It was in his boat that three young hunters left for Chatham Island Jan. 15.

NEVER RETURNED
They never returned. Missing are Ronald Hynds, 18, of 2428 Dalhousie, Dennis Powell, 18, of 1240 Newport and Wade Squire, 17, of 2741 Dewdney.

The boat was found upside down Thursday on a beach at Dungeness Spit on the Washington coast.

SHORELINE COMBED
The first car was discovered by a private float plane Friday.

The RCMP patrol launch Victoria spent Saturday combing the shoreline. Some of its crew of 12 searched beaches on foot.

'ROUTINE PATROLS'
Inspector G. M. Mackay of the RCMP said late Saturday that the searchers would rest today.

"Things are sort of running out," he said. The search will be continued by routine patrols. Fishermen and other boat operators have been requested to keep on the lookout for any signs of the missing boys.

Rfm. Muise has been placed in open custody and could face unit charges depending on the findings of the investigation, the spokesman said.

Burglars Rifle Homes, Blind

Two homes in Oak Bay, and the Canadian National Institute for the Blind stand at the Legislature were victims of burglars Friday night.

From the CNIB stand the burglars took an $85 transistor radio, $23 cash, 30 cartons of Taylor, 255 Margate, and got cigarettes, 120 chocolate bars away with $10.

Tsartlip Self-Help Has Helpers

Studies Stepped-Up

By BILL STAYDAI.
Each week a dozen University of Victoria students take time out from their studies to aid a self-help project by the Indians of Tsartlip reserve north of Brentwood.

Organized by the Indians themselves, the project has opened the Tsartlip Indian Day School as an evening study hall for elementary and high school pupils.

The university students, unpaid volunteers, provide coaching and tutoring four nights a week.

Though the experiment has been in operation only five weeks it's showing results already, according to Sister Kenneth, principal of the Tsartlip school.

"Among my fifth and six graders there's a better attitude," said Sister Kenneth on Thursday. "They come in elated in the morning and say:

"Look, Sister, I did my homework!"

Tangible results are expected to show up in improved report cards.

They come from all over the Saanich peninsula in a car pool organized by their parents. Members of the Indian community also take turns as adult supervisors alongside the student tutors.

The idea was hatched last September during talks between Tsartlip parents, the Indian affairs department and officials of the Roman Catholic separate school system.

"There was and is a great need for tutoring and a quiet place to study," said Mrs. Freda Cooper, secretary of the Tsartlip Parent-Teacher Association.

Some homes lack a room where youngsters can study in peace. Not all the parents have finished high school, and so can't help older students with their homework.

On the other hand, the elementary school on West Saanich Road offers quiet, supervision, help with problems, plus a few reference books.

About 30 youngsters turn out each evening from Monday to Thursday, and they're enthusiastic.

Help from the university campus was organized by Eleanor Colwell, a fourth-year psychology and sociology major.

And the benefit isn't one-sided, she pointed out. "It's helping us too," Miss Colwell said. "We're learning to work with children."

So far the project has produced only one flaw.

The average university student has never come up against the new system of teaching mathematics. Grade 3 arithmetic can stump him.

Crust Coffee, Anyone?

Living History in a Dictionary

By MAUREEN DUFFUS

When you come across words like crust coffee, dime party, hootchino and pemmican in the course of your daily work, there is a terrific temptation to waste a lot of time finding out more about them.

Joan Hall, who is editorial assistant at the Lexicographical Centre at the University of Victoria, is being constantly lead astray by these fascinating references as she works on the first dictionary of Canadian English.

Crust coffee, for instance, is defined as "a beverage made by pouring hot water over hard crusts of brown bread," and a reference mentioning this unappetizing brew is included: "Mine hostess placed before me a piece of dirty-looking Indian meal bread, and a large cake of beef-tallow, and ... a dish of crust coffee without either milk or sugar."

Joan, needless to say, wants to read more about that hapless traveller in Canada's untamed west, in 1853. Still on the subject of recipes and household hints, another entry in the dictionary defines pemmican as pounded meat mixed with animal fat, the preparation being sewn in a skin bag forming a hard and compact mass which could be kept for long periods of time.

One reference noted it was "reckoned by some very good food," but another writer in 1859, with more refined tastes, was less impressed.

"Take scrapings from the driest outside cover of a very old stale piece of cold roast beef, add to it lumps of tallowy rancid fat, then garnish with long human hairs, on which string pieces, (like beads, upon a necklace) and short hairs of oxen or dogs or both, and you have a fine imitation of common pemmican."

And there you have another part of our Canadian Heritage! In her office, Joan sits surrounded by files of these intriguing words, peculiar to Canada, which have been gathered by lexicographers from old memoirs, journals and newspapers during the past 10 years.

It is a colossal job—there are 19 shoe boxes full of rejected entries alone—but the dictionary will be published for the 1967 Centennial.

Joan has been working on the project ever since the day in Calgary when she went to the unemployment insurance office looking for a job. To her delight, she was offered the position. When the director Dr. M. H. Scargill came to Victoria, she applied for the post here and got it.

"It's such a dynamic, worthwhile work, and I find it fascinating. The only trouble is, I'm always coming across intriguing bits of information I want to find out more about."

"Like Taitian Indian dogs, for instance. They're described as having narrow elongated and pointed muzzles, sharp ears and bushy tails, fine silky hair mixed with thick under fur. But there also seems to be some sort of taboo about them—people won't talk about them. And I'd love to know why."

"I get sidetracked on things like this about 25 times a day. Joan finds it has given her an immense interest in Canadian history, which "needn't be dull," and she'd love to pursue it.

There's a diary by Mrs. Simpson, of a trip taken in 1796, which has been a fruitful source of entries for the dictionary. Joan thinks it would be a wonderful book to read to get a living picture of Canadian history.

But Joan hasn't too much time, as she is studying for her bachelor of Arts degree, taking one course a year, while she continues her work on the dictionary.

Meantime, while letters A and B are off to the printers, she is still checking the rest of the 12,000 or so entries, and discovering things like "dime parties"—a social affair, entry to which required a dime, usually for charity—and dime societies, which held the dime parties.

Part of her work involves catching mistakes. One (she's sure it was intentional) was description of virgin prairie as "prairie on which the hand of man has never set foot."

These intriguing bits of trivia may not be much use in contemporary life, but Joan should know about delicacies like crust coffee and pemmican. So scholarly works CAN be practical, after all.

Dr. McLean Is Speaker

Dr. J. Beattie McLean of the department of languages at University of Victoria, is speaking to the Soroptimist Club recently on Ethnic Groups in Canada.

He pointed out that just under 3 million of the total population is NOT of this origin, meaning one out of eight is foreign born.

Dr. McLean said that since the new Immigration Act of 1952, Canada has immigration officers in 23 lands who carefully screen the incoming people in their own lands by standards of training, skills and educational background, thus giving "New Canadians" of intelligence, skill and energy. The estimated cost of $23,000,000 of "Assisted Loans Funds" paid out to date, $30,000,000 has been repaid by these immigrants.

Dr. McLean was thanked by Miss Nell Jones.

During the business session conducted by president Miss Louise Beattie, members voted to donate to the Artisan Craft Club of Victoria two looms to help develop their weaving activities.

'Ookpik' Joins Safety Project

SASKATOON (CP) — Some of Canada's safety slogans may read "Ookpik says: Be Alert and Stay Unhurt" if an idea of some Saskatchewan home-makers catches on.

Home-makers' clubs in the Blackfoot, Sask., district are using the furry owl developed by the Fort Chimo Eskimo co-operative as a symbol in a pilot safety project, says member Helen Duclie.

"All our safety symbols for Canadian safety campaigns have originated in the United States," says Mrs. Duclie. "We plan to use Ookpik, a distinctly Canadian symbol, and hope the idea may catch on nationally. This will be a kind of pilot project."

Miss Beech Married At Ganges Ceremony

GANGES — Dorothy Elizabeth Beech, member of a well-known Salt Spring Island family, became the bride of Dan Bruce Harford at a double-ring ceremony performed by Archdeacon R. B. Horsfield in St. George's Church, Ganges, on Saturday afternoon.

Parents of the principals are Mr. and Mrs. Cyril Lionel Beech of Ganges, and Mr. and Mrs. Stuart B. Harford of Qualicum Beach.

White spray chrysanthemums were used on the altar and wedding music was played by Mrs. V. C. Best, organist.

Given in marriage by her father, the dark-haired bride was radiant in her classic gown of white pique de soie. A fitted bodice with rounded neckline and long sleeves featured lace appliques which were also on the full-length skirt, which was pleated at the back and finished with a tailored bow at the waistline.

A tiered chapel-length veil was held in place by a delicate coronet of pearls and rhinestones and she carried a bouquet of red roses and white freesias. Her only ornament was an heirloom brooch belonging to her grandmother, Mrs. S. P. Beech.

Bridesmaids were her cousin, Miss Barbara Newman, and Miss Ruth Satermo who were gownned in cranberry red velvet sheath dresses with matching shoes and red velvet wedding ring headresses with white whorl veils. They carried cascade bouquets of white chrysanthemums. Cynthia McLaren, four-year-old niece of the bride, was flower girl and wore a short full-skirted dress of red velvet with tiny white collar and matching headress. She carried a Colonial bouquet of white pom-pom chrysanthemums.

Best man was Mr. David Clark of Courtenay and ushering were the bride's brother, Mr. Brian Beech and Mr. Simon Jones of Victoria.

A reception followed at Legion Hall where the bride's table was centred by a three-tier wedding cake flanked by tall white tapers in silver holders. The bride's toast was proposed by Mr. Bruce McLaren of Victoria.

For the journey to Regina, where the young couple will make their home, the bride wore a Hawaiian pink woven wool suit with brown accessories and corsage of white carnations and freesias.

Out-of-town guests were: Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Harford, Mr. and Mrs. F. J. McMillan, Qualicum; Mr. and Mrs. Bruce McLaren, Mrs. Violet Norman, Mrs. Alice Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. Noel Andrew, Mr. and Mrs. Brian Williams, Mrs. Margaret Pitt, Mrs. Joan Holmes, Mrs. Iris Caldwell, Mrs. Heather Dyck, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Gray, Mr. and Mrs. H. Eggleston.

Mr. and Mrs. John Knight, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Perry, Misses Jess Robinson, Shirley Eastdale, Judith Harvey, Elizabeth Cluder, Wilma Van Dant, Dianne Hobday, John Campbell, John Strachan, Angus Stanfield, Rodney Bold, D'Arcy Dellender, Roy Watson, David Ross, Victoria, Mrs. Gladys Brodie, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Brodie, Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Bowler, Sidney.

Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Bridgen, Chemainus; Mr. and Mrs. Richard Thomas, Duncan; Mr. and Mrs. R. McMinn, Alberni; Richard Morgan, Nanaimo Bay, Mr. and Mrs. Keith Gray, Nanaimo; Mr. and Mrs. John Gray, Tofino; Mr. and Mrs. Newman, Charles Wingfield, John Wingfield of Vancouver.

To Speak On Quebec

"An English-Speaking Quebec or Look at the New Quebec" will be the topic discussed by Hon. George C. Marler when he addresses the Women's Canadian Club, Monday afternoon.

Government leader in the Legislative Council of Quebec, the speaker formerly served on the Montreal city council and as member of the Montreal Metropolitan Commission. His family has lived in Quebec for more than 120 years.

Mr. Marler was a Quebec MLA from 1942 until 1954 when he became minister of transport in the federal cabinet. He resumed an active role in Quebec provincial politics in 1960. The meeting begins at 2:30 p.m. in the Empress Hotel ballroom.

Miss Joyce Mackie of London gives private coaching to local ballet student Debbie Lovett. — (Robin Clarke)

Dancers Meet After 20 Years

It was a wonderful reunion for two friends, well-known Victoria dancing teacher Mrs. Bebe Eversfield, and Miss Joyce Mackie of London, who first met when both were members of the Kyrati Russian Ballet. It is their first meeting for 20 years, but both still take a very active part in the world of ballet.

Miss Mackie now teaches at the Arts Educational School, a training school for the theatre in London. Another branch of the school, a boarding school, is in Lord Rothschild's mansion at Tring. "Here children up to 16 are given academic work in the morning with vocational training, in ballet, drama, music and art in the afternoon," Miss Mackie explained. New director of the school will be well known to Canadians — she is Beryl Grey who danced with the Royal Ballet during its tours of North America, and is still with the company.

Before coming to Victoria, Miss Mackie was in New York for a course in Contemporary dance, which, she says, is now reaching high standards in Britain.

Before returning to England Miss Mackie will go to Calgary to conduct examinations for the Cecchetti Society, although she herself now teaches Royal Academy method as well. She has seen little of Canadian dancing so far but was impressed with the Royal Winnipeg ballet in London.

"We enjoyed it very much — it was so fresh and alive," she said.

Weekly 'Get Acquainted' Classes

Simpson are two of Gypsy's and Dandy's young offspring. The "get acquainted" classes, which were originated by Mrs. Simpson about five years ago, are held every Wednesday morning and are mainly practice "socials" for puppies and shy dogs. Classes are mostly for registered dogs although unregistered breeds are accepted providing they are in obedience training and have had proper protection shots.

"Just keep your distance . . ." The seven-month-old Alredale, Naden Celeste (Sally) pictured with her owner, Mrs. Thomas Dixon, doesn't seem too sure about this "socializing" bit. Dame Dalrymple (Sheba), eight-month-old Dalmatian owned by Mrs. John Roome of Duncan (at left), really only wanted to tell her new found friend a little piece of doggy gossip.

Mrs. G. A. Robertson, Tudor Avenue, gives her one-year-old basenji, Ariel, her first lesson in standing for examination in the show ring. Although there is no organized training at the weekly sessions there are practice obedience exercises in which the owners have the opportunity to handle their dogs in a group.

Simon, 2½-year-old Dalmatian, shows what champions are made of as he gracefully and easily takes the jump on command. Number one Dalmatian in Canadian championship shows in 1965, Simon, who is owned by Mrs. C. D. Blinko of Beaver Lake, has attended the canine socials at St. Stephen's Hall since puppyhood.

Two canine members of the novice class anxiously wait for their owners' commands to begin their obedience lesson. From left to right, Mrs. J. A. Burchett and her one-year-old dachshund, Dagmar, and Mrs. R. F. Thuillier and her 18-month-old sheltie, Piper.

Like many of the dogs attending the weekly "socials" for the first few times, Hickory Smoke Morag Brodie was a bit timid and shy in the beginning. Now the

Now's the time to acquire a new fur . . .

Nothing does quite so much to complete a woman's ensemble as a really good, well-designed "fur" . . . be it jacket, stole, cape, boa or even collar . . . It also provides luxurious warmth . . . is wearable most seasons of the year . . . and does wonderful things for a woman's morale, as you don't need us to tell you! . . . What we will tell you, though, is that Scuby's January fur sale is in full swing . . . All their lovely furs are considerably reduced . . . and this is a golden opportunity for you to acquire a fur piece you've always dreamed of owning . . . or to replace one that's had it's day . . . at very worthwhile savings . . . Just to mention a few things we saw at Scuby's this week . . . small pastel mink capes tagged at $395 . . . Mink boas in various shades like pearl, pastel, dark ranch, for only $285 . . . Russian squirrel stoles and kolinsky capes at $150 . . . Really beautiful black Persian lamb jackets . . . some with black or sapphire mink collars . . . reduced to $310 . . . Small mink collars to add a note of elegance to suit or coat, for just $35 . . . We could go on and on . . . but you see what we mean . . . so do drop in to Scuby's and see for yourself . . . Scuby Furs Ltd., 911 Government St., 285-4561.

The new sari-shouldered nightgowns are as elegant as evening dresses . . . very seductive-looking.

New fabrics for spring wardrobes . . .

New fabrics for spring are arriving at Saba's almost daily now . . . and whether you're one of those clever gals who makes your own clothes . . . or hug the name of a favorite dressmaker to your bosom . . . you'll get inspiration to spare when you see the new designs, colors and textures of Saba's spring materials . . . Among those we drooled over the other day are Amorella prints from France . . . rayon de silks in the most beautiful designs and color blends . . . florals, geometrics and polka dots . . . One heavenly floral print is mostly shades of turquoise with muted pink and touches of yellow . . . gives a lovely over-all effect . . . Another is a mottled pink and black . . . very striking . . . $2.99 and $3.99 a yard . . . There are printed nylon chiffons from Switzerland . . . also in gorgeous colors, and priced at $3.99 for 45" width . . . And printed nylon and acetate jersey at $1.98 . . . wonderful for travel clothes because it's crease-resistant and hand washable . . . Saba's big Spring Fabricanza Sale is due to start very soon now, so do watch for it . . . There'll be brand new spring fabrics at very attractive prices . . . Saba Bros. Couple Wed 60 Years

Mr. and Mrs. Walter J. Pym will celebrate their 60th wedding anniversary at an "open house" from 2 to 5 p.m., this coming Saturday, at their home, 608 Ralph Street.

Married on Jan. 23, 1906 in Glamorgan, South Wales, the couple came to Victoria 15 years ago from Regina. Mr. Pym, who is veteran of the Boer and First World wars, was for many years meat and food inspector for the capital city of Saskatchewan.

Mr. Pym was also an active member of the famed Queen City Chorus of Regina and is a member of the Shikara' Wa-Wa Temple of that city. He is actively connected with the Twilight Singers in Victoria. Both Mr. and Mrs. Pym are members of the Garden City United Church and Mrs. Pym is a member of the church choir.

They have four daughters, Mrs. Grace Thornton and Mrs. Audrey Peel, Edmonton, Alta., and Mrs. Vera Hitchens and Mrs. Beryl Bulmer, Victoria. They also have eight grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Lace Panels Highlight Bride's Taffeta Gown

Belmont United Church was the setting for a pretty double-ring ceremony Saturday evening, uniting in marriage Alice Joyce Cronk and Mr. Gerald Bruce Rasmith.

Rev. Murray Henderson officiated at the wedding for the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Cronk, 1448 Viking Street, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Rasmith, 885 Levanth Avenue.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was radiant in a floor-length gown of white paper taffeta with two full panels of Alencon lace highlighting the front of the skirt. A detachable train of matching lace was held in place at the shoulders by self-fabric rosettes and the fitted lace bodice featured scalloped neckline and lily point sleeves. A crown of crystals and pearls held the bride's scalloped, tiered veil and her only jewelry was a single strand of pearls, gift of the groom. She carried red roses and feathered white carnations.

Miss Pat Carlson, maid of honor, and Mrs. Carolyn Cronk, bridesmaid, wore gowned alike in floor-length cherry red velvet gowns. They wore single strands of crystal beads and matching earrings, gift of the bride, and dainty crowns of feathered carnations in their hair. Feathered white carnations and ivy were in their bouquets.

Mr. Fred Thompson was best man. Ushering were Mr. Bert Cronk, bride's brother, and Mr. Norman Trace.

Red and white gladiolus and ivy formed the decorations at the reception, held in Old England Inn. Centering the head table was a three-tiered cake made by the bride's mother. For a honeymoon trip to California and Nevada, the bride chose a pink wool suit with matching fur trim for her going-away ensemble. She wore pink and navy accessories and a mauve orchid corsage.

Fads Absent At Show

MONTREAL (CP) — Modish dresses, pop art designs and glamorous wide-legged party pyjamas probably won't be worn by Canadian women next season.

These current fashion fads were more or less absent in the national collection of union label fashions shown to fashion editors Friday.

And only a sprinkling of youth-oriented go-go clothes appeared in the spring and summer panorama.

Wide use was made of the two-faced look and the semi-geometric styling that accompanies two color combinations.

Dresses, for instance, had white or beige yokes with camel or tweed skirts.

The total look continued to be of importance—costumes consisted of two, three and four pieces—and the over-all effect was tailored and uncluttered.

Skirts, with very few exceptions, stayed at or just above the knee. Coats were usually architecturally cut with sparse detail, wide or raised shoulders and set in sleeves. They came in various lengths with high or dropped waistlines.

Suits came with long belted jackets, brief cut-away jackets or hip jackets, nipped in at the waist.

Streamlined tunic dresses were plentiful and the most casual variety had the long torso of the 20's and pleated instead of straight skirts.

Designed for the National Collection of Union Label fashions show by Mr. Gilbert of Montreal, this elegant evening gown is of pale Alabaster chiffon and features a sheer yoke encrusted with beads.—(CP Wirephoto)

Household Gadgets

Increase Accidents

UNITED NATIONS (AP)—Gadgets and other devices for making life easier have increased accidents in the home to the point where health authorities should regard the problem as a major epidemic.

The World Health Organization says man's new ability to survive diseases adds millions annually to the ranks of oldsters around the house who are unable to cope with even the simplest techniques for operating labor-saving devices.

While safety laws and regulations have been applied on the highway and in the factory, they have not been formulated in the same manner for the home, traditionally a stronghold rarely invaded by legislation.

E. Maurice Backett, professor of social medicine and head of the department of public health and social medicine at the University of Aberdeen, Scotland, produced the report for the health agency.

Prof. Backett maintains that home mechanization has reached heights of absurdity with electric toothbrushes without ground wires, electric erasers and some electric can-openers seemingly designed to amputate fingers.

The elderly female is most vulnerable to home mishaps in all countries, but in the United States at almost all ages below 65 the male accident death rate is greater than the female.

Children, particularly boys, suffer great numbers of domestic accidents but at fairly low risk of death. In young children, the fatality rate is 36 per cent higher for girls, probably reflecting the ease with which small girls suffer fatal burns.

A domestic accident is probably 300 times more likely to be fatal to a man 85 or over than to a boy between 5 and 14.

Single persons, whether divorced, widowed, separated or unmarried have the highest fatality rates. It is suggested that single persons have lighter responsibilities and therefore take more risks around the house.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I am a teen-age boy with no problems. I like girls and girls like me but I am not going steady with any of them and I don't want to. I work hard in school and I get A's and B's. So what am I writing to you about?

I read your column every day and so does everybody I know. I have decided that the people who write to you are nuts.

I always cover up your answer and guess what it will be and I'm usually right. I'm not brilliant or anything like that. I just use common sense. Why can't people who write to you do the same thing? Then they wouldn't have to write.

I am not trying to put you out of business, Ann, but then there's no danger of that. Like most sensible things, this letter will be ignored and people will continue to write you those crazy letters. —NO SWEAT

Dear No: I guess it's too much to expect a 15-year-old boy to have empathy (look it up) but this is what you lack.

Somebody else's problem might look nuts, but when (and if) the problem is your own you'll use a less brutal adjective.

People in trouble are often too emotional to see the solution that is obvious to an unbiased outsider. Under stress this thing you call "common sense" is not so common.

If you get through the next two years without a problem, please write to me and send your address. I want to send out a photographer.

Dear Ann Landers: I am 23 years old but look about 17. I am married to a man who is 33 but looks 10 years older. Unfortunately Mike is quite bald, and he weighs about 30 pounds more than he should.

It just kills me when people mistake Mike for my father. We used to laugh when people made remarks to Mike about his "cute daughter," but it's not funny anymore.

Please tell me what to do about it. —OLDER THAN I LOOK

Dear Chicken: You say you are 23 but you look 17. Do you wear teen-type clothes? If so, get out of the Junior Department and maybe a more sophisticated hair-do would be helpful.

As for Mike, he should get his weight down and keep his hat on whenever possible.

Dear Ann Landers: I read the letter from the sitter who signed herself "Starved." She was complaining about the woman not having anything to eat in the house.

I am a 15-year-old sitter, and I'm sitting right now. There are soft drinks in the fridge, a chocolate cake in the breadbox and fresh fruit, too. I have

I'm no good in school when I haven't had a decent night's sleep. What should I do? —BEAT RITA

Dear Rita: Where is your mother anyway? No 15-year-old girl should be permitted to sit for people who stay out until dawn. In fact, I'm opposed to any mid-week sitting that goes over a girl's regular bedtime.

Tell these people you are unable to sit for them on school nights unless you can be home until any hour. But on weekdays by 11:30 p.m.

Faith in Self Leads to Goals

By KITTE TURMELL

"You need self-confidence, a realistic faith in yourself to accomplish your goals," says Dr. Robert Ellison. "To strengthen self-confidence, you must learn to know yourself; you must extend yourself to find out what you can do."

"You must become aware of those tendencies that may limit your scope for accomplishment or undermine self-confidence. Two of these tendencies to which most of us are prone are exaggeration and false modesty."

Dr. Ellison, an industrial psychologist, briefed me on the results of U.S. Space Agency projects, directed by Dr. Calvin Taylor of the University of Utah, for which Dr. Ellison was field psychologist. And he added his own ideas, based on research.

"We tested more than 2,000 scientists, and checked studies on teenagers. We wanted to spot talent early in high school, and to give the college graduate information to help him keep himself creative and productive. We measured many characteristics and found many

Teen Letters

"Dear Kite Turmell: I am 18 and have four telephone problems. The first two are about feeling uneasy or uncomfortable. I am if:

"I am calling up somebody I have never called or have not called much. Or if I'm calling for business reasons, such as getting a job, which is problem 2."

"The third problem is that I have trouble thinking what to say, and hesitate, especially when talking with one friend who seems to hesitate, too."

"The last problem is that I find I don't know when to, or can't make myself say goodbye. Help, please!—Phone-Confused."

Dear "Phone-Confused": Rules that apply to all your problems are:

Have in mind what you want to say, at start, before you begin, and get done with that first.

Give the other person time to add conversation—ask questions, etc.

Soon as talk-interest seems to be running out, just say "I enjoyed talking with you—and hope we can talk more, soon"—pause, then say, "Goodbye."

"Dear Kite: I am a girl in my freshman year. I like a boy. I think I like him. How can I find out for sure? 'Help'."

Dear "Help": Assume he likes you, unless you give him cause to dislike you by paying so much attention to him around others, that he feels embarrassed.

"Dear Kite: Will you please recommend what I should read, to increase my vocabulary, that will give me better command of the English language?—John."

Dear John: I suggest frequent use of Roget's Thesaurus (a paper-back edition is available) and keep an up-to-date desk dictionary handy. Check at your library for the fine books now available on English usage. Read the classics and well-written modern books recommended by your librarian.

The Week in Records

Beatles' Stocks Fool Sceptics

By MARY LEE BUREWOS

Although the stock market officials were sceptical when the Northern Songs Co. first put up their shares for sale, they have been forced by the profits of one year to change their minds.

Northern Songs is the music company which holds the copyright for all the Beatles' music. The value of the company's shares has doubled since it was first put on the market and the number of copyrights owned by it has increased from 60 to almost 100.

David McCallum, one of the men from UNCLE, has released a record called Communication. It is supposed to be in a style known as "talk-rock." I'm afraid I don't know what that is.

The Supremes have managed to become the only American group to have six No. 1 hits in a row.

Hit singles: Day Tripper/We Can Work It Out by the Beatles is No. 1. Michelle by the Beatles has made the survey, but is so far only available on the album, Rubber Soul. It has been released as a single by David and Jonathan.

I'm still receiving conflicting reports as to whether it is going to be released as a single by the Beatles themselves.

Lightning Strikes by Lou Christie is selling very well. Hit LPs: A good up 'n' comin' album is Hits of the Dave Clark Five.

What's happening: Sonny and Cher have a new single out called What Now My Love. A new group called the Mama's and Papa's have a single out called California Dreamin' which I think will be great.

2,934 Children Undergo Tests for TB

Nearly 3,000 school children were tested for tuberculosis this week in the first two days of Operation Doorstep.

The campaign, sponsored by the TB-Christmas Seal Society, will make a TB test available to every one of Greater Victoria's 170,000 people in the next four months.

Of the 2,934 children checked at 16 schools on the Saanich peninsula, 79 showed positive reactions to their skin tests.

Furnace Blast Injures Two

INVERMERE, B.C. (CP) — Damage of about $10,000 was caused to a motel at Lake Windermere when a propane gas furnace exploded, and two persons received serious burns.

RCMP said the explosion and flash fire occurred as Arthur Warren, owner attempted to light a space heater under the floor of one of the units. They said the three-unit motel was so extensively damaged it would likely have to be demolished.

PRINTED PATTERN

Nothing but nothing, slims you so smoothly as the lean, long princess line unbroken by waist seams. And of course, nothing is so simple to slip into without mussing makeup or hairdo as Printed Pattern 9322 by Radiant.

Note the way the collar swerves low to inspire the fashionable fill-in of a necklace. Add a couture touch by choosing unique buttons—wooden ones for a sheer wood effect. Rushed gold for crepe, linen or cotton.

Printed Pattern 9322 is available in Half Sizes 12 1/2, 14 1/2, 16 1/2, 18 1/2, 20 1/2, 22 1/2, 24 1/2. Size 16 1/2 requires 3 1/2 yards 38-inch fabric.

Send one dollar for Printed Pattern 9322 to The Daily

Colonist, Pattern Department, 60 Front Street West,

Toronto, Ont. Please print plainly your name, address with city, state and number and zip code. Send $1.00 for the collection of designer originals in our new 1966 Couture

Pattern Book. Send $5.00 now for coupon—apply to any $1 pattern in book. Send $5.00 now for new Couture Book.

Garden Notes

Drake Trod It

By M.V. CHESNUT

CHAMOMILE LAWN (S.C. O.L., Sanleighton). Chamomile lawns have been grown since the days of Drake and the Spanish Armada—in fact, it is believed that Drake's famous game of bowls was played on a chamomile bowling green. It isn't a very practical proposition for a full-sized lawn, though, for it isn't as neat as grass and is much harder to get established.

You are mistaken in thinking that chamomile would make a labor-saving lawn, for while it makes a novel and interesting ground cover for odd patches in the garden, it must be cut regularly to prevent it from blooming, either by hand with shears or with a light mower with the blades set high.

You will find the seeds of chamomile listed in the catalogues under its botanical name, Anthemis nobilis. Seeds are sown thinly in pots and boxes in late March or early April and are grown on in a greenhouse or coldframe until big enough to transplant to the lawn site. Space the young plants four inches apart each way, in staggered rows; they will soon grow together to make a solid mat of vegetation.

HANDKERCHIEF TREE (O.E.M.C.F., Victoria). This is a nickname for Davidia involucreata, a Chinese tree growing to about 40 feet in height and named in honor of Father Armand David, a French missionary and botanist who collected many new plants in Western China during the 19th century. It is sometimes called the Chinese Dove tree and the Ghost tree.

The general shape of the tree is rather like that of the Linden. The true blossoms are insignificant—it is the bracts that give the tree its special character, as with the Dogwood and the Poinsettia. In the Davidia, one of the two bracts is as big as a white handkerchief, hence the nickname.

Davidia likes a deep, rich loam soil with plenty of moisture in summer and good drainage in winter. It is propagated readily by cuttings taken in August. Small specimens are available from local nurseries for about $7.50 each.

GREEN AND BLACK FLOWERS (A.W. Duncan). Green flowers are not particularly rare or novel, and there are quite a few commonly grown, including Bells of Ireland, a green rose called viridifolia, gladiolus varieties Green Ice and Green Woodpecker, a green zinnia and quite a few green orchids. The green carnations sold on St. Patrick's Day are dyed.

Your question about black flowers is a bit more difficult. Offhand, I can't think of any flower which could be rated as a true black. Most of the so-called black violas, pansies and tulips are a very dark maroon. They may look black from a distance, but the reddish or purplish tint is quite apparent from close up.

WEEDKILLER USE (J.L.L. Victoria). The hormone chemical weedicides don't work very well in winter, for, in order to reach and poison the weed roots, the chemical must be taken into the bloodstream of the plant by way of the leaf pores. Many of our common weeds die down and show no foliage in winter, and without leaves, they have no means of absorbing the poison. Other kinds have battered, tough old leaves, too leathery to be absorbed. Better wait until spring when the weed leaves will be young, vigorous and with wide-open pores.

Flying Aides Play Show and Tell

Johnson Wins His Peace

By ARTHUR HOPPE

"I'm mighty glad to see all you fellows home again. And I'm right proud of the way you went flying all over the world in 68 different directions in search of peace. And now it's time for Show and Tell. You first, Hubert."

"Yes, sir. And let me say, sir, I was pleased as punch you sent me to India for the funeral. I mean it dispelled a lot of vicious rumors that there was some reason you didn't wish me to represent you on these grim and sorrowful occasions."

"And I had this great peace talk for hours and hours in New Delhi with Premier Kossygin, who was there, too. See? Here are my press clippings. They say it was the longest conference in years between us and them."

"And what did Kossygin say, Hubert?"

"Well, here's the 248-page transcript of our conversation, sir. You'll find his remarks on the very last page. See? Where he says, 'Nyet.'"

"That's fine, Hubert. I'm sure my sending you over there convinced everybody I'm a peace-loving man. And quiet-loving, too. Now what about you—ah... What's your name? Dean?"

"Sorry, sir, my name tag slipped. But Averell and I had a fine trip. As you know we were the only ones to visit Viet Nam. And I'd like to show the agreement we hammered out over there."

"With the Vietcong, Dean? You're talking to them?"

"Oh, no, sir. Not on your life. The agreement's with our ally, Premier Ky. See? We promise to go right on sending him troops and money. And he promises to go right on accepting them."

"I never lost hope that one of you fellows would bring home an agreement. And such a lasting one, too! That's mighty fine, Dean. Now it's your turn, McGeorge. And stop scowling."

"Frankly, sir, I was a little hurt that you'd only send me as far as Ottawa in search of peace. Think how I feel at cocktail parties when people say, 'Hi, there, McGeorge, and where have you been lately?' When I mumble, 'Ottawa,' they arch their eyebrows and go off to talk to someone else."

"Trouble with you, McGeorge, is you haven't got your heart in your work any more. Look at Arthur, here. You know what he found out in Rome? He found out the Pope's in favor of peace, too. Headlines everywhere. Yep, thanks to all these fine fellows flying millions of miles everybody now knows I'm a peace-loving man. What a tremendous success. What a strategic triumph. What a blow for peace."

"But, sir, we don't seem any closer to peace than before."

"Nonsense, Dean. Seeing it's my turn, let me show my latest private poll. Look at that. I'm up 12 points. Yep, due to the greatest peace offensive the world ever saw, I'm going to get a little peace at last."

"In Viet Nam, sir?"

"Viet Nam! Nope, I mean where I need it most. Here at home."

The Little World of SHEILAH GRAHAM

Sharon on Launch Pad

HOLLYWOOD (NANA) — "I think she's going to explode," said producer Marty Ransohoff. He was referring to his 21-year-old discovery, Sharon Tate, who after two years of studying under strict rules of secrecy, will be unveiled this summer to the paying public in "13" with Deborah Kerr and David Niven. "She's a combination of Carole Lombard and Marilyn Monroe, with the sensuousness of Sophia Loren," declared her discoverer. "If the public likes her we'll go all the way." ... As for his problems with Kim Novak, whose bad back caused her to leave the movie 10 days before it was due to finish, Marty is ready to forgive and forget, if she is. "It's a right part comes along for Kim," said Marty with a fine attempt at enthusiasm, "I'll offer it to her." I'm not holding my breath.

Billy Wilder is holding his breath about Walter Matthau's current bout of hepatitis. Billy can shoot around him for a few weeks in The Fortune Cookie, but if the illness lasts longer, with only a few more weeks of filming, Wilder will be up the same kind of creek as he was when Peter Sellers was stricken with a heart attack while making Kiss Me, Stupid two years ago.

Comedian Jack Carter says they are reconciled. But Paula Stewart, expecting their first baby, is very "litty." One thing is sure. If she does go back to Jack, it will be on her terms, not his.

Omar Sharif is dating half the Hollywood beauties. And those he doesn't get, or vice versa, Michael Caine is dining and winning. Nothing serious on either gentleman's mind. But apparently the marriage of Sharif is as rocky as the reports have it. Or maybe he and his wife are happy in what they call "an arrangement." I'll be having a drink with him soon and will get all the facts.

Producer Walter Shenson, who usually makes movies with the Beatles, is hoping Jack Lemmon will star for him in Don't Raise the Bridge, Lower the Water. A title right out of Beckett.

What a time Jon Mankiewicz had one morning of filming Anyone for Venice? He required a coroner's launch at 7 a.m. When nothing arrived, he put in a call to the morgue. It seems there had been so many deaths in Venice that morning that a dozen morgue deliveries had to be made before the launch could be spared for the film. The two most impressive sights on the lagoons of Venice, by the way, are a wedding and a funeral.

Abbe Lane and Perry Lott adopted a baby boy. Abbe lost a baby a few months ago. When she married Perry after the hectic divorce from Cagney, she told me she wanted a large family. This is the start. Meanwhile, back in the studio, Abbe has just completed her Abbe Lane Special to be seen on TV in March.

It had to happen. Michael (Ippocras File) Caine has been discovered, or vice versa, by Natalie Wood, although how they find the time beats me. Nat has just completed This Property is Condemned. Mike is busy in Gambit with Shirley Maerline ... Trial Lopes back in Hollywood after houseguesting with Lana Turner and Bob Eaton down Mexico way.

Sammy Davis in his life autobiography, Yes I Can, tells of the time Rex Harrison turned him down for a role in his film saying, "I want an actor." No one is in more demand than Sammy right now, and you can bet that the next time we see him in his show, it will be a zillion times better than his debut when he was overwhelmed by the reputation of his guests.

First Things First

SYDNEY HARRIS

When Chesterton was asked that tiresomely familiar question, "Which book would you most like to have if you were stranded on a desert island," he replied promptly. Morton's Practical Shipbuilding.

His was the only honest and sensible answer I have ever heard on the subject. The other lofty thinkers to whom this question is posed generally wrinkle their foreheads, jingle their keys, clear their throats portentously and come up with an impressive list along these lines:

The Bible. Shakespeare. Paradise Lost. War and Peace. Divine Comedy. Pascal's Pensees. St. Augustine's Confessions, and a trailing assortment of similar double-decked classics.

Their mistake, I think, is in not listening to the question. They are so riveted on the word "book" that they forget the phrase "desert island." And the first book needed on a desert island would be one designed to get you off it and back to civilization.

If I were forced at gun-point to select 10 or so books, they would include the Bible and a one volume Shakespeare. Beyond these spiritual staples, I would select the following books before I added any other classics.

The Manual of Outdoor Cookery. How to Build Small Boats.

Did You Know?

By HAL BOYLE

Things a columnist might never know if he didn't open his mail:

The U.S. now has more than 3,000,000 divorcees. Nearly 450,000 couples part by divorce or annulment each year. ... About half do so within the first six years of marriage.

How hard is your wife on anyone? ... The average woman uses 12 pairs a year, but some career gals use up to 30 pairs.

Science has found that infants can be born with the "dope habit" ... If a mother takes a certain amount of heroin intravenously each day, her child at birth will be a narcotics addict.

It isn't wealth that makes you fast—it's poverty ... The American Medical Association has estimated that obesity is six times as common among poor women than well-to-do women, twice as common among poor men as rich ones.

The Boy Scout Handbook. The Red Cross Guide to First Aid, a large dictionary, and the fattest omnibus of crossword puzzles I could find between covers.

This, I believe, is a realistic list. It takes account of the fact that man is both a physical creature and a spiritual entity. Dante would be worse than useless on a desert island to a man who could not cook, build, tie a knot securely, or bind a wound afloat.

By the same token, a man on a desert island who possessed these physical skills but lacked the Bible to console him or Shakespeare to sustain him, would become little more than a brute in a short time.

Alexander Selkirk, the castaway who inspired Robinson Crusoe, was scarcely more than an animal when he was finally rescued—indeed, he had virtually forgotten how to speak English! This was what four years without companionship or books did to him.

The man of letters too often ignores the fact that "man" comes before "letters," while the Philistine indifferent to the arts does not recognize what a supreme position they occupy in sustaining his humanity. Each would quickly die—in a different way—on a desert island. And Robinson Crusoe is more than an "adventure story." It is a lesson in the multiple needs that make up a human being.

Indians Planning Art Gallery

Alberta

A band of Indians in southern Alberta will build an art gallery for the 1967 centennial.

This is one of three projects by Alberta Indians announced by the Centennial Commission. They are being carried out under the federal-provincial municipal grants program.

A national conference of Indian editors last week asked financial aid from the commission to publicize its activities.

A commission spokesman said that in the last year at least 10 Indian bands across the country have initiated projects for 1967.

Dr. J. Donovan Ross, Alberta health minister, has announced that measles vaccine will be made available for an estimated 80,000 Alberta children who have not had the disease.

He said in a prepared statement the vaccine will be given to children between three months and three years of age, the group most likely to become "seriously ill" from the disease.

Paul Babey, president of the Farmers' Union of Alberta, disagrees with a recent statement by CPR President R. A. Emerson that the railway has increased grain handling in the west this crop year.

"Alberta farmers have suffered from the standard of service of the CPR and no number of statements from railway officials can disguise that fact."

Alberta dentists will be charging from 20 to 25 per cent more in future, when implementation of newly approved rates go into effect. Directors of the Alberta Dental Association have flashed the green light.

Alberta Liberals in annual convention at Edmonton have gone on record as favoring lowering the legal age limit for buying and drinking liquor to 18 from 21.

They also sought legalization of birth control by amendments to the Criminal Code of Canada.

For the fourth consecutive year British troops are in Canada for winter training.

In two aircraft, 168 men of the 1st Battalion Somerset and Cornwall Light Infantry were set down at Namaso, near Edmonton, and immediately proceeded to winter camp 138 miles southwest of Edmonton and at Cammerton, near Calgary.

This regiment has served in Canada before. It came out in 1775 to fight in the French and Indian war and again in 1812 to meet the American invasion.

Cameron Millikan of Calgary was elected president of the Alberta Young Liberal Association Saturday.

Mr. Millikan was elected at the association's annual meeting, held in conjunction with the annual convention of the Alberta Liberal Party.

Terry McMathson, Calgary, was elected executive vice-president; Linda Thierman, Calgary, secretary; Joe Kryczka, Calgary, vice-president; Bernie Lavalle, Edmonton, vice-president.

Don Dreher, Oshawa, was elected vice-president for central Alberta and Ed Rice, Lethbridge, was elected vice-president for southern Alberta.

Saskatchewan

A young Moose Jaw woman, Mrs. Mary Lor, has been awarded $18,891 in damages against Douglas Smith of Weyburn, following a head-on collision.

Mrs. Lor spent 100 days in hospital with a broken arm and leg, dislocated hip and deep face and head cuts.

Forty years of service were rewarded when F. W. Pohlmann was honored at a mass meeting in the municipality of Grassy Creek.

He has been the community's secretary-treasurer since 1925.

He came to Grassy Creek, near Swift Current, in 1921 with the long-departed Union Bank of Canada.

Saskatchewan's air ambulance service, first of its kind in the world, is celebrating its 20th birthday this year.

First missions were flown in February, 1946.

Now Australia has followed Saskatchewan's lead. Two years ago Chief Pilot Don Campbell took to Sydney, N.S.W., the out-let of Saskatchewan's operation, and helped in its application.

Manitoba

Transport Minister Pickering hopes air passenger traffic to the U.S. from Winnipeg will increase so much that a direct Winnipeg-Chicago route can be negotiated.

Mr. Pickering, questioned in the Commons by Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg-North Centre), and Gordon Churchill (PC—Winnipeg-South Centre), about the U.S.-Canada

Time Out for Ideas

Assuming attitude of relaxation, comedian Jackie Gleason in Miami announces he will not have regular television show next year. He has "done to death" his current series, he says, and wants time off to develop new ideas. (AP)

Pinch Us They Said So Pinch They Did

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Two topless waitresses at a San Francisco nightspot invited customers to "pinch" for themselves, but much to their chagrin that's exactly what two plainclothes policemen did.

Rebecca Wheat, 24, and Anna Gloria Rodriguez, 35, were arrested and charged with performing acts against the public decency.

Observatory To Get New 'Eye'

The federal government has awarded a contract that will soon put another telescope into operation at the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory in Saanich.

On Friday the federal works department announced that Johnson Construction of Victoria had been given a $23,281 contract for the housing of a 16-inch telescope.

The telescope was donated to the observatory two years ago by Robert S. Evans of Victoria.

Dr. R. M. Petrie, Dominion astronomer, said the instrument would be used in photo-electric photometry, studying the relative brightness of star colors.

Coup Victim

Tearful Lagos Buries Premier

LAGOS (Reuters) — Nigerian Prime Minister Sir Abubakar Tafawa Balewa was buried Saturday, 24 hours after his decomposed body was found on the outskirts of Lagos, a victim of the uprising that swept his government from power a week ago.

Many of the hundreds of mourners wept at the funeral near Sir Abubakar's family home at Bauchi, 750 miles from Lagos. A six-man delegation represented the military government of Moslem Northern Nigeria, the premier's homeland.

KIDNAP VICTIM

Balewa, 53, was kidnapped at the start of the military revolt and was the subject of a wide-spread search after it was quelled. His body was found Friday near a lonely roadside 27 miles from Lagos.

Bauchi was hushed as the body arrived by air, accompanied by two senior police officers, a few hours after the end of the Moslem Fast of Ramadan. Balewa was a devout Moslem.

CALLS FOR PRAYERS

The region's military governor, Maj. Hassan Kasina, cancelled all the traditional ceremonies which usually follow the ending of Ramadan and called for special prayers for the late prime minister.

Sir Abubakar was one of the West's best friends in turbulent Africa and had especially close ties with Britain.

'GREAT SON'

The military government issued Saturday morning a statement confirming Balewa's body had been found.

Uncensored Report Out at Last

How Nation Lost It's Head

TORONTO (CP) — How Sir Abubakar Tafawa Balewa died was told for the first time Saturday when The Star printed a censor-delayed story by Mark Harrison.

The story detailed the early-morning shooting of the Nigerian prime minister and gave details of how other top government officials were dispatched.

Harrison, filing his story from London after censors in Lagos refused to pass it, said Balewa and three other officials were shot by soldiers in three separate cities during simultaneous raids at 3 a.m. Saturday, Jan. 15.

Harrison flew into Lagos from the Congo last weekend, a few hours after Balewa's government was overthrown. He was still in Africa after leaving Lagos where he had covered the Commonwealth conference a few days earlier.

Balewa was missing for a week after the military overthrow of his government. (Reuters news agency reported Saturday that his body had been found Friday 27 miles from Lagos. Government officials reported his death but gave no details of the circumstances.)

Harrison also described the shootings of: Finance Minister Festus Okotie-Eboh, whose body was found with gunshot wounds Wednesday; Sir Ahmadu Bello, 56-year-old Sardauna of Sokoto, premier of Nigeria's Northern region; and Chief Samuel Akintola, 53-year-old premier of the Western region.

Harrison gave these details of the killing of the 53-year-old Balewa at his Lagos home:

CONSPIRATORS — "Armed conspirators broke into the home... overpowered his police bodyguard, and carried off the man regarded as one of the most respected leaders of the Commonwealth."

"He, too, was shot dead but his body was hidden."

"Next door, another group of

Kids 'Corner' Phones

VANCOUVER (CP) — Lines have been so busy in West and North Vancouver that the B.C. Telephone Co. has appealed to parents to control their gossiping children.

The company says gangs of youngsters have discovered a way to conduct communal chats over the phone from their homes.

Angry subscribers who use the 11,430 party lines in the areas complain they find the lines blocked for long periods. The company says there is nothing it can do about it, other than appealing to the parents.

"We don't want to let out how they can all talk to each other," a company spokesman said Friday.

"People phone up a party line and all they hear are youngsters talking to each other and making dates."

Engineers, who could not detect who was making the calls, cut in on the line to tell the youngsters to hang up.

"All they get is abuse."

Big Catch For Wrecker

Adrift on Ice 52 Rescued

PORT CLINTON, Ohio (UPI) — An ice floe jammed with fishermen broke loose from shore during a heavy snowstorm Saturday and drifted a half mile into Lake Erie. The Coast Guard and fire department rescued all 52 stranded anglers within 36 minutes.

The ice ranged from four to eight inches in thickness, a Coast Guard spokesman said.

'Avoid Politics' Ministers Press For Clemency

SALISBURY (Reuters) — Two Methodist ministers are appealing to the British and Rhodesian prime ministers on behalf of more than 20 Negroes under sentence of death here.

"The ministers, who act as prison chaplains to the men in the condemned cells of Salisbury jail, are asking Prime Ministers Wilson and Ian Smith for an early review of each case with a view to commuting the death sentence."

In a statement issued here the two ministers spoke of their dismay at the possibility that the question of granting clemency to condemned men "may be dragged into the arena of political controversy."

The two ministers are Rhodesian-born Rev. Gary Strong, Methodist minister for the Salisbury suburb of Greendale, and Negro Methodist minister, Rev. Shadrach Ushewokunze.

The clergymen's plea follows a dispute between Britain and the Smith regime over two Negroes sentenced to death on charges of attempted arson.

The Queen has ordered the reprieve of the two men, and commuted their sentences to life imprisonment. The Rhodesian government has a p e a d y announced it will not recognize the reprieve of one of the Negroes, a man named Lazarus.

Huge Dam 'Symbol Of Peace'

ACCRA (Reuters) — President Kwame Nkrumah Saturday inaugurated the $425,000,000 Volta River hydroelectric scheme at Akosombo northward of here, the Ghana news agency reported.

Nkrumah called the project a concrete symbol of the type of international co-operation which can help forge world peace.

Britain was not represented at ceremony because Ghana has broken off relations over Rhodesia.

Avalanche Blocks Road

AOSTA, Italy (UPI) — An avalanche roared down the Aosta valley's main road Saturday, blocking car traffic to and from France through the Mount Blanc tunnel.

The avalanche half-buried a number of cars, but there were no injuries. Authorities said they hoped snowplows could clear the road before midnight.

DULCE, N.M. (AP) — A reported earth tremor jarred Dulce and other communities in northern New Mexico Saturday night. State police said many houses and buildings in the Dulce area were damaged.

'U.S. Losing Peace Blue Chip'

Pressure Is On: Resume Bombing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senators made public Saturday a vigorous plea by a top U.S. military leader, Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, to resume bombing of North Viet Nam.

"If you stop bombing North Viet Nam, in effect, you throw one of your blue chips for negotiation over your shoulder," the chairman of the joint chiefs of staff told a closed session of the Senate armed services and appropriations committee.

President Johnson ordered a halt to the bombing of North Viet Nam 30 days ago in an attempt to induce North Vietnamese and Viet Cong leaders to negotiate a ceasefire or peace.

Senator Richard B. Russell (Dem.-Ga.), chairman of the two Senate panels who have been listening to secret testimony by the general and Defense Secretary Robert McNamara, made public the testimony with Wheeler's permission.

Wheeler appeared before the committees on Thursday and Friday. The testimony released today was given Thursday.

His advocacy of heavy bombing of North Viet Nam came when he was asked about proposals by James Gavin, retired general and former ambassador, that the U.S. halt bombing and offensive warfare in South Viet Nam and withdraw its forces to a group of military enclaves or centres which could be stoutly defended.

'Can't Close Eyes To Hanoi Hostility'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson renewed Saturday night a pledge to continue his efforts for peace in Viet Nam but had some somber observations about "continuing hostility and aggressiveness in Hanoi."

In a letter to a group of 76 Democratic members of the House of Representatives who urged him to persevere in his month-old peace offensive, Johnson wrote:

"We are making no hasty assumptions of any sort, but it is quite another matter to close our eyes to the heavy weight of evidence which has accumulated in the last month."

The president's sober appraisal of peace prospects was released by the White House a few hours after it was learned that Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, feels that any permanent halt in the bombing of North Viet Nam would weaken this nation's efforts to arrange peace negotiations.

The congressmen in a letter to Johnson urged him Friday to ask the United Nations to arrange an effective cease-fire.

On this point the president wrote that he is "firmly determined to make every possible use of the UN in moving toward peace, and toward an effective cease-fire as part of that purpose."

Step-Up Likely In Jungle War

SAIGON (AP) — The lattered truce of the Lunar New Year entered its final hours today and allied forces braced against the possibility of fresh combat operations before Monday's dawn.

Factors on both sides, including the landing of 7,000 additional American troops in Viet Nam last week and broadcast calls from Hanoi Friday for harder Communist strikes, suggested the war will be intensified.

U.S. military authorities attributed 66 violations of the truce to the Viet Cong, one a terrorist bombing early Saturday of a U.S. Signal Corps billet a mile from Saigon's Tan Son Nhut airport.

No 'Avon' Profiteers by Churchill Grave

Bladon Shuts Out Hucksters

By WALTER DAVIS

BLADON, England (Reuters) — This tiny Oxfordshire village where Sir Winston Churchill lies buried today shows signs of winning its battle against commercialization despite the arrival of more than 1,000,000 visitors since the statesman's death.

The parish council is determined that Churchill will "not do for Bladon what Shakespeare has done for Stratford," parish clerk Charles French said.

"We must prevent the exploitation of private profit or greed in the last resting place of one of England's greatest sons."

Bladon is a simple workaday village of stone houses, three stores, two bars and a filling station. It has none of the thatched cottages of the nearby Cotswold Hills, a noted scenic spot.

However, its 988 inhabitants want to retain their rural way of life and avoid the hustle and bustle associated with such shrines as Stratford on Avon.

The villagers object to the slamming of car doors and dislike having people stare over their fences while lining up to see Churchill's grave. One woman says she will never sunbathe in her garden again.

The villagers also want to avoid the opening of tea gardens, hot-dog stand and bus stations, and so far the council has succeeded in preventing this.

Since the great statesman was buried on Jan. 30, 1965, in the yard of the village Church of St. Martin, the churchyard walk has been bordered by Churchill's own gardeners with roses.

Visitors often wonder why such a great man lies buried in the country churchyard when he could have been laid to rest in such great national shrines as Westminster Abbey or St. Paul's Cathedral. The decision to be buried at Bladon was Churchill's own, however.

A man with a great sense of history and family tradition, he chose to be buried next to his parents and brother in sight of his birthplace, built for his famous warrior ancestor, the first Duke of Marlborough.

Tapping with a stick at the spot where he now lies, Churchill once told the church sexton: "This is my place, here."

Institute Plans Study Of Alcohol Problems

Peterson Makes Plea

'Equalize Learning Across Canada'

Education minister Peterson called Saturday for national co-ordination of higher education.

He also said his department would concentrate on co-ordinating courses in post-secondary education within the province in the next two years.

The minister spoke at a dinner in the Empress Hotel tendered by the government for student leaders holding a week-end conference here.

HOPES FOR 'CONSIDERATION'

Mr. Peterson said he hoped for "some common consideration across Canada as far as standards are concerned."

He said the provinces should get together on post-secondary education standards so that vocational and technical certificates in one province would be valid in any other.

"What I'd like to see in time is national certification," said Mr. Peterson.

'FOCUS ATTENTION'

"This year we will focus more attention on co-ordination than we have in the past, in various programs of post-secondary education," he went on.

He later explained that some programs were "not sufficiently defined."

"There has not, in some instances, been sufficient leadership in certain fields," he conceded.

The minister said his department would develop new programs at the junior college and technical school levels to provide continued opportunity for study past high school.

'DEFINED OBJECTIVES'

"My major concern is that we have clearly-defined objectives for students."

"We have to develop new programs in these areas after the secondary level."

In a question period, Mr. Peterson avoided committing himself on future provincial government contributions toward higher education. He said it would be "unrealistic" to expect an increase proportionate to that disclosed by the federal government last week.

Prime minister Pearson announced that Ottawa's operating grant would be boosted to $3 per capita from $2.

"I do hope that the provincial legislatures, in their wisdom, will authorize increases," Mr. Peterson added.

A two-day institute on alcohol problems will be presented by major organizations of Greater Victoria concerned with social welfare Feb. 17 in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Kirk Hall and Feb. 18 in the YM-YWCA.

Main speakers will be Rev. Wayne Pummer, chaplain of Oregon State Penitentiary; Dr. Charles Gregory, Victoria psychiatrist; R. L. Clarkson and Dr. O. Minovitz of the Alcoholism Foundation of B.C., and William G. Wilson, executive director of the Alcohol Research and Education Council of B.C.

AA VIEWS

The views of Alcoholics Anonymous will be presented by a representative of AA's public service.

Also sharing in the program will be Capt. Elvet Morgan of the Salvation Army's Harbor Light Corps; Dr. W. H. Gaddes, psychology department, University of Victoria; Rev. Robert J. D. Morris of First United Church; Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, Metropolitan Board of Health; L. C. Karaglanis, Greater Victoria School Board.

Rev. A. E. King, Metropolitan United Church; Rev. A. E. Leonard, St. Patrick's Roman Catholic Church; John W. Nicol, secretary of the Retail Food and Drug Clerks Union; Rev. H. T. Allen, secretary of the Religion-Labor Council.

Mr. Allen is general chairman for the two-day institute. Registrar is Rev. R. N. Mugford, 512 Catherine Street.

"Individuals as well as organizations may share these valuable lectures and discussions," said Mr. Allen.

Full programs of the institute will be sent out in various organizations this week.

So Says Jack Webster

Robbie Burns Today: 'He'd Be a Beatnik'

By GORDON DODD

Robbie Burns was alive today...

"He would be one of the genuine people plotting for peace in Viet Nam..."

"If a young man, he would have long hair... and you and I would be looking down our noses at him as a beatnik..."

'A SOCIAL MENACE'

"They would be wanting to put him in an institution as a social menace..."

But they still drank a toast to the immortal Scottish bard—250 of the Burns loyalists, who attended the celebration in his honor last night by the St. Andrew's and Caledonian Society.

WEBSTER EULOGIZES

Vancouver broadcaster Jack Webster, himself a self-confessed "professional rambler," did most of the eulogizing. The quoted words were his.

But if Robbie Burns was a rebel, "you don't necessarily condemn a man who doesn't measure up to our own particular standards of conventional morality," said Webster.

NO RECOGNITION

Yet according to the exiled Glaswegian, there would be no sense of recognition for the master of political satire in our society today.

Last night in the Sir William Wallace room of Holyrood House they did the memory of Burns well, but it was only the start of the annual commemoration by Victoria's Scots-blooded population of about 12,000.

PIRANAGE TODAY

Today, Burns lovers will make their usual pilgrimage to Beacon Hill Park to lay wreaths at the foot of the monument erected 66 years ago by admirers.

But Tuesday is THE day—the actual birth date of the poet.

The myths of Saturday's ceremonies—including the traditional address to, and consumption of, the haggis—will be repeated by the host patrons of the occasion, the local Burns Club, with between 175 and 180 attending.

soldiers hauled Finance Minister Festus Okotie-Eboh from his bed. The quaking minister pleaded for his life and offered his captors up to $1,000,000 to spare him, but in vain.

"His bullet-riddled body was found four days later..."

TROOPS TAKE OTHERS

"A detachment of Nigeria's Fifth Army Brigade moved silently through the streets of Kaduna, dusty capital of the Northern region."

"The soldiers crept into position around a modern, $300,000 house and awaited the signal to strike."

ROME SHELLED

"Inside, asleep, lay Sir Ahmadu Bello... suddenly a mortar shell exploded against the roof. Rifle and sub-machine gun fire riddled the house and troops smashed down the front and side doors and moved inside."

"The premier dashed from his upstairs bedroom and got almost to the kitchen door before he was riddled with bullets."

"...one of the premier's wives burst into the room, and clutching her husband's body, screamed hysterically until a burst of gunfire silenced her..."

OTHER ATTACKS

"At precisely the same time another band of soldiers struck at a darkened home in Ibadan, 500 miles to the southwest."

Chief Samuel Adintola...

was roused from his bed and shot dead. His 14-year-old son, home on vacation from Ebon, died with his father."

NO DELAY

Following the killings, says Harrison, "the army conspirators moved swiftly and smoothly to take control. Other federal cabinet ministers were told to pack... and return to their villages."

"Troops surrounded the cable office and broadcasting station, cut off all communications with the outside world, and set up barbed wire roadblocks on the road to the airport."

"At 9 a.m. parliament met... but only a handful of the 312 MPs showed up, lingered for six minutes, then fled."

"Fourteen hours later Lagos Radio announced that supreme military council... had taken power."

KIDNAPPED IN COUP

Balewa was kidnapped a week ago Saturday along with Finance Minister Chief Festus Okotie-Eboh and was for a while thought to be held as a hostage. The finance minister was later found shot dead.

Informed sources said Balewa's body was found near a pool where village women did their washing. It appeared it had been dumped at the spot sometime Friday.

OFFICERS' PLOT

The official announcement was issued by the new federal military government. This was set up after Maj.-Gen. Johnson Aguiyi-Ironsi took over control of the country in the wake of disturbances plotted by junior officers.

Balewa had been prime minister of Nigeria since 1957, three years before the country gained independence from Britain.

Your Good Health

Cancer Can Be Hereditary But More Often It's Not

By JOSEPH MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: Is cancer hereditary? There has been cancer in my family as far back as my great grandmother, and down to my father, and two of my aunts—MRS. L.J.

The question is rather difficult, but I can give you a yes-and-no answer.

Should you expect to have cancer because an ancestor or relative had it? The answer is no.

But should you be extra careful if relatives have had cancer? The answer is yes—for some kinds of cancer.

INFLUENCE

Hereditary is not an all-or-nothing influence. But if your ancestors for 500 years have had black hair and dark eyes (or blond hair and blue eyes) you are just about certain to be like them.

However, if both of your parents had diabetes, you have a strong chance of it, but not a certain one. And if only one parent (or only one side of the family) had it, your chance of diabetes is less.

Cancer rarely is truly hereditary, although in some types there is a "familial tendency," and only occasionally can it be clearly hereditary. Remember that there are many kinds of cancer, and they don't all follow the same rules.

Studies over several generations show that certain cancers tend to appear more often in some families. Cancer of the breast, cervix and rectum seem to have hereditary tendencies.

IRRITATION

Yet cancer of the lip (evidently caused by chronic irritation) and others of that type show no sign of heredity. People whose fathers die of lung cancer probably will NOT get lung cancer if they quit smoking!

The big question of cancer is whether certain types of highly malignant cancer of the eye which occasionally attacks children has been established as hereditary—even though the parents may not have had such malignancy. Hereditary sometimes builds up the intensity of its influence.

TWINS AFFECTED

When one identical twin develops cancer in some organ, the other twin will do the same in about nine times out of 10—yet their parents may not have had cancer in that organ. The twins, in such cases, have inherited a tendency, or a weakness, although they haven't inherited the disease.

For practical purposes, if a number of your ancestors, or family, have had cancer of various kinds, it doesn't mean that you will have cancer, too. Greater susceptibility? Perhaps, yes.

And for some particular kind of cancer, as mentioned in the foregoing, you have a stronger chance of developing it, and therefore should be examined a little more regularly.

The big question with cancer is not whether you develop the disease, but whether you detect it soon enough to have it treated.

The Weather

Cloudy with occasional light rain, little change in temperature. Outlook Monday, cloudy with a few showers. Winds light. Saturday's precipitation nil, sunshine 1 hour, 24 minutes, recorded high and low at Victoria 44 and 36. Today's forecast high and low 42 and 35. Council Sets Budget

By HELEN MUIR
GOLD RIVER — The new council of Gold River had a busy session bringing down the provisional budget, and going to work on the pressing issues of 1966.

Facing the council was the business of setting up a new municipality and investing it with concrete laws and a format for government.
The provisional budget was estimated by municipal clerk David Wilson, who says it is "a mere forecast of what will be in the annual budget to come."

He quoted $147,000 as a close figure.
MOST FOR PLANT
Of this figure, the major portion of $80,000 was to go towards the sewage disposal plant, and $48,265 was earmarked for education, as estimated by the secretary of the school board.

CEMETERY NEEDED
The remainder is to be allocated for administration costs of the municipal office, sanitation and waste removal, fire department, recreational services, and the initial establishment of a cemetery.
The budget will be aided by an estimated $17,560 grant by the provincial government.

CENTENNIAL PLAN
$3,000 was estimated for a centennial program. This is a tentative figure because funds matched by the provincial and federal governments are based on population at the time of grants.
A centennial committee has already been formed, and will be making proposals to council in the near future.

FIRE BRIGADE
Other matters brought up at the meeting were the fire brigade, the installation of a standby water pump, previously purchased, and the establishment of town By-laws for hunting zones, discharge of firearms, traffic, and business licences.

RIFLE LAW
Discharge of all firearms will be prohibited within the townsite. Conservation officers, with the municipality, will decide suitable boundaries for no-hunting zones.
It is expected that future legislation on hunting zones will cover unincorporated territories of B.C. adjacent to settled municipalities.

VOLUNTEERS
With regard to the volunteer fire services, Mr. Wilson said that six people were lined up as volunteers, hydrant houses were all equipped with hoses and ladders. All fire stations are set up, with a siren to be installed in the townsite.
It was suggested that all the facts of procedures dealing with fires at the actual townsite, be brought to the next meeting.

AIR PROJECT
During the meeting, a letter was read from William McAdam, president of Trans-Mountain Air Services, with a request for use of an airstrip which he suggested be constructed on a portion of the Ucona logging road.
PWA LINK
The letter pointed out the advantages to the residents of an air service close to the townsite, which would connect with Pacific Western Airlines at Campbell River for flights to Vancouver.
At present, the area is served by Island Airlines, based at Gold River beach camp, 10 miles from the townsite; and by B.C. Airlines scheduled flights to the beach camp.
GOOD STRIP
When it was found that this portion of the road will be used for some time for logging operations, Councillor David Kilpatrick suggested examining other land around Gold River valley for a suitable airstrip, as close to the townsite as possible.

Conference Shows Way

Students May Unite

A B.C. union of students may result from a conference being held at the University of Victoria this weekend.
More than 30 student leaders from 10 post-secondary schools are meeting to debate common problems. B.C.'s four universities, a junior college, four schools of nursing and the B.C. Institute of Technology are represented.
It is the first conference of its kind in this province. Organizers were Paul Williamson and Kathleen Harvey, president and secretary of the University of Victoria student council.

Today's discussion may produce a draft proposal for a provincial union of students, likely to be debated for months before any new student group is born.
Student autonomy occupied much of Saturday's talks in the Student Union Building. Autonomy varies widely in B.C. post-secondary schools, from the independent student councils and newspapers of the universities to the tight discipline exercised by the administration of nursing schools.

UBC delegate Mike Sommers, treasurer of his student council, estimates a budget of more than $750,000. One student nurse reported that her council could not even establish a club without permission of the school of nursing.

Clubs—UBC has 120—occupy much extra-curricular time of university students. But Ken McLean, president of the student council at the B.C. Institute of Technology at Burnaby, said eight hours daily in class plus home study left no time for campus activities.
Formation of any provincial student union will largely depend on whether the weekend's talks produce enough common interests among the schools.

Chemainus Crash Injures Two Men

CHEMAINUS—An accident at Fullers Lake Road and Trans-Canada Highway sent two men to hospital in Chemainus about 5 p.m. Friday.
Campbell McDonald, 44, Victoria, was unconscious for several hours and Wayne Harbord, 19, Duncan, driver of the car, suffered leg and head injuries when thrown through the windshield.

Norman Murray, Powell River, escaped injury when his car collided with the vehicle driven by Harbord.

NANAIMO—Vic's Foodliner Ltd. was charged with unlawfully selling goods contrary to the Lord's Day Act in police court Friday.

Vic Dixon, owner of the IGA Supermarket at Wellington, north of Nanaimo, was in court and he pleaded not guilty.
The case was remanded until Feb. 22.
In the afternoon Keith Austin Stady, no fixed address, was sentenced to three years in the B.C. penitentiary for theft over $50.

Stady entered the hotel room of a deaf mute, Norman Goulet, and stole articles of clothing on Jan. 13.

Two 18-year-old girls from Fanny Bay pleaded guilty to theft under $50 Friday.
The girls were Barbara Ethel Phillips and Loretta Elizabeth Jacquelyn Sampson.

Miss Phillips was picked up by police and was unable to produce a sales slip for a bra-siere and girdle she had stolen from T. Eaton Co.
Miss Sampson stole two parcels belonging to Mrs. Myrtle Blaxhall, an employee of Jean Burns Ltd.

Bail was refused and they were remanded until Feb. 2 for a pre-sentence report.
ALERT BAY—A logger known all along the B.C. coast is missing and presumed drowned near here.
Harold Brownson, 56, disappeared Thursday night from a Bryant Logging Co. float camp on Chatham Channel, 30 miles east of Alert Bay.

CUMBERLAND—A special meeting of the ambulance society endorsed the recommendation of the fire chief and decided to purchase a second unit for the new ambulance.
The vehicle was required when the former ambulance was demolished in an accident near Duncan while on an emergency trip to Victoria.

The meeting was told a new vehicle will arrive soon, and as a two cot unit would be more effective.

PORT ALBERNI—Robert Thomas has been elected new Chief Councillor of the Seashah band at the election held Thursday in the Sonoma community hall. Because he received the most votes for councillor, Mr. Thomas becomes chief automatically.

The three others elected were Jimmy Gallic, Taddy Watts and Tommy Watts. Of the four, only Mr. Gallic has been on the council previously.
All four men are well-known and active in native affairs locally. Their election goes along with the current trend to electing younger men to the position of councillor in Indian bands.

LADYSMITH—An inquest will be held into the death of Jenny Patterson whose body was found at the home of Jack Lake, Ladysmith, Jan. 19.

An autopsy was performed at Nanaimo General Hospital.

DUNCAN—Five topics have been chosen by Duncan Rotarians for the annual adventure in citizenship for high school students here.
The event will take place at the Cowichan High School, Feb. 23.

The topics:

- Is the American armed intervention in Viet Nam justified?
- Should Canada permit the export of its resources of water?
- Is the unilateral declaration of independence by Rhodesia justified?
- Are sufficient safety features built into our present automobiles?
- Do you favor the granting of industrial concessions in our provincial or national parks?

PORT ALBERNI—The ceremony of draping the charter preceded the regular order of business at a recent meeting of the Order of the Royal Purple in the Elks Hall.
The draping was performed out of respect for the memory of Mrs. Barbara Gibson, leader of the lodge drill team, who died suddenly last weekend after collapsing in a downtown parking lot.

LADYSMITH—Two juveniles were charged with theft of a tankometer valued at $40 taken from a sports car. The vehicle was parked overnight in Ladysmith.
Given one week remand, the boys will appear before Magistrate Lance Heard Jan. 28.

DUNCAN—Duncan Teen Town's executive has been approached by the Vancouver Island Teen Association asking if the local group would be willing to sponsor an association conference at Duncan next month.

The local group's adult supervisor Jim Qualie said, "It is a wonderful opportunity and with the help of local civic governments and the RCMP we shall be able to carry out the request."

PORT ALBERNI—Heavy snowfall over the Christmas season was responsible for lay-offs

Sheep Owner Hunts In America

SIDNEY ISLAND—Owner of more than 80 sheep missing from Sidney Island went hunting on American soil Friday, but came up with no clues.
Jack Todd, who was accompanied by RCMP on his trip to Friday Island, believes the sheep have been rustled and taken across the border.

MANY CALLS
Numerous phone calls have flowed in since announcement of a $1,000 reward for information. None have been helpful.
Mr. Todd spotted the sheep gone around Christmas time. He says there had also been thefts from other Gulf Islands.

REWARD
He said Friday the reward announcement was being circulated in the U.S. in the hope of information.

He also disclosed that the sheep missing from Sidney Island were marked with red dye behind the neck.

If folk music is dying, Victoria hasn't seen the obituary.

Places like the Dungeon are keeping the flame alive with weekly sessions.

The Dungeon is on campus, and is run by student Kevan Hull.

The place features groups like The Noneuch Trio, Dennis Donnelly, Roberta Venle and Grant Crittenden.

Members of the group are all originally from Nanaimo. Their debut was in the Village Coffee-house, Qualicum, last summer.

Playing at the Dungeon, as they did last night, they use a wide range of material from contemporary Bob Dylan songs to old English madrigals.

Also on the folk scene, rumor indicated THAT coffeehouse may again open downtown, but plans at the moment are a deep dark secret.

Ed Simpson-Baile has been named chairman of the folk people in Victoria.

Jerry Gooley is on a trip to Amsterdam, London, Ireland, and New York "searching for inspiration and material to ensure a fresh look for the 1966 edition of the Smile Show."

While in New York he is appearing on television and radio to perform and talk about Victoria and the Smile Show.

The show in New York is with Ralph Carroll, who saw the Smile Show three years ago.

Bastion Theatre's Royal Gambit isn't the only waterhole in the desert. Lady Smith produced the same play Friday and Saturday for pre-adjudication in the Dominion Drama Festival.

Two B.C. entries in the DDF have dropped out.

West Vancouver Theatre Guild and Emerald Players, both in the Greater Vancouver area, planned to do original Canadian plays, but couldn't find the right casts.

Bastion Theatre officials got a shock when they read in the Colonist recently that on several municipal agendas was "a grant for Bastion Theatre."

The company officials didn't know anything about it, but were pleased to find University Women's Club had gone to bat for them. Councils asked for the grants did not make immediate decisions.

Modern Theatre, Profile in Action is the title of the Northwest Drama Conference at University of Oregon this year.

Among discussions Feb. 10-12 will be Government and the Arts, Innovations in Production, and Training Techniques.

Musicians union in Victoria is cracking down on some of the members who have been playing for below-scale pay.

Viet Cong Missed Martha

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Comedienne Martha Raye says she missed being trapped in a bloody Viet Cong battle at a remote South Viet Nam outpost by minutes.

"Our helicopter took off just before they attacked," said Martha on her return here from 2½ months of entertaining troops.

It was the 48-year-old comedienne's second tour in a year in Viet Nam, and her third war. The Second World War and Korea came before.

Heart Attack Kills Herbert Marshall

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Actor Herbert Marshall, 75, 50 years in show business, died Saturday of a heart attack.

The handsome actor led an adventurous life. He lost a leg during the First World War when he and Ronald Colman were in the 14th London Scots Regiment.

He was married five times. Three marriages ended in divorces; to model Lee Russell, actress Edna Best and model Molly Matland. His fourth wife, ex-showgirl Boots Mallory, died in 1958. He married his fifth wife, Mrs. Dee Anne Kahmann, a department-store buyer, in Los Angeles in 1960.

Faces New, Material Used

Spring Thaw has a new producer, some new actors, but much of the same material that has been used many times since the satirical revue was born in 1948.

While the show promises some new faces and some new scenes, much of what comes to Victoria this week has been a staple of the show.

New producer is Robert John. Director and choreographer is son, replacing Mavor Moore.

NORTH BREEZES

Messrs. Toone, Bryant, Cox and Curtis are urging "Why wait for spring—do it now."

This approach might be a necessity in the frozen East—but have you been out the last couple of Sundays?

The birds are singing, the forsythia buds are quivering, peonies are stretching their red fingers out of the ground, the pussy willows are purring and the daffs have fixed bayonets.

Tonight it will still be light at almost 5:30. We might be snowed upon before this gets into print, but there's hardly a job that couldn't be done right now. In fact, we're going to wash the car—right after we have a little nap.

IMPERIAL congratulates to new Goodwill director Robert Dudley; new director of Canadian Mental Health Association Mrs. Joan Danks; new Nanaimo police commissioner J. H. McClelland and four drivers touring East for tourists, John Bamford and Wayne McArthur.

Youth Fined $75 For Disturbance

Partying teen-agers broke Friday night, central magis. beer bottles and climbed treestreet's court was told Saturday, outside a home at 631 Cornwall Robert McCrae, who lives at the house, pleaded guilty to causing a public disturbance. He was fined $75.

Constable Kenneth Horsman said about 15 teen-agers were at the party, including three juvenile girls. Excessive noise was coming from the house, he said.

Constable Horsman said he saw smashed beer and wine bottles in the area.

McCrae refused the policeman entry to the house and one 18-year-old youth went outside and was subsequently arrested for being intoxicated in a public place.

"The accused came out shouting and swearing," Constable Horsman said. "He made an unsuccessful attempt to rescue the 18-year-old."

McCrae told Magistrate Harold Alder: "I didn't know about all this going on outside the house though."

Magistrate Alder: "Situations of this sort are most disturbing and disgusting to the public."

Master Plan Needed

'Rally the Arts For Centre Downtown'

The Community Arts Council should rally the forces of the arts behind a master plan for a downtown arts centre and an appeal to the city or provincial government for funds.

This was the consensus of a symposium on "arts and the community" at the Phoenix Theatre at University of Victoria Saturday.

During a discussion period, the meeting was told from the floor that the city had already supported the arts with about $150,000 in grants and absorbing losses of theatre groups.

'HARD-HEADED'

"They are hard-headed businessmen, but if they see a possible return — and it doesn't have to be in money—they'll listen to a reasonable and specific plan," the spokesman said.

Panel member Robin Wood of the Victoria School of Music agreed, and urged the arts council to seek representation from the city's myriad art groups and organize a presentation.

WANT BUILDING

It was specifically suggested that the city hand over the Heaney building in Bastion Square to serve as rehearsal space and as a place where local graphic artists could show their work and sell it.

"In Victoria, as far as the arts are concerned, there is just nowhere to go," another member of the audience said.

A FOCAL POINT

It was suggested a centre, such as the one described would provide a focal point for the arts in Victoria.

The idea of the arts centre was first suggested by artist Richard Cicimarra who was on the panel.

"It is extremely important to graphic artists to have a central place where people can see their work," he said. "I could visualize it being run on the municipal level, as it is done in many other places."

'SUPPORT ITSELF'

"I rather suspect it could support itself through sales," he said.

During the panel discussion, Mr. Cicimarra said the Victoria art scene presents a healthy picture.

"For the general apathy and sleepiness of Victoria, the reception given local artists is incredible—Incredibly good."

"The per capita appreciation, in the amount of money spent on art, is probably far greater than in any comparable city in Canada."

HAS REQUIREMENTS

In music, the city has two basic requirements, said Mr. Wood: a nucleus of professional musicians and a progressive musical education to widen the number of people interested.

"For a city of this size, a professional orchestra is out of the question," he said. "Not more than five per cent of the people would come to concerts. This can only be enlarged through education."

USE RADIO

"Much could be done by radio and television," he said. "The commercial broadcasting principle has a lot to answer for."

Actor-director Tony Nicholson said Victoria "is not far behind other centres in sophistication and knowing what is good in art."

Kidd Threat To Austrian Ski Monopoly

KITZBUHEL, Austria (AP) — Karl Schranz of Austria won the Hahnenkamm downhill ski race Saturday ahead of fellow-Austrian Stran Gerhard Nennig.

American Bill Kidd was third, establishing him as a dangerous threat to the Austrian downhill supremacy after having successfully challenged the top Europeans in both the slalom and giant slalom.

Scott Henderson of Calgary and Banff, Alta., led the Canadians with a 2nd-place finish. His time was 2:21.93.

Peter Duncan of Sherbrooke, Que., was 31st in 2:22.46 and Bob Swan of Winnipeg and Chateaufort, Que., was 58th in 2:28.78.

Here Tuesday

Former minister of external affairs Howard Green will be in Victoria for an 8 p.m. Tuesday panel discussion in St. John Ambulance Hall, 941 Pandora, on Should Canada

Join the Organisation of American States. Other speakers at public meeting sponsored by World Federalists of Canada will be Professor C. S. Barrett, Royal Roads, Dr. J. C. M. Ogilby, University of Victoria, and Tony Noble, University of Victoria student.

Continued Fees

To further ensure independence from excessive provincial financing, the speaker favored continuation of student fees.

Undergraduate student fees for the year 1963-64 averaged $480, he said.

His estimated average summer earnings per student at $710.

With a federal grant of $1,000, "such an arrangement would provide all students with the cash required to attend university."

REPORT CRITICIZED

Dr. Rosenbluth criticized the Bladen Commission report with "its emphasis on loans and means tests" as "second-best solutions."

Repayment of loans hit a graduate student at a time when he was starting to establish a household and his line of work.

"Onerous" was the term he used.

$1,000 Student Grant Urged

An annual grant of $1,000 paid directly to each university student in Canada by the federal government was proposed Saturday by Professor Gideon Rosenbluth of the department of economics at UBC.

Such a grant, he told the Fabian Forum of B.C. at its weekend school on financing education held in the Sidney Hotel, would provide equality of opportunity and act as a protection against the danger of provincial government control.

"The danger of excessive dependence on provincial governments must be stressed," said Dr. Rosenbluth.

Hunt Again Double Winner In City Badminton Meet

Bob Hunt is still the king of Victoria badminton, and without a serious challenger.

Hunt won the Victoria men's singles championship for the ninth time, the last six in a row, last night when he defeated Richard O'Neill in the final, 15-1, 15-3.

JUST A HABIT
And Hunt teamed with Ed Hedley for still another victory in the men's doubles, defeating veterans George Lane and Eric Hibberson, 15-4, 15-12.

It was the eighth time in nine years and the third time in a row that the Hunt-Hedley combination had won. Their victory streak was temporarily halted by Lane and Hibberson in 1963.

Gillian Thomas and Jean Massey were also double winners last night. Miss Thomas defeated Miss Massey, 11-6, 11-1, in the ladies' singles final, then teamed with her defeated opponent to best the mother-daughter pairing of Muriel and Pat Knott, 15-8, 15-5, in the doubles final.

Miss Massey teamed with Lloyd Park to score a bit of an upset in the mixed doubles by defeating defending champions Diana Godfrey and Hedley, 15-8, 15-16, 15-5.

CHAMPS UPSET
Another upset was scored in the men's veteran doubles when Lane and Bob McMurchie, six-time champions who had a

Financial Crisis Endangers Canadian Davis Cup Entry

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada will not be able to send a team to the annual Davis Cup tennis competition this year unless the Canadian Lawn Tennis Association receives a grant from the National Council on Physical Fitness and amateur sport.

National President James R. Macken of Vancouver told the association's annual meeting Saturday the organization is in the midst of a "critical financial situation."

He said the association had already submitted a request for the fitness council grant of $27,000, which has been given in other years, but the council had asked for a new set of detailed information.

"We won't know for sure what the federal government will give us until the end of March, and we may have to play competition tennis the first of May," he said.

TO PLAY IN EUROPE
The association was notified this week that Canada has been accepted to play for the first time in the European division of the Davis Cup competition, rather than the North American division it has played in the past.

Canada is scheduled to play Finland May 1 at a place still to be decided, but Association officials said they hope to have the first match put off until May 10.

"May first is awfully early in the season for us to muster a team," said one member. "Our young players will still be in university the end of April."

LOSE SPONSOR
The association's financial situation is made more precarious by the fact that Pepsi-Cola of Canada Ltd. has withdrawn its annual sponsoring grant of $8,000.

The money, which for the last eight years has backed the Canadian junior tennis championships held in Ottawa, will leave a large gap in the organization's budget.

NEED $5,000
Fred Bolton of Vancouver, the association's honorary secretary, said it would take a minimum of $5,000 to send a four-man team to the Davis Cup finals and three of Canada's top women tennis players to the women's counterpart, the Federation Cup competition which is to be held in Italy this year.

"If we don't get that grant from the government, we can't field a team," said Bolton.

The association was pleased that Canada has a chance to enter the European competition.

"Usually we play Mexico or the United States in the Davis Cup—two of the strongest tennis nations in the world. In Europe, we have a chance of going two or three rounds and it will give our team lots of good experience."

Each club played in the field lacrosse players list include Jim Gifford, Alex "Dad" Turnbull and Clifford "Doughy" Spring, all of New Westminster. The B.C. box lacrosse players are Bill Anthony, Alfie Davy, Jim Douglas and Bill Wilkes Sr., of New Westminster; Salmonbellies, Henry Baker, the North Shore Indian star; Bill Dickinson, with Burrards and Salmonbellies; and Bill Isaacs of North Shore.

WOOTTON THERE
Eastern box lacrosse stars named included the fabulous Peterborough goaltender, Lloyd Wootton.

Most impressive of the latter was set by Vancouver's Elaine Turner. Miss Turner set a native record in the 100-yard butterfly for girls 13 and 14. Miss Turner's time of 59.6 seconds was also 1.4 seconds faster than the U.S. record set in 1963.

Miss Tanner also clocked 1:02.1 in the 100-yard backstroke for a Canadian senior record. Louise Kennedy of London, Ont., swimming in the 15-17 age group, set a Canadian senior mark in the 200-yard freestyle with a 2:04.5 time.

Jim Shaw of Toronto swam the 100-yard backstroke in 56.8 seconds in the 15-17 category for another Canadian senior record. Another competition is scheduled for Toronto today.

Blades Head Back Home Sure They Were Bilked

By JIM TAYLOR

In the eyes of Bunker Hill, Victoria Maple Leafs were winners by inches at Memorial Arena last night, and in this case his eyes have it no matter how many others say nay.

Milan Marcetta's breakaway goal with 44 seconds left gave the Leafs a 3-2 victory over Los Angeles Blades, built them a five-point lead in the Western Hockey League, and proved again that when you're a loser nothing ever goes right.

WHO WAS RIGHT?
And it was a call—or, rather, the lack of a call—by Hill that made Marcetta's goal legal and sent the Blades into a disbelieving rage.

The goal, Marcetta's 22nd of the season, came on a play the Blades insist was offside. The puck went from Fred Huecl in his own zone, to Bob Barlow at the Victoria blue line and out to Marcetta over the red line. A deke, a push, and the puck was past Jack Norris. And then it started.

LOST THIS ONE, TOO
Blades claim that Barlow was inside the blue line when he touched the puck. Hill said no. The Blades backed referee Lloyd

Chinooks Given Surprise But League Lead Was Safe

CYO Saints didn't make the inter-city junior men's basketball playoffs, but they handed the Victoria Chinooks, league champs for the third season in a row and defending Canadian title-holders, a long-sized kick in the morale as the league program wound up last night.

LAST-SECOND
The Saints nipped Chinooks 35-33, on a last second lay-up. It was Chinooks' second loss of the season and left them tied with UBC Jaycees at the head of the final standings. But Chinooks got the championship on the strength of their two wins against UBC.

Chinooks meet fourth-place North Shore Mountaineers in the first game of the best-of-three semi-finals in Victoria Saturday. North Shore squeezed into the playoffs last night on the strength of UBC's 85-61 victory over fifth-place Kerrisdale. The floor in the first half (they trailed, 22-17, at halftime), got 15 points from Ron Bowker.

CHINOOKS — Hutchings 14, McLean 8, Collins 7, Edah 18 Total: 55. SAINTS — Hutchings 8, Bowker 2, Frampton 4, Birch 3, Jackson 11, Savvas 2, Gregory 2, Bowker 15, Evans 1. Total: 53.

Vikings Lose To UBC In Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP) — University of B.C. Thunderbirds broke a 3-3 deadlock at the end of the second period and took a 6-4 victory over University of Victoria Vikings in an intercollegiate hockey game Saturday.

UBC jumped to a 2-0 lead in the first period on goals by Miles Desharnais and Ron Morris before Victoria made the scoreboard with three quick goals early in the second period.

Mickey McDowall lead the UBC attack with two goals while Keith Klements and Lem Bousque rounded out the scoring for UBC.

Terry Foreman, Jim Wilson, Ken Harper and Ted Sarkisian scored for the losers.

Records Tumble At Swim Meet

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — A total of 22 Canadian open and native records fell here yesterday in the 13th annual Canadian-American dual swim meet, won by the Americans, 279-159, for the 10th year in a row.

American swimmers lowered the best Canadian times in 15 events, to establish Canadian open marks, while Canadians set seven native records.

BEST ONE
Most impressive of the latter was set by Vancouver's Elaine Turner. Miss Turner set a native record in the 100-yard butterfly for girls 13 and 14. Miss Turner's time of 59.6 seconds was also 1.4 seconds faster than the U.S. record set in 1963.

Miss Tanner also clocked 1:02.1 in the 100-yard backstroke for a Canadian senior record. Louise Kennedy of London, Ont., swimming in the 15-17 age group, set a Canadian senior mark in the 200-yard freestyle with a 2:04.5 time.

Jim Shaw of Toronto swam the 100-yard backstroke in 56.8 seconds in the 15-17 category for another Canadian senior record. Another competition is scheduled for Toronto today.

(No report was received on Victorians Jim Gollmer and Vito Dunford who were picked for the Canadian team.)

The Victoria girls' team lost, 88-76, to New Westminster and will not make the Seattle trip with the boys.

Boxla Hall of Fame Gets First Members

MONTREAL—British Columbia stars were strongly represented yesterday in the list of charter members of the Canadian Lacrosse Hall of Fame, to be built in New Westminster as one of the city's centennial projects.

Charter members are split in three categories—builders, field lacrosse players and box lacrosse players.

HUNE NAMED
Among the builders are Fred Hume, Con Jones, Jim McConaghy of Vancouver and Dan McKenzie of New Westminster. Others are Dr. W. G. Reers; Dr. W. A. Dufee, Gene Dopp, Rudy Glauser, Mike Kelly, Joe Lally, Pat Maidland, Jim Murphy, Jack McDonald and Fred Wootton.

B.C. members in the field lacrosse players list include Jim Gifford, Alex "Dad" Turnbull and Clifford "Doughy" Spring, all of New Westminster. The B.C. box lacrosse players are Bill Anthony, Alfie Davy, Jim Douglas and Bill Wilkes Sr., of New Westminster; Salmonbellies, Henry Baker, the North Shore Indian star; Bill Dickinson, with Burrards and Salmonbellies; and Bill Isaacs of North Shore.

WOOTTON THERE
Eastern box lacrosse stars named included the fabulous Peterborough goaltender, Lloyd Wootton.

Most impressive of the latter was set by Vancouver's Elaine Turner. Miss Turner set a native record in the 100-yard butterfly for girls 13 and 14. Miss Turner's time of 59.6 seconds was also 1.4 seconds faster than the U.S. record set in 1963.

'No More Votes' Trustees Ask

NANAIMO—Island school trustees want to do away with school referendums.

"No more referendums" became the policy aim of the Island Trustees in a meeting here Saturday.

The resolution came from Ladysmith school board.

The meeting will ask the B.C. School Trustees Association to ask the education department to get this policy incorporated into the Schools Act.

It was repercussions from last November when $1,200,000 building bylaw was defeated by taxpayers in Ladysmith district. Representing Ladysmith was trustee Alex Smith, and he brought forward several arguments in favor of the resolution.

He maintained only one-third of the voting population have children of school age, leaving the vast majority with little or no concern in education, while at referendum time well below 50 per cent of eligible voters turn out.

Only two provinces in the whole of Canada, he said, vote on building programs: B.C. and Manitoba, and in Manitoba only a simple majority is required.

"Many districts on the island are in the unhappy position of having two separate communities in the district. If one community objects then you might as well forget about it," Mr. Smith said.

This was the position in the Ladysmith district where Chemainus solidly turned down its last referendum.

Mr. Smith said at the start of the new term in September his district will have to rent four portable classrooms at a cost of $325 per month, and "We didn't have to get permission from the voter to spend this sort of money," he added.

At any gathering of school trustees, talk eventually turns to teachers' salaries, and Saturday was no different. Retiring branch president Jim Campbell from the Gulf Islands district came up with an idea which he hopes will bring the same salary scale to all districts between Courtenay and Victoria.

He wants to set up a negotiating team picked from Island Trustees which will be responsible for salary negotiations to the branch, which in turn will be responsible to the individual board.

The delegates accepted this idea in principle, and now have to sell their individual boards on the proposal.

Mr. Campbell said it made sense for the various boards to delegate salary negotiations to some kind of corporation, which they could control, in a similar manner to organizations set up by industry.

Ron Gray, BCTA's director of public relations and research, explained a highly successful pilot project to recruit teachers for the 10 northern interior school boards.

Advertisements are being placed in magazines throughout the world outlining the needs and facilities of the area.

So far two ads have been placed in Sydney, Australia, and one in Oregon, and more than 200 replies have been received.

"We didn't expect to get this many, and we've not given any serious thought on what to do with any surplus," Mr. Gray said.

Mrs. A. I. Reader from the Sooke district asked the delegates if they "ever feel guilty-ridden stealing teachers from other countries. We should be training our own."

Carl Anshelm from the Alberni district defended the action and pointed out these teachers would probably go to other countries anyway.

The spring meeting of the branch will take place in Victoria toward the end of May.

A new executive was elected Saturday, which saw Mr. Anshelm become president succeeding Jim Campbell; John Porteous, Victoria School District, first vice-president; Bill Lerch, chairman of the Nanaimo board, second vice-president; and Mrs. Joan Sturdy, Gulf Islands Board, secretary-treasurer.

College Freeze Confirmed

The provincial education department has confirmed it wants to see how present regional colleges work out before any more are authorized.

This has led to an 18-month postponement of plans for a Victoria regional college, and may delay the program for a regional college up-island.

Dr. Ray MacMillan of Nanaimo, chairman of the committee planning a college up-island, earlier discounted a report that the government is calling a temporary halt to construction of new regional colleges.

BUILDING HALT But two senior officials of the education department unofficially confirmed what was said earlier at a Greater Victoria School Board meeting.

That there will be a halt to new college-building until the government assesses the results from the present college at Vancouver, and the colleges approved for Castlegar and Kelowna.

EXPERIENCE FIRST

Education minister Leslie Peterson said: "It was announced at the time we authorized these colleges that we would want the benefit of experience in the field before we authorize any more."

"This is not to be construed as saying there will or will not be any more colleges."

MUM ON FREEZE

In Nanaimo, Dr. Roy MacMillan, chairman of the Upper Island Regional College Coordinating committee, returned buoyant from a Wednesday meeting with Mr. Peterson and Dr. Neil Perry, deputy minister of education.

He said there was no mention of a freeze on regional colleges during his conference in Victoria.

He reported that the committee was encouraged to put its plans before the Academic Board (a non-government educational advisory group) when it has its data complete.

SECOND HALF

By month's end, he said, the committee will have the second half of a survey by Dr. Leonard March of the University of B.C., analyzing the need for a regional college.

The committee has been working for a regional college for approximately three years, and is supported by nine school districts.

Twin City Mayors Hopeful

Company Offers Fallout Program

By MARY TAYLOR
ALBERNI — MacPowell has promised a major effort to end fallout.

The company has told mayors of the Twin Cities it will institute a costly program immediately to cut down fly-ash.

Mayor Les Hammer of Port Alberni made the announcement Saturday.

Talks have been held with local mill management and also top officials from the firm's Vancouver headquarters, to express concern of the councils regarding the serious condition, the worst ever experienced.

"The company has emphasized it is also concerned, and after top-level discussions we have been informed immediate expensive steps are to be taken to substantially reduce and eventually almost eliminate the fly-ash problem." The technical details of this plan will be handed to civic officials in three or four days.

"In view of this action by the company, and as it is understood the company will have no officials, engineers or other experts present at Sunday night's public pollution meeting, it is felt little could be accomplished by civic representation."

Mayor Bishop said the mayors had been unable to decide earlier whether or not to attend the protest meeting, because they were awaiting word from the company. The company made its promise late Saturday.

PORT ALBERNI—If even one-third of those who have signed the anti-pollution petition being circulated under the sponsorship of George McKnight and Colin Wilson show up at tonight's protest meeting the hall, with a capacity of about 500, should be jammed.

"We feel we will have no trouble at all to get the 5,000 signatures which we set as our goal," Mr. McKnight said.

Said Mr. Wilson: "There seems little doubt that John Squire MLA will present the petition to the government on our behalf when we achieve our signature objective."

WITHOUT TEETH

The petition at one time came under criticism from Mr. Squire who pointed out that certain legislation already in effect authorizes municipal governments to act on pollution within city limits.

However, Mayor Les Hammer has claimed the present legislation is without teeth.

Confronted complaining, without action, on the part of residents led Mr. McKnight to comment "at least our petition is a positive thing."

"We not only want positive legislation that can and will be enforced, but we want to get action in other areas."

RESEARCH MONEY

"We want to see research money provided if that is what is needed. We feel the government should investigate pollution control methods in other places. And if research is the answer, it should be paid for by an assessment or tax on the industry."

Some citizens planning to attend tonight's 7 p.m. meeting plan to take along their own supply of "proof" in the form of porch sweepings, peeled paint samples, and auto metal eaten away by corrosion.

Damage and discoloration of metal hardware on doors, such as locks, decorative door hinges, door-knob plates, and knockers, annoys homeowners and their complaints are backed up by the manager of one building supply outlet.

FALLOUT BLAMED

"We had door fittings returned by one customer, and since their finish was guaranteed, we returned them to the factory in Toronto. We received a reply from them that they had investigated and found the effects to be definitely the result of chemical reaction from the fallout here."

Failure of the Doyle Scrubber, installed at the pulp mill on an experimental basis early in the winter, has been offered by company officials as an explanation of the severe situation.

However, residents who are familiar with the plant operation point out that only one scrubber was installed, and that there are three boilers.

The fact that fallout is now extending to some new subdivisions, although admittedly in far less quantity than downtown, has caused residents to feel that failure of the scrubber plays only a small part in the problem.

"It was never like this up here before," one resident of the Maitland-Morton area complained, "even before the scrubber was installed."

Sven Jensen:

Mental Service Still Needs Staff

By TONY DILLON-DAVIS

NANAIMO—After two years with the Central Vancouver Island Mental Health Clinic, director Dr. Sven Jensen is still understaffed.

Dr. Jensen said his staff still lacks a much-needed clinical psychologist.

"We have had a vacancy for a clinical psychologist ever since the clinic opened," Dr. Jensen said.

TWO-MONTH WAIT

That was two years ago. The Danish psychiatrist said his clinic treats from 15 to 20 patients a day, and the volume is slowly increasing.

The waiting list is now two months long. Once a month he visits branch clinics in Qualicum, Campbell River, the Alberni Valley and Duncan, with a social worker.

VALUE PROVED

"The clinic has proven its value. The word gets around." Main purpose of the clinic is to treat out-patients from Crease Clinic in their home area.

Referrals to the clinic come from doctors and from other patients.

TEENAGERS "Many patients say they come because a friend told them how the clinic helped them," he said.

Dr. Jensen Helps

Health Advance

COURTENAY — A decision to form a mental health society in Courtenay has created a first for the district in the field of mental health services.

Permissive legislation enacted in April 1965 allows formation of a mental health society.

More than 50 people attended a meeting addressed by Dr. S. E. Jensen, director of mental health services.

The act states: The lieutenant-governor in council may by order, transfer a provincial mental health facility or service or a part thereof to a mental health society and shall in the order designate: (A) the terms and conditions of the transfer of real and personal property, (B) the number of persons who are to be appointed to the board of management, (C) the requirements of inspection by the director or his representative, (D) any necessary directions with respect to the transfer of officers and employees of provincial mental health facility from the civil service of the province to the mental health society.

SIX MEMBERS

The meeting learned that a minimum of six members are required to apply for a charter.

The speaker said a one-day-a-month service, currently being supplied through the Nanaimo mental health would be totally inadequate for this area.

SPCA Works Man-to-Man

PORT ALBERNI—The annual meeting of the Alberni Valley branch of the SPCA will be held tonight in the United Church Hall on China Creek Road.

President Bob Pratt said "we will be having two distinguished guests, Cameron Webster, B.C. president of the SPCA, and Commander Jones, the newly-appointed executive secretary of the group."

Work of the SPCA has only been going on in the Alberni Valley since 1964.

"We feel we have the best city relationship of any group in B.C. Other SPCA groups try to model their relations with civic authorities on the set-up we have established here," said the president proudly.

Part of the local success lies in the fact that many men in the valley are involved with the SPCA group.

Made Easier

We have an unusually youthful executive, and it is 80 per cent a male executive," Mr. Pratt said.

"We have many women members too and they do a really good job. But when it comes to dealing with city councils and other largely male groups, we find the men are able to talk man-to-man, and that makes it easier."

SPCA Inspector Cliff Ladd and his wife Alma both work caring for the animals at the shelter. Everything from dogs and cats to cows, horses, rabbits and even poultry comes under their care.

Kindness

With many families owning two or more dogs, it sometimes seems to Inspector Ladd, that in the Alberni Valley there are almost as many dogs as people.

"I wish people would realize that licensing their dogs is one of the kindest things they can do for them," the inspector pointed out.

Handicapped Project Grows

Work Plan Growing

DUNCAN — The sheltered workshop for retarded and handicapped persons, in a garage building at Trans-Canada Highway and Trunk Road, has been gain strong since Dec. 1.

Soon a total of seven persons will be employed.

The workshop has been put into operation by the Duncan and District Association for Retarded Children.

Former newspaperwoman Mrs. Leslie (Joan) Punnet, is the workshop director.

She said "We hope to get contract work such as folding and stuffing of envelopes or simple office work."

"We already had a small contract in connection with the Mother's March."

Mrs. Punnet said during the summer members of the sheltered workshop may get some outside work such as picking fruit during their spare time.

The workers are also engaged in handicrafts.

Mrs. Punnet stressed "work done by the workshop is strictly on a contract basis."

Inquiries about such contracts may be directed to Mrs. Punnet.

Living History in a Dictionary

By MAUREEN DUFFUS

When you come across words like crust coffee, dime party, hootchino and pemmican in the course of your daily work, there is a terrific temptation to waste a lot of time finding out more about them.

Joan Hall, who is editorial assistant at the Lexicographical Centre at the University of Victoria, is being constantly lead astray by these fascinating references as she works on the first dictionary of Canadian English.

Crust coffee, for instance, is defined as "a beverage made by pouring hot water over hard crusts of brown bread," and a reference mentioning this unappetizing brew is included: "Mine hostess placed before me a piece of dirty-looking Indian meal bread, and a large cake of beef-tallow, and... a dish of crust coffee without either milk or sugar."

Joan, needless to say, wants to read more about that hapless traveller in Canada's untamed west, in 1853.

Still on the subject of recipes and household hints, another entry in the dictionary defines pemmican as "pounded meat mixed with animal fat, the preparation being seen in a skin bag forming a hard and compact mass which could be kept for long periods of time."

One reference noted it was "reckoned by some very good food," but another writer in 1853, with more refined tastes, was less impressed.

"Take something from the driest outside cover of a very old stale piece of cold roast beef, add to it lumps of tallowy rancid fat, then garnish with long human hairs, on which string pieces, like beads, upon a necklace and short hairs of men or dogs or both, and you have a fine imitation of common pemmican."

And there you have another part of our Canadian Heritage: In her office, Joan sits surrounded by files of these intriguing words, peculiar to Canada, which have been gathered by lexicographers from old memoirs, journals and newspapers during the past 10 years.

Miss Joyce Mackie of London gives private coaching to local ballet student Debbie Lovett. — (Robin Clarke)

Dancers Meet After 20 Years

It was a wonderful reunion for two friends, well-known Victoria dancing teacher Mrs. Bebe Eversfield, and Miss Joyce Mackie of London, who first met when both were members of the Kynsht Russian Ballet.

It is their first meeting for 20 years, but both still take a very active part in the world of ballet.

Miss Mackie now teaches at the Arts Educational School, a training school for the theatre in London. Another branch of the school, a boarding school, is in Lord Rothchild's mansion at Tring.

"Here children up to 18 are given academic work in the morning with vocational training in ballet, drama, music and art in the afternoon," Miss Mackie explained.

New director of the school said.

Before coming to Victoria, Miss Mackie was in New York for a course in Contemporary dance, which, she says, is now reaching high standards in Britain.

Before returning to England, Miss Mackie will go to Calgary to conduct examinations for the Cecchetti Society, although she herself is now teacher of Royal Academy method as well.

She has seen little of Canadian dancing so far but was impressed with the Royal Winnipeg ballet in London.

"We enjoyed it very much — it was so fresh and alive," she said.

Now in Victoria for service call.

Dr. McLean Is Speaker

Dr. J. Beattie McLean of the department of languages at University of Victoria, in speaking to the Soroptimist Club recently on Ethnic Groups in Canada, said about 10% of the population are of English speaking Anglo Saxon origin.

He pointed out that just under 3 million of the total population is NOT of this origin, meaning one out of eight is foreign born.

Dr. McLean said that since the new Immigration Act of 1962, Canada has immigration officers to 23 lands who carefully screen the incoming people in their own lands by standards of training, skills and educational background, thus gaining "New Canadians" of intelligence, skill and ability.

He reported that of $25,000,000 of "Assisted Loan Funds" paid out to date, $10,000,000 has been repaid by these immigrants.

Dr. McLean was thanked by Miss Nell Jones.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Hon. George C. Marler, P.C., M.L.C., government leader in the Legislative Council of Quebec, and Mrs. Marler are arriving in the city this weekend and will be guests at the Empress Hotel until Tuesday. Mr. Marler will address the Women's Canadian Club on Monday afternoon. He will be guest speaker at the luncheon meeting of the Men's Canadian Club on Tuesday at which His Honor Lieutenant-Governor Pearkes will be a special guest.

Leaving for Overseas

Mrs. C. W. McCarthy, 2768 Satellite, will leave Tuesday morning by jet for a six-week tour overseas, visiting in England, Scotland, Ireland and on the continent. While in England, Mrs. McCarthy plans to visit the International Gift Fair at Blackpool.

For Miss Williams

A miscellaneous shower was held at the home of Miss Linda Evans, in honor of Miss Marion Williams, whose marriage takes place Jan. 28. Corsages were presented to the honored guest and to her mother, Mrs. B. Williams. Guests included Miss Wendy Lacey, Miss Myra Hall, Miss Joan Smith, Miss Carole Fox, Miss Sandra Chambers, Miss Diann Fitzsimon, Miss Shirley Richmond, Mrs. M. Richmond and Mrs. T. E. Padgin.

Visiting from Quebec

Miss Eleanor M. Hardisty-Smith arrived here Wednesday from her home in Westmount, Que., for a month's visit. She will be a guest at the Empress Hotel.

Miss Beech Married At Ganges Ceremony

GANGES — Dorothy Elizabeth Beech, member of a well-known Salt Spring Island family, became the bride of Dan Bruce Harford at a double-ring ceremony performed by Archdeacon R. B. Horsfield in St. George's Church, Ganges, on Saturday.

Parents of the principals are Mr. and Mrs. Cyril Lionel Beech of Ganges, and Mr. and Mrs. Stuart B. Harford of Qualicum Beach.

White spray chrysanthemums were used on the altar and wedding music was played by Mrs. V. C. Best, organist.

Given in marriage by her father, the dark-haired bride was radiant in her classic gown of white peau de soie. A fitted bodice with rounded neckline and long sleeves featured lace appliques which were also on the full-length skirt, softly pleated at the back and finished with a tailored bow at the waistline.

A tiered chapel-length veil was held in place by a dainty coronet of pearls and rhinestones and she carried a bouquet of red roses and white freesias. Her only ornament was an heirloom brooch belonging to her grandmother, Mrs. S. P. Beech.

Bridesmaids were her cousin, Miss Barbara Newman, and Miss Ruth Satermo who were groomed alike in cranberry red velvet sheath dresses with matching shoes and red velvet wedding ring handresses with white whimsy veils.

They carried cascade bouquets of white chrysanthemums. Cynthia McLaren, four-year-old niece of the bride, was flower girl and wore a short full-skirted dress of red velvet with tiny white collar and matching headdress. She carried a Colonial bouquet of white pom-pom chrysanthemums.

Best man was Mr. David Clark of Courtenay and ushering were the bride's brother, Mr. Brian Beech and Mr. Simon Jones of Victoria.

A reception followed at Legion Hall where the bride's table was centred by a three-tier wedding cake flanked by tall white tapers in silver holders. The bridal toast was proposed by Mr. Bruce McLaren of Victoria. For the journey to Regina where the young couple will make their home, the bride wore a Hawaiian pink woven wool suit with brown accessories and corsage of white carnations and freesias.

Out-of-town guests were:

Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Harford, Mr. and Mrs. F. J. McMillan, Qualicum; Mr. and Mrs. Bruce McLaren, Mrs. Violet Norman, Mrs. Alice Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. Noel Andrew, Mr. and Mrs. Brian Williams, Mrs. Margaret Pitt, Mrs. Joan Holmes, Mrs. Iris Caldwell, Mrs. Heather Dyck, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Gray, Mr. and Mrs. H. Eggleston.

Mr. and Mrs. John Knight, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Perry, Misses Jess Robinson, Shirley Entwistle, Judith Harvey, Elizabeth Oleson, Wilma Van Dusen, Doreen Holby, John Campbell, John Strachan, Angus Stanfield, Rodney Bold, D'Arcy Dellenier, Roy Watson, David Ross, Victoria. Mrs. Gladys Brodie, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Brodie, Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Bowker, Sidney.

Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Bridgen, Chemainus; Mr. and Mrs. Richard Thomas, Duncan; Mr. and Mrs. R. McMillan, Alberni; Richard Morgan, Nanaimo Bay, Mr. and Mrs. Keith Gray, Kamloops; Mr. and Mrs. John Gray, Terence Newman, Charles Wingfield, John Wingfield of Vancouver.

To Speak On Quebec

"An English-Speaking Quebecer Looks at the New Quebec" will be the topic discussed by Hon. George C. Marler when he addresses the Women's Canadian Club, Monday afternoon.

Government leader in the Legislative Council of Quebec, the speaker formerly served on the Montreal city council and as member of the Montreal Metropolitan Commission. His family has lived in Quebec for more than 150 years.

Mr. Marler was a Quebec MLA from 1942 until 1954 when he became minister of transport in the federal cabinet. He returned an active role in Quebec provincial politics in 1960.

The meeting begins at 2:30 p.m. in the Empress Hotel ballroom.

Daily Colonist Magazine

VICTORIA, B.C., SUNDAY, JANUARY 23, 1966

WINTER CLOUDS and sun in Victoria's outer harbor. —William Boucher.

A LEPROUS CHINESE STRANGLED AND SET ABLAZE . . . "VICTORIA PEOPLE THOROUGHLY AROUSED" . . . ATTEMPTED MURDER OF A POLICE MAGISTRATE . . .

These are some of the weird headlines which snare the interest of anyone reading old issues of The Daily Colonist.

Probably everyone has at some time or other sought information on a given subject in an encyclopedia, only to be lured away from the desired item by intriguing articles ranging from glass-blowing to piano tuning. For the writer of any historical piece, the pleasant detours occur frequently—an occupational hazard, one might say.

In many cases, the diversion leads to another story. Following are some that didn't quite achieve this grade. But . . . who knows? Maybe tomorrow!

Early in the morning of April 1, 1882, reported The Colonist's special New Westminster correspondent: "Smoke was observed issuing from underneath the sidewalk in front of the city council chambers and adjoining the Occident Hotel."

des Island, Magistrate Manson and two crewmen invited to dinner a stranger they had met earlier in the day.

James Lobb, alias James Gosner, seemed "altogether rational," and his request to sleep on deck that night was granted. After dinner, the men sat talking and smoking until 11 o'clock, when Magistrate Manson grabbed a lantern and sought a blanket and pillow for his guest, as the two seamen undressed for bed.

Manson was completing the man's sleeping

Another "crime" catches our interest 50 years later, in March, 1945.

Victoria was conjecturing as to the "ultimate motive" behind strange writings on the summit of Mount Douglas. According to the story, the markings were discovered on the lonely hilltop—Mt. Douglas had few visitors in those days, apparently—at the time Japan invaded China in the 1930s.

The cipher, painted in three-foot-high letters on the hill's bald crest, was said to be in Japanese

OF BY-GONE DAYS

By T. W. PATERSON

Investigators could hardly have expected the grim sight awaiting their arrival. The corpse of a Chinese resident—in the basement of the council chambers!—was found hanging from the overhead floor beams. The smoke which prompted the horrifying search came from the dead man's flesh and clothes, which were smoldering.

The coroner instantly summoned a jury, which had the unhappy task of viewing the corpse, and gave a verdict of "death from strangulation." Sadly, there is but the one, very brief Colonist reference to the tragedy.

How did the poor Asian die? Said the coroner's jury: "The man, whose name is said to be Ah Coy, had been sick for some months, and the supposition is that his disease was leprosy and that he was hanged by his countrymen and his clothing set on fire to prevent contagion."

As far as The Colonist seems to have been concerned, that ended the matter. Whether the case was officially pursued further, anyone accused of the crime—if it was murder—and brought to trial . . . ? Perhaps yellowing New Westminster newspapers have the answer. . . .

Bold black type proclaimed, "VICTORIA PEOPLE THOROUGHLY AROUSED," in March, 1895. According to this fascinating article, "One great subject is debated. . . . Individuals and families interested. . . . Discussed in public places and in the privacy of our city homes. . . . At the dining table, in the office, and on the public streets."

A great scandal? A terrible disaster, recorded in the flamboyant manner of 70 years ago?

Not quite—Paine's Celery Compound!

"The scoffers and skeptics are silenced, for they behold with their own eyes, the sick and suffering raised up, and those who were pronounced incurable, are snatched from the grave."

"In the midst of the popular clamor and excitement, many buyers of Paine's Celery Compound have been deceived by unprincipled dealers who furnish worthless substitutes—medicine that have no curing powers or healing virtues."

The advertisement—New York's famous Madison Avenue executives should take note—covered almost one-third of a page, and was written in breathless praise. Hundreds of flowery adjectives described this medication's remarkable ability to heal any and all diseases. Not one word explained just what Paine's Celery Compound actually was!

Later the same month, "A Crazy Man's Practice With a Revolver" gave the crew of the police boat Stella a nasty scare. Moored at Val-accommodation on deck when he heard a shot and yelled: "What's the matter in there?"

Even the magistrates had to be tough in those days . . .

Shielding the lantern in the crook of his arm, he crept to the engine room passageway. But, "as soon as he opened it the lantern was smashed by another bullet that must have gone very close to his body!"

The stranger, gone berserk, aimed again at the officer. Five times he squeezed the trigger, wounding one seaman in the leg; Manson and his engineer dove for cover. Fortunately for them, the pistol had misfired twice.

Now four men—the three frightened, unarmed policemen, one badly injured, and the madman—were in the tiny engine room, unable to see in the darkness. Slipping off his boots, Manson huddled in the darkness for 30 agonizingly long minutes, fearful the slightest sound might draw another bullet streaking through the night in his direction.

Finally, tired of this lethal sport, Lobb slipped away to shore. Creeping along behind him, Manson cut the mooring lines, allowing the tide to carry his companions to safety as he rowed to a nearby Indian reserve.

"Securing the help of two trustworthy Indians, (he) again rowed along the beach, where with Mr. Walker, the school teacher, they soon spied the stranger sitting between two boulders. By then it was daylight."

"They pretended to be fishing," said The Colonist, "and hastening to the Indians told them where their man was. The Indians strolled near the stranger with their guns, pretending to hunt, and asked Gosner (Lobb) to breakfast with them. He consented and as soon as they could get one one each side of him, according to Mr. Manson's instructions, they plinked him."

The wounded sailor, John J. Grant, was rushed to hospital in Victoria, where his wound was reported dangerous. The prisoner still had given no reason for his outburst, asking only: "Have I killed anyone?"

and read: "A No. 1 Hill of Victoria." Nearby were other markings, a mixture of Japanese-English letters and signs. A tiny white cloth on a board nailed to a tree pointed to Little Saanich Mountain.

What did it all mean? A sinister Japanese plot to aid an invasion of British Columbia's exposed coast? (A distinct possibility immediately after Pearl Harbor).

A young Japanese houseboy working in Victoria had been arrested just before Japan entered the Second World War. In his possessions had been a detailed map showing "various military and naval establishments in the vicinity of Victoria, the roadways of the district and the location of the important Esquimalt drydock."

The writings on Mt. Douglas? It was rumored that (before the war) "several Japanese had been seen going up the hill several times carrying a heavy tripod affair, such as surveyors use, and a large dark-colored box, evidently a topographic camera for use with a transit."

The matter was discussed in the legislature when Mrs. T. J. Rolston, Conservative-Coalition member for Point Grey-Vancouver, said: "There can be no doubt that this definite instruction, an identification mark for Japanese flyers, was placed there by Japanese who were posing as good residents."

It was a tragedy that made news a week later. Mrs. Marjorie K. Ramsay, of Toronto, had come to B.C. to seek the help of West Coast Indians in her "hunch" search for her husband, Flt. Lt. George (Buff) Ramsay. Ramsay and eight other RCAF airmen had disappeared the previous December, when their aircraft failed to return from a training flight.

Surely here was a hopeless task. What chance could there be that the airmen were alive after three months? Unfortunately, a deadline is near and we pass on from this sad affair. Perhaps some day a few spare minutes or another project will find us again turning the March, 1945, pages of The Colonist and learning the answer.

The Second World War had finally drawn to its bloody close in Europe and the free world was still rejoicing May 11 of the same year. The Colonist pages were crowded with articles concerning Canada's overseas heroes. One of the topics was the nation's last Victory Loan. To help promote the bond issue, Britain's most famous RAF fighter-bomber would make a "wildfire" promotional tour of the entire country, from the Maritimes to B.C.

The Mosquito bomber "F for Freddie" had strong ties with this province, for she and her

Be it known that the power of the press is not confined, in its effect, to the human beings who peruse its pages. Nor are the Lonely Hearts columns the only ones which contribute to romance between the sexes.

Instead, the old saying, "That he who runs may read," covers the field much more conclusively. Because cats can certainly run, and it would appear that some of them must be able to read...

About a year or so ago there appeared in these pages an animal rescue story, in which a couple of small new kittens, in widely separated areas, having been abandoned to certain and very miserable death, in the depths of winter, were snatched into safety in the nick of time, and now have happy homes here in Victoria.

sisters were constructed of B.C. spruce plywood.

For Freddie, veteran of the worst aerial evidenced by the number of tiny bombs painted on her nose—213. This represents 213 flights in flak-torn German skies in less than two years; an "unprecedented" number. During that dangerous period, manned by Flt. Lt. Maurice Briggs, DSO, DFC, DFM, and FO John Baker, DFC and Bar, she had never been damaged!

Such a record had no equals, and Mosquito LR508 of the RAF Bomber Command's Pathfinder Force was known throughout the world. Now she had added to her achievements by being one of the first of her kind to cross the Atlantic westbound.

By May 10, the charmed aircraft was well into her Canadian tour, having reached Calgary. The following day she would land at Patricia Bay Airport and later "buzz" Vancouver Island towns, saluting Ladysmith for being the first B.C. town to achieve its war bond quota.

But "Freddie" never reached the Pacific Northwest. For May 10, Lt. Briggs and FO Baker died in their fated bomber when she spun out of control at Calgary.

For Freddie, veteran of the worst aerial battles of the entire war, from which she emerged unscathed, was lost with her valiant crew three days after peace was signed in ravaged Europe.

Kitty Romance By Mail

By VIVIENNE CHADWICK

One of these little creatures was lucky enough, in its hour of need, to run into Mrs. Allan Baynton, of 351 Grange Road, my daughter Beverly. A few weeks of food, warmth, and concentrated cherishing worked wonders. Melissa Pud—short for Puddy-cat—grew into a handsome, silky tortoise-shell, and an appealing picture of the lady appeared with the story.

Quite evidently The Islander gets around. This particular issue found its way to 1446 Camden Avenue, Louisville, Kentucky, at which address resides another cat, one Toby Janes, huh! Toby promptly fell in love with Melissa P., and wrote to tell her so.

It was a charming letter. In it the gentleman expressed his whole-hearted admiration for her beauty and his pleasure at her good luck. Seeing that he himself had reached the age of maturity, and had considerable experience in family management, and she was still a young thing, he offered her several paragraphs of excellent advice on how to run her home. He explained in some detail the best methods for making her wishes known, how to get her own way in the matter of food and bedding, and what to do should her favorite chair be pre-empted. He warned her against the dangers of permitting a second feline in the house to share the service and affection which should be hers alone, and cited his own behavior in a like circumstance, tactics which had been wholly successful and had resulted in the intruder being found other quarters.

"I had no alternative but to be as obnoxious as possible," wrote Toby. "but I've a rare setup here, kitty-wise, and I'm not sharing it!"

Melissa was charmed. Actually she didn't need Toby's advice, as she does extremely well on her own. As a matter of fact, when she first arrived, she managed with no trouble at all to convince the master of the house—who had been under the impression that he had never cared for cats—that to turn her over to the SPCA would be a sad mistake. Nevertheless she wrote a nice friendly letter, and sent her gracious appreciation.

This was the beginning of what has since become a regular correspondence. The two letter writers have described their homes, their lives, their family activities, so that each now knows the other well. Toby writes of the visits of relatives to Canada, and their impressions, and Melissa writes of the trouble she has when she has to take her daddy to the hospital for an operation, her grandmother to Emergency with a broken ankle, and dog Tammie to the vet for skin trouble—all in the space of a fortnight. Toby writes to sympathize. He has sent his picture, too, a fine big silver and white animal, and he apologizes because he is portrayed flat on his back with his legs in the air.

KENTUCKY TOBY
... he fell in love

"Not a very gentlemanly pose," he admits, "but my Mum WILL go about snapping me at odd moments." He adds: "As a matter of fact I'm a bit of a ham, so I don't mind too much!"

This last Christmas, of course, they both exchanged cards and good wishes. Nobody else in the family corresponds except the cats, nor have they at any time. Toby types his letters, and very well he does it. Melissa writes in long hand, a script which somehow bears a marked resemblance to Bev's. However, the two generously share their news with everybody in the household, and one and all greatly enjoy the exchange.

It's quite a romance. Kitty-wise.

HEADLINES

Another tale of the macabre occurs some years later, when the 60-foot Vancouver fish-packer Carolina Maria sailed from her homeport on a routine voyage. What happened to her is a mystery that probably never will be solved.

The Maria washed ashore on Savary Island; nearby was the body of her master. Her three crewmen were not to be found. Yet the Maria's hull was undamaged. Her throttle was open, the range turned on, but the radio telegraph turned off. Of her very complete lifesaving gear, many articles were recovered from the Strait of Georgia—none had been used.

None of the Carolina Maria's papers were ever found!

A last oddity: One of those beautiful statues adorning the legislative buildings is an imposter!

Apparently the sculptor, C. Marega, had been unable to find a picture of David Thompson to use as a guide in forming the explorer's bust. Told Thompson was the "image" of John Bunyan, author of Pilgrim's Progress. Marega obtained a drawing of Bunyan and... the result is the attractive statue as it can be seen today on the legislative buildings.

Cliff Hanging through The Coast Range

... ON THE PGE

By GINNIE BEARDSLEY

Cliff-hang in comfort and confidence—without keeping your eyes on the road, the driver, or anything else but the glorious scenery—when you ride British Columbia's contradictorily named Pacific Great Eastern Railway from Vancouver to the Drybelt country and back.

The day trip to Lillooet and return costs slightly more than $15, with meals and temperance-type refreshments, once you are in Vancouver. Possibly one reason why more Victorians and other Islanders have missed this relaxed and pleasant way to go from dense coastal forest to dry forest and sagebrush country is the fact that there is no way to make the journey from here without staying two nights in Greater Vancouver or Horseshoe Bay. However, since most of us get to the big city occasionally, a day's extension of the stay is well worthwhile.

The PGE gets you up early — 8 a.m. departure from North Vancouver, half an hour earlier if you catch the connecting bus which leaves from directly behind the railway's business offices on West Pender. But never mind the hour. Your breakfast tray complete with a pillow support to rest it on your knees, will arrive to add to the enjoyment of a traffic-worry-free early journey through North and West Vancouver. Your meal is the Continental petit déjeuner type, not a logger's repast; but then you are not going to do any logging — only look at trees. And what trees!

There is perhaps no better way to get a capsule impression of mixture of forest primeval and dream home atmosphere that is the best of the North Shore than from the train windows. The PGE certainly hasn't "conformed to the local scene" with hanging lanterns and carry-type trains as suggested in the cartoons on extension of the railway, but it hasn't spoiled the scene either.

Giant cedars, broad-leafed maples, dogwood and other handsome wild trees provide screen and cover through which you glimpse splendid splashes of floral display, lush lawns, most attractive houses — and farther off — the rocky shoreline and busy Burrard Inlet. In places you are walled in by sheer rock, fern clad on its steep sides.

Horseshoe Bay presents a picture that tells its own story of burgeoning British Columbian love of pleasure boating — with hundreds of neatly painted craft moored at rest, others adding to the variety of life afloat which greets your close approach to Howe Sound. Before the backdrop of mountain and island, a kaleidoscope of marine life, natural and man-made, unfolds with every mile on your left, as you wind your way past rocky, tree-crowned promontory and driftwood-bordered shingle cove.

Here a flight of tiny pelagic birds takes sudden alarm, swims swiftly seaward, and dives as if at a signal to reappear at safer distance. There a road snakes down a steep embankment to someone's nautical hideaway 25 or 30 miles from work and the city. In the lee of a cove, a rank of small boats rides at anchor. In mid-Sound, a tough little tug tows the sinews of industry to a pulp mill at tidewater, a mine or logging operation in the mountains. Stretching out from Woodfibre, across the Sound, log booms speak of the industry that all this beauty breeds.

To your right, the steady procession of tree growth climb skyward; and every so often, a waterfall bounces joyously down from the mountainside, then rushes beneath your train to a tidewater. At Britannia Mines, old, many-windowed sheet-metal buildings emulate the trees and cliff-climb up the steep slope.

After the sea-level divisional point at Squamish, your diesel climbs first gradually, then more steeply. In the relatively flat areas, the parallel stream meanders peacefully past sandbars, with perhaps here and there a fisherman fly-casting. Cottonwoods wet their toes, and forest grows denser until no sunlight reaches the floor — only a dappling of brilliance filters down to vary the greens of the undergrowth.

Through the craggy, spectacular Cheakamus Canyon, you climb rapidly towards the 2,100 foot summit of the roadbed through the Coast Range, while the Cheakamus River, far below you, rushes in the reverse direction through the gorge it has carved over the centuries, and tumbles boiling white on its headlong flight to the sea.

Waterfalls, of which Brandywine is the most dramatic — and certainly the most intriguingly named, rush beneath the right of way at frequent intervals.

Majestic mountains, permanently snow-capped, tower all about you, the most spectacular being Gar-baldi with his startling Black Tusk upthrust. Water temporarily captive in a chain of deep and tranquil lakes, mirrors every picture, as your train follows the shoreline for some 50 miles. One small complaint: why can't the PGE knock the disused utility poles into the lakes, or freight them to some points where they are needed? The microwave makes them quite unnecessary, and it is a photographer's headache trying to dodge between them, to make the most of the excellent natural tree picture-frames.

SETON LAKE

Lakes move through a rich progression of color, from deepest bottle-greens, through gradually lightening jade shades to the light and milky opaque green of Seton Lake, where our largest power plant generates 450,000 KW.

Day return tickets are usually sold to Kelly Lake, where the "up" and "down" trains meet. This mileage gives you: a high ride over the Fraser on a fine piece of bridge engineering, view of the very dry canyon in which the Fraser has eroded its way over the centuries to the very bottom, and — Kelly Lake. The latter is green and pretty, but you have already seen several lakes just as green and just as pretty, so unless you are the type of tireless train buff who just loves riding for nearly 14 hours without a real break, the stop at Lillooet is recommended. Here you have reached the definite edge of the Drybelt, made the transition for Coast to Interior scenery. You have had a complete change of scene. Some five hours of travel has brought you from some of the wettest to some of the driest country British Columbia has to offer. Around you the sparsely pine forested benches and hills roll gradually down to the great grey-green grassy Fraser below, with here and there a bright green irrigated patch.

You won't be hungry, having had a nice full course luncheon on the train, but you may well be thirsty — a condition several places in Lillooet can remedy for you quite handsily...

There are quite a few places within walking distance of the depot: the Mile O post of the old Caribou Wagon Road, a couple of shops where the locally found jade is displayed and sold, a community swimming pool. With reasonably good walking shoes, you can go as far as the Hanging Tree, where male-factors of the gold rush days met their end — allegedly under the stern eyes of Judge Matthew Baillie Begbie himself. Through the knarled branches of this bull-pine you can look across the Fraser to the B.C. Hydro's experimental farm, where irrigation is from the river far below, and where Jonathon Scott, who raised British Columbia's first tobacco, lies planted among acres of alfalfa — and a few grape vines.

Lillooet is not a place with a bank of taxis waiting at the station, but the people are very proud of their locality, and some advance correspondence with the hotel of trade should enable you to arrange for transport out to Seton Lake's attractive picnic ground and swimming beach; or up to an elevation above town where you can look down on the whole of the Bridge River power development, three lakes of it, separated by a mountain; over to the experimental farm; out to Ron Purvis' jade workshop; or even (with permission from the local Indians!) out to do a little prospecting of your own. Mounds of rock here and there around town are leftovers of harder prospecting times, when Chinese miners hand-washed every stone for gold.

Unless you decide to stay over and plunge into the west of horse and dude ranch — which gets progressively more western as you travel north by east — your train leaves just after 4 o'clock in the afternoon, leaving you plenty of summer daylight for some lovely views of the mountains, lakes, and Howe Sound, perhaps with a sunset for a bonus.

Sir Winston Churchill now belongs to the ages and to the illustrious past. A year has slipped by since he died on Jan. 24, 1965.

Throngs of tourists converge around his shrines—Blenheim, the palace where he was born; Chartwell and Hyde Park Gate, his homes, and Bladen churchyard where he lies buried. But there is another home, known only to the fortunate few, where he lived as a young man.

This is Salisbury Hall, a manor house 16 miles north of London, which is so steeped in history it should not be missed by discerning visitors to England. Its story is vividly chequered, like a heraldic banner, with records of Romans and royalties, ghosts and silkworms, an ancient mystery and a modern secret. There, almost forgotten, is the tree-house where Winston, as a young politician, read, planned and dreamed of greatness.

Salisbury Hall was his home when, as a gay bachelor in the 1905 period, he lived with his mother who, by her second marriage, had become Mrs. Cornwallis-West. The seventeenth century manor is a fitting reservoir for memories of Sir Winston because the house stands on ground believed to have been occupied by some form of erection since man first learned to build.

This ancient site lies alongside the road between London and the Roman city of Verulamium at St. Albans. (Verulamium with its Roman theatre, homes and mosaics is well worth a full day's visit.) Experts think the hall rests on the foundations of a signal station for the Roman city five miles distant. Before the Normans conquered southern England the manor belonged to Asgar the Staller who held an important position at court. By 1086 it was in the hands of the immensely rich Norman family of de Mander-ville.

Then in about 1380 the parklands and manor came into the family of the Earls of Salisbury through marriage and has retained their name. Throughout the centuries the estate has been connected with the entourage of royalty. As a five or six hundred acre property it was bought in 1507 by one of Henry VII's treasures, John Cutte, who evidently rebuilt on the site because Leland wrote in his Itinerary 50 years later: "Old Cutte builded at Salisbury, by St. Albans."

At this point a mystery starts to creep in. The estate sold in 1617 for £100, yet James Hoare, a London banker, paid £7100 for it in 1663—the price of a palace in those days.

"One can only imagine that the place was very beautiful indeed and that James Hoare was a very keen buyer," comments Sir George Bell, the present Garter King of Arms, in his story of Salisbury Hall. "Even then," he continues, "paying such a princely sum . . . requires some explanation; it was far from a simple transaction. Especially as James Hoare kept it but one year before parting with it to Jeremy Snow."

As the secret unfolds one can read a lot into those words. Jeremy Snow was also a London banker and around his name revolves intriguing speculation: Did he, in fact, buy Salisbury Hall in 1669 on the instructions of King Charles II with the king's money? Circumstances indicate that Jeremy and his wife Rebecca could have acted as a blind for the king's romantic association with his lady love—Nell Gwynne.

The property near St. Albans where the pretty actress is thought to have been installed was conveniently near to London even in coaching days, yet it stood at a discreet distance from court gossip and inquisitive eyes.

Samuel Pepys recorded that in January 1669 the king "sent for" Nell Gwynne. Significantly, that too was the year Sir John Cutte's old house was entirely remodelled. Lending substance to supposition is the fact that, to this day, a small building beside the moat bears the name "Nell Gwynne's Cottage" and her ghost is said to appear on the stairway of the Hall. Perhaps most significant of all, Nell's eldest son by Charles was created Duke of St. Albans.

The visitor approaches the Hall across an ancient bridge spanning the moat where medieval battlements can be seen. The home has much charm and intimacy because the rooms are not large and contain fireplaces and furnishings of great beauty. The present owners, an artist and his family, open the house to the public on Thursday and Sunday afternoons during the summer months.

Nell Gwynne's cottage now houses Lady Hart Dyke's famous Silk Farm where visitors are shown the whole fascinating process, from egg to reeled hank, of the production of raw silk. This is the "factory" which produced the silk for Queen Elizabeth II's wedding gown and pieces of the royal satin are in the display room.

In another building, behind the Hall, the visitor discovers the amazing modern secret of this historic site. During the war it was under cover and camouflage of the old bricks and tiles of Salisbury Hall that the gestation and birth of the first Mosquito aircraft took place.

Geoffrey de Havilland and his staff of designers and craftsmen took possession of this unlikely rural spot in 1939. Drawing boards were set up in the haunted rooms. In the Crown Chamber famous personages depicted on wall plaques—which were ancient in "Old Cutte's" time—must surely have looked down in astonishment at the emergence of this flying insect of war.

By the winter of 1940 the prototype Mosquito spread its wings on a meadow behind the house. The second Mosquito, also entirely designed and assembled at the Hall, was flown by Sir Geoffrey himself from the parkland to Hatfield aerodrome.

The prototype now remains on show in a building at the back of the Hall as a permanent memorial to those who took part in its construction and to all the pilots and crews who flew the eventual 7781 Mosquito fighter planes.

The guardian of this treasure who will eagerly tell you about it—if he's there again this year—is the actual craftsman who tooled the parts under the eyes of Sir Geoffrey in those experimental days.

How Britain's wartime leader must have savored the secret of the stinging weapon being born in his erstwhile home!

As you walk away from the hanger in wonderment at this pageant of history, ancient and modern, pause and look up into the limes, or lindens, near the Hall's back door. There, almost hidden in the branches, you will discover the hideout.

Sixty years ago, at the time when Winston ceased to be the enfant terrible of the Conservative party by siding with the Liberals, he liked to climb into the eyrie up in the trees to think, to write and to dream of greatness.

An appreciation of the eventual greatness to which this illustrious Englishman rose and the strength of his background was aptly put by General Dwight D. Eisenhower when he wrote a tribute to Sir Winston.

"Only a nation steeped in history and pride," he wrote, "could produce a Churchill."

Footnote: Salisbury Hall, London Colney, Hertfordshire, England, is open to the public on Thursdays and Sundays, 2 to 6 p.m. and bank holidays 10:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. from Easter Sunday to the last Sunday in September.

BIRD IGLOO

The ruffed grouse has the best solution to the winter housing problem. As evening comes on, the partridge takes to trees as usually they did in the summer and fall, but during the colder nights of winter the idea of flying up to a tree branch has another purpose. The bird stays motionless on the branch for a moment looking warily around to make sure it is unobserved, then it plunges straight down at the deep snow, boring into a drift and using the momentum of the crash dive to carry it far beneath the surface. The bird tunnels ahead for two or three feet, and at the end of the tunnel turns around a few times to create a little room space. There it spends the night, securely sheltered from the wind and cold, as warm as any Eskimo in an igloo of its own making.

White, windowless buildings, square and bleak, reflected the sun's dazzling glare. Dusty streets swarmed with swathed figures walking with that effortless gliding motion that people possess when their limbs are completely hidden. The men's faces were uncovered, but the women revealed only their eyes.

JULIE CLARK LIVES WITH THE ARABS

While she attended university in Bordeaux, France, one-time Colonist staffer Julie Clark managed to take time off to spend a Christmas in Barcelona, visit the French Riviera, weekend in the Pyrenees, tour Italy (on the back of a motorcycle), visit Greece (on a Greek freighter) and, before taking off for Southern Rhodesia, spent a month with a family in Morocco. Here's her account of what it was like.

This was Tetuan, the first village inside the northern border of Morocco.

"Are you shocked?" asked the Arab in the driver's seat beside me, referring to the secret remoteness of the town and its inhabitants. Admittedly, I was.

But on returning to Europe following my six-week stay with a Moroccan family I was equally surprised to see women in short dresses. The visitor soon becomes accustomed to the veil and jellabah, just as one comes to take for granted all the Arab customs that are at first strange.

Most women over 25 still adhere to the traditional dress, although western clothes are being adopted by the educated younger generation. They, like young people anywhere study the latest fashions, usually from Paris, as French is Morocco's second language. They are also likely to embark upon a career, but the instance of Arab girls completing their education abroad is rare. This is better understood when one sees the woman's position in these countries.

My hostess in Morocco was about 45, short and stocky with fair freckled skin. She was of Berber and Arab descent. Her husband, an education inspector and landlord of several properties, was able to provide a relatively high standard of living for their eight children.

The eldest daughter had recently completed her final year in midwifery in Geneva and worked at a phosphate mine at Khouribga in central Morocco. Her younger sisters hoped to attain degrees in commerce and medicine. One of the sons had studied law in Paris, the other chemical engineering in Bordeaux. Hassan and I met while I was taking a French course for foreign students at Bordeaux University.

Every member of the family except the mother spoke French as well as Moroccan. Madame Ouajjou was of the generation that did not believe in education for women. She spoke only the local dialect and could neither read nor write. While I was staying in her house she went out infrequently. Her visits were usually confined to the family's many relatives. She and her younger daughters Leila and Balija did a fair amount of shopping for dress fabrics as they were soon off to Spain and needed new holiday clothes.

Madame's Moroccan dress consisted of a floor-length black satin gown over which she wore a filmy, brightly patterned dress, which was braided and fastened down the front. A narrow sash crossed the bodice and caught up the full sleeves allowing her to work unhindered. The skirts were hitched up to reveal voluminous calf-length bloomers.

Before leaving the house Madame Ouajjou always put on her black veil and jellabah, the long, shapeless outer garment with large floppy hood. If we were going in the car she would keep the veil on until we were well out of town, but it would be quickly tied on again if we were to meet anyone.

Monsieur Ouajjou wore western clothes, but for feast days would also don his jellabah.

Although one would rarely see flowing robes among the bikini clad crowds on Casablanca's cosmopolitan beaches traditionally dressed women used to come to watch their children at the beach near El Jadida, southern Morocco, where we used to swim. My hostess would sit in the baking heat until she could not resist paddling in the surf as far as her bloomers would allow.

During any family argument Madame invariably had her way. She was strong willed and, as far as the home was concerned, absolute ruler. However, her husband came and went as he pleased. He was neither asked nor did he volunteer information about his movements outside of the house. Madame cooked his dinner. Sometimes he came, sometimes not. But she always had to be prepared lest he bring home guests.

Strictly tradition decreed women were never to leave the house, except for "marriage and death," but this has been relaxed in recent years. However, even in modern times marriage is for men. A man has the right to four wives and divorce for a husband is no sooner said than done.

"Before we came to Morocco we used to go everywhere together, just like any French newlyweds," a young French girl married to a Moroccan told me. "Now he leaves me alone with the baby and I'm literally forbidden to leave the house. Once when I did my father-in-law was waiting for me at the door and after demanding where I had been sent me to my room!"

In order that his wife does not leave the house, the Arab husband is obliged, when he is able, to do the daily shopping. Every morning my host went to the souk, the sprawling Arab market. He returned with fresh mint for the tea, meat, fish, sometimes a lobster or mussels, vegetables and fruit, usually watermelon or cantaloupe.

Our bread was prepared by Madame very early in the morning before the rest of the household had risen. It was then taken out by the nine-year-old black servant girl to be cooked in the communal oven. Mina carried the round flat loaves on a plank balanced on her head.

The food which is eaten with the fingers is oily and spicy.

Mainstays of Moroccan cuisine are couscous, a mound of steamed semolina covered with mutton or chicken, assorted vegetables, hard peas, and onion and raisin sauce, sometimes flavored with a touch of rancid butter; brochettes, which are cubes of mutton or kidney cooked on skewers over an open flame; and, mechoui or whole roasted mutton.

Dishes like whole sheep heads may not appeal instantly to western tastes, but chances are if someone peels off the hide and meat for you, you will enjoy the delicious flavor.

One of Madame's favorite "quickie" recipes I still like to prepare for friends. It calls for enough tomatoes, red and green peppers, onions, spices and oil to cover the bottom of a shallow fireproof dish. The excess juice is drained off the tomatoes and the ingredients are diced and allowed to simmer for a half hour or more. Just before serving eggs, at least one for each guest, are cracked onto the top of the bubbling mixture and carefully baked with the juices. This dish should be served with fresh French bread, chunks of which are dunked in the "stew."

One sits either on low couches or cross-legged on the floor. This enables everyone to eat from the huge communal dish. The meal begins with the words "bismillah," meaning "Allah's blessing." When the guests have finished eating, hot water, a dish, soap and towel are brought round for each to wash his hands. Then the guests retire to rinse out their mouths.

Arab etiquette demands extreme cleanliness. One eats with scrupulously clean hands. "Babouches," or slippers, are removed before entering the luxuriously carpeted salons.

Moroccans pride themselves on their hospitality. Not only are you fed royally, but you will probably be asked to spend the night, if not the week and refusal will be taken as a personal affront.

Throughout a meal which consist of couscous, then mechoui, followed by chickens in orange sauce, one is urged to "ouli" (eat) and I found

In the deep darkness of winter nights when gales born in northern seas rage down the rock-bound British Columbian coast in violent storms, anxious skippers, hearing the sound of foghorns, or glimpsing the warning flash of light where reefs and rocks rear jagged heads, well may ask: "Watchman what of the night?"

By MAUD EMERY

What of the night, one wonders, in the dark era before horns, bells or lights aided mariners?

The earliest recorded light to guide seamen came from fires built of wood or pitch that burned in grates of stone or metal. It is said that these fires were sometimes moved or lit elsewhere to deceive the mariners when pirates or natives wished to wreck or plunder a ship.

A few earlier lights came from fires built in from baskets which were hung on poles. Other fires burned on top of stones piled to give them height. Towers were erected in lower Egypt by the Cushites and other biblical people. Among later beacons, the brazier that burned 2800 years ago on Cape Sigetum on the Asiatic end of the Golden Horn is said to have burned the brightest. Four hundred years later came the flame that burned on the island of Pharos in Alexandria Bay.

In America, a Spaniard, Fernandez Cortez, is credited with ordering the first light on North America's west coast. It was built outside the harbor entrance of Salina Cruz, Mexico, near the middle of the 16th century. It is said to have been a square adobe structure in which a blazing fire was lighted at nightfall. Cortez had ordered it built to guide the galleons and caravels in to the harbor. This was not a satisfactory light. It is believed to have gone unattended quite often. For one thing, fuel for the brazier was hard to obtain. When the wind blew, the flame was hidden in billows of smoke. Coal fires were used at times, but were equally unreliable, as they were bright when blown windward, and hidden in smoke to leeward. It was not until 1854 that the United States established its first lighthouse on the Pacific Coast. The location being Alcatraz Island in San Francisco Bay.

As years passed and more ships were wrecked with staggering costs in both lives and cargo, more lighthouses came into being.

Today there are nearly 500 aids to navigation guarding the sea lanes, channels and waterways of British Columbia. On Vancouver Island's west coast so strewn with the wrecks of ships it is known as the graveyard of the north Pacific, there was no lighthouse until 1891 along the coast of Vancouver Island, except Cape Beale light-station. Workmen digging out the foundation for this lighthouse found prehistoric animal fossils imbedded deep in the rocks.

The west coast of Vancouver Island then was a desolate, timbered, uninhabited place. An Indian might pass this way occasionally, but few white men, other than the bodies of those washed ashore from wrecked ships. A supply ship brought in building materials and foodstuffs on rare occasions. This had to be landed in the heavy surf.

To erect the lighthouse was a difficult task, but by the summer of 1874 the wooden tower, the foghorn house, and the keepers' dwelling were completed.

The second attempt made by the Canadian government to improve navigation on the west coast of Vancouver Island and lessen the loss of lives and ships was the erection of the Carmanah lighthouse several miles south of Cape Beale. In 1880-91 the task was undertaken at considerable expense and difficulty.

In 1907, the Pachena Point lighthouse was built, but only after one of the most disastrous shipwrecks in British Columbia waters. A year earlier the passenger liner Valerica was wrecked on rocks near the suggested site of the light. She struck at the black hour of midnight, and broke up so quickly there was no time to lower boats. In one night of horror 117 men, women and children were drowned or missing. Of the 37 survivors, not one woman or child succeeded in struggling ashore through the towering breakers. The Pachena Point light now pierces the darkness of night 20 miles to sea.

tip of Vancouver Island, other light stations were built in the early 1900s. Amphitrite Point light, near Ucluelet harbor, went into operation in 1905. A year later Lennard Island light was ordered. In 1907 came the most striking and one of the tallest structures of its kind on the Pacific, the Estevan Point light at a place known as Hole-in-the-Wall. It measures 127 feet from its base to the focal beam of light, and was designed by Col. W. P. Anderson, while working under the Canadian Lighthouse Authority. Estevan tower was designed to sway in winds of high velocity. For additional strength, flying buttresses were used. The superior construction of this lighthouse has withstood two earthquakes.

Other lighthouses on the west coast between 1907 and 1911 were Lookout, Kalis and San Rafael Islands. By 1940, from Carmanah light to Cape Scott, more than 50 aids to navigation were established, exclusive of radio stations, radio beacons, and radar devices.

It took the gold rush to Alaska with its active northbound traffic to bring lighthouses to prominent points between upper Vancouver Island and Queen Charlotte Sound.

Cape Mudge light, on Quadra Island at the entrance to Discovery Passage, the inside route to Alaska, was erected in 1911, and guards one of the most hazardous and treacherous stretches of water. Several ships and their crews have been lost in these tide and wave ripped seas.

The first, in 1890, was a freighter towboat, the Standard of Victoria. She was caught in a sudden squall, filled and sank in minutes with all hands.

Two years later the Canadian steamer Estelle left Nanaimo for a northern logging camp and sank swiftly in the swirling water and tides of the Cape. The ship and her crew of eight were lost.

In December of 1952, the Canadian tug Petrel of the Coastal Towing Company, disappeared off the Cape in one of the worst southerly gales of the year. Her crew of seven vanished with the ship. In 1929 the Alaskan-bound passenger ship Northwestern ran aground on reefs off the Cape.

Her crew and passengers were saved and the ship later salvaged.

Triangle Island lighthouse, built in 1910, and later abandoned, had the distinction of being the highest lighthouse on the Pacific Coast. The tower was only 46 feet, but it was built on the highest elevation on the island, 700 feet above sea level. Its beacon was 1,000,000 candlepower, and visible for 34 miles. However, it was too high to be practicable, for fog obscured the island the greater part of each year, fog so thick that the light could not penetrate it.

H. C. Adamson, in his book, Keepers of the Lights, predicts that one of these years, perhaps before long, the lighthouses along our shores may be dark and deserted. That one day we shall no longer hear the reassuring wall of fog-horn, that whistles, horns, bells may be silent, and the faithful keeper and his lighthouse are forgotten. They will be replaced by a network of electronic waves that give warning or information up to distances of 1,600 miles at night, 800 in the daytime—means by which a navigator will know, almost instantaneously and without regard to time of day or night or conditions of the weather, exactly where he is with respect to land or obstacles that confront him.

Our coastal shores will be as silent as they were before the days when the pillar of flame burned from the Pharos in Alexandria Bay. As dark as the days of pirates, slave galleons and caravels.

In time, no doubt, from remote, lonely, empty lighthouses, there will emerge on dark stormy nights, when the wind howls and the sea roars, phantom figures that will lead to ghost stories similar to the one told of Baranof Castle, the first lighthouse north of the Mexican border erected in 1837. From the top of the castle—100 feet above the sea—a light burned from wicks sunken in seal oil, a welcome beacon to Russian seamen entering the harbor.

The keepers of this lighthouse, Alaska's plo-

Last week while clearing out a drawer in my desk, I came across a page of notes originally written for inclusion in my Cook Book. In the paring down process, that always takes place before a manuscript goes to print . . . it was cut out. Reading it over again I decided that the subject was apropos at this, the beginning of a New Year. The heading reads . . . A cook's resolutions for the New Year. And here they are . . . Just for you! . . . I'll be a better cook.

I'll try at least one new recipe each week.

I'll add imagination to the good things that come in packages.

I'll add zest and mystery to my cooking by adding herbs and spices.

I'll promise to try my hand more often at making bread and yeast rolls.

I'll fit my desserts to the meal . . . make it light when dinner is hearty and visa versa.

I'll encourage the children to help with the cooking.

I'll make breakfasts so interesting that no one will want to skip them.

I'll make the most of every roast and look for interesting ways to cook the lesser cuts.

I'll be kinder to vegetables and cook them with special care.

Well there you are, and what better time than January, when the pace is more leisurely, to approach cooking with renewed enthusiasm and interest.

January is coffee and doughnut time . . . and how long since you've made a batch of doughnuts? Maybe you've never made them.

Doughnuts are no chore in these days of electric frying pans that keep the fat at an even 375°F. and insure beautiful browning. The recipe I am going to give you is for the lovely old fashioned kind of raised doughnut made with mashed potatoes (you can use instant) to help the yeast leaven the doughnuts. Doughnut making is fun cooking . . . try it.

RAISED POTATO DOUGHNUTS . . . 2 cups milk, 1 cup sugar, ½ cup shortening, 1½ tsp. salt, 1 cup freshly mashed potatoes, 1½ packages dry yeast, ¼ cup warm water, 3 eggs well beaten, ½ tsp. lemon extract, ½ tsp. cinnamon and 8 cups unsifted all purpose flour. Cinnamon-coffee frosting if desired.

Prepare instant mashed potatoes or cook and mash about 2 medium potatoes. Scald milk. Add sugar, shortening, salt and potatoes. Stir and cool to lukewarm. Meanwhile dissolve yeast in the warm water and let stand 5 minutes. Then add the potato mixture and the well beaten eggs. Stir in lemon extract and cinnamon. Gradually add flour, stirring until well blended after each addition. Scrape into a greased bowl, smooth salad oil over top (to prevent crust), cover and let rise in a warm place until it holds the impressions of your finger when you touch it lightly. Then punch down to release air bubbles. Roll or pat out on a lightly floured board to ¼ inch thickness. Cut with a 2½ inch doughnut cutter. Place on floured dish towel, cover with another towel and let rise in a warm, draft-free place until double in bulk. Fry in at least 1 inch of hot fat (375°F.) until golden on both sides. Turn gently with a fork only once. Drain on absorbent paper. Frost with Cinnamon-Coffee Frosting or shake in a paper bag with sifted confectioners' sugar. Makes 5 or 6 dozen.

New Year Resolutions For the Family

Note: To make about 3 dozen doughnuts, halve all ingredients except use 1 package yeast dissolved in ¼ cup warm water. To halve eggs, use 1 egg plus 1½ Tbsp. lightly beaten egg.

CINNAMON-COFFEE FROSTING . . . ½ cup butter or margarine, ½ tsp. cinnamon, dash of salt, 1 Tbsp. instant coffee, 2 tsp. vanilla, 6 cups sifted confectioners' sugar and about 5 Tbsp. milk or enough to make spreading consistency. Cream butter; blend in cinnamon, coffee, salt and vanilla. Then add the icing sugar alternately with the milk until of right consistency to spread. Beat after each addition until smooth. Makes 3½ cups, enough to frost the full recipe of doughnuts.

For those who still have mincemeat left over from Christmas, here is a dandy way to use it up. A mincemeat can be served either with whipped cream. It makes a prepared one. These post-holiday tired out is pre-grated dehydrated of grating fresh peel. bottles put up by one can highly recommend is a real concentrate of available.

MINCEMEAT UPSIDE 1 cup sugar, 1 tsp. pre-grated lemon peel, 1 cup cake flour, 1 cup water, 1 cup cake flour, ½ tsp. salt, 1 Tbsp. butter, mincemeat and ½ cup until light. Beat in the 1 c. rind, salad oil and water. Melt in small saucepan, add mincemeat. Stir in the brown. a 10 inch round cake pan

DEAR HELOISE:

We needed a chair to "boost" our two-year-old up to the table but had no room for another high chair or stool.

My husband took a plastic wastebasket of medium size (one that stands flush with the floor) and put a toes pillow snugly into the bottom of it. Then with tin snips he cut away part of the front and sides, making a very attractive "bucket seat".

Be sure the pillow is a tight fit. It can be covered with plastic for easy cleaning. This bucket seat sits on a regular kitchen chair, and we also use it in the car, fastening the seat belt around it and the child, so that she can see out the window while sitting as we are riding.

The children also use it on the floor as a toy chair for dolls. The total cost was under two dollars.

Mother

Oh, gals, this is the cutest idea.

This little bucket seat is not only more comfortable than a wooden chair, but it would not hurt the child if she bumped her head against the side of it because it's plastic. It's also safer than a chair with legs because the bottoms of wastebaskets are flat.

It is lightweight so it would be easy to carry along when going visiting. It also is very sanitary as it can be washed.

And think what darling playroom chairs these would make for the small ones!

Since these seats are inexpensive, you could make several of them (for parties) and stack them when not in use or you them out of the way.

They would also be useful for small fry ing TV.

You can buy wastebaskets in all and colors which made into bucket seats fit a very, very small and larger ones to child who is several old.

If you run hot water the wastebasket before using it, you can cut it pair of scissors or a knife and wouldn't tin snips.

Just cut away end the plastic to make seat the proper height a comfortable shape sides.

We think this is the most terrific idea has come our way in a moon.

I'm blowing this n his right now!

mincemeat mixture evenly over bottom of pan. Pour cake batter on top. Bake in a preheated 350°F. oven for about 25 minutes. Allow to stand 2 to 3 minutes, then invert on a cake plate. Serve warm or cold, plain or with whipped cream. Ice cream on top is good if you serve the cake hot. Cut in wedges. Serves 8.

If cake mix is used increase the dehydrated peel to 2 teaspoons. Stir it into the dry ingredients before adding the liquid called for. If you use a large cake mix use only half the batter and bake the remaining batter in a separate pan or cup cakes to use at another time. The mincemeat quantity is elastic... pudding was only one of the ways this not-so-fresh bread was used for. Combined with milk and eggs it's a fine nourishing dessert for children or adults.

OLD FASHIONED BREAD PUDDING... 4 cups bread crumbs or bread cut into cubes; 2 cups milk, scalded; 2 Tbsp. butter; 1/2 cup brown sugar; 2 eggs lightly beaten; 1/4 tsp. salt; 1 tsp. vanilla and 1/2 to 1 cup raisins (raisins are rich in iron). In a large bowl mix the bread, sugar, salt and raisins. Scald the milk, blend in butter until melted. Pour over lightly beaten eggs and vanilla. Gradually stir milk mixture into the bread crumb mixture. Let stand a few minutes until bread soaks up the liquid. Turn into a shallow casserole or deep pie plate. Place in a pan of hot water and bake in a 350° oven for about 40 minutes or until set. Serve hot or cold. When we were children we loved this cold, with raspberry jam spread on top and pouring cream poured over all.

You may use a prepared cake mix if you are one of those post-holiday tired cooks. Another short cut is pre-grated dehydrated lemon peel instead of grating fresh peel. DEAR HELOISE:

We have several tots. They all wear corduroy, and I have discovered an easy way to "iron" it.

After the corduroy clothing is completely dry, I sprinkle it slightly and place it in the dryer for about five minutes, or just long enough to fluff up the nap.

The sweat moisture left in the corduroy makes it soft and fluffy again. I then remove the garments from the dryer while they are still warm, and smooth them with my hands... then hang them to dry. D.W.

DEAR HELOISE:

The dealer who sold us our washing machine told me that any time I change from using soap to detergent, I should rinse out my machine with a water softener. Not only should it be rinsed out, but the machine should go through the entire cycle.

Soap and detergent are not compatible, and a film might be left on clothes. Mrs. Edward Smith

CUT-OUT FOR A PAD

DEAR HELOISE:

I have found an easy way to make a container to prolong the life of my soap-filled pads.

I use a large plastic dish-washing detergent bottle. Be sure it's the round type.

When A. D. (Doug) Dane came to Fulford Harbor at South Salt Spring Island a little more than 14 years ago, he didn't waste much time. He dug his heels in and settled on top of the hill above the ferry docks—and there he has remained to this day.

His cheery wife, Bessie, and small daughter, Elizabeth, came with him and together they have built a happy home.

Elizabeth, now married and Mrs. Tutt, grew up here and left home not many months ago to make her own home in Vancouver.

For 14 years, Doug Dane worked as chief engineer on board the Fulford-Swartz Bay ferry, and was retired in 1964. Like all retired business men, he could never really retire. He has kept busy working on radio repair, at which he is very adept, and many a radio in the neighborhood is the better for his expert overhaul.

Doug is handy at many technical jobs and his greatest joy is his hobby, and here he is a bit of a ham—an amateur radio ham.

A veteran of the two World Wars, Doug served in the Far East in 1915, and with the Royal Canadian Navy on the west coast as chief petty officer in the Second World War.

He started his army career at the age of 15 in 1915 over in England. He joined the First 9th, Hampshire Regiment, getting past his tender age by telling the recruiting sergeant that he was 18 years old.

He left England in 1916, bound for India.

He served in India and in the North West Frontier until the end of October, 1918.

His regiment was then ordered to Siberia.

They left Bombay, November, 1918, and were somewhere between Singapore and Hong Kong when the Armistice was signed. Arriving at Vladivostok, his regiment almost immediately started on the trek across Siberia via the trans-Siberian railways, with the troops housed in four-wheel box cars . . . 24 men to a car and a pot-bellied stove in the centre, which," says Doug, "they later found was handy for thawing out their rations of black bread and bully beef."

The men had come from India, where their best station was 120 degrees in the shade—and there wasn't much shade—while in Siberia they enjoyed a temperature of 60 degrees below.

They journeyed on, only stopping to trade locomotives, or lay tracks across the ice of rivers when the bridges had been blown up. "By this time," says Doug, "we discovered that we were on our way to support Admiral Kolchak's White Army against the Bolsheviks."

After 20 days, they arrived at Omsk, where they stayed for a few months.

Moved once more into the old box cars, they crossed the border into Russia, made headquarters in the city of Ekaterinburg. Here is the place where the tragic and historical Czar and his family lost their lives.

The fighting, says Doug, was then only a few miles away, at Perm, near where they were billeted.

Their troops formed an Anglo-Russian brigade. "Our battalion and three Russian ones were equipped with British officer's and ammunition," explained Doug. "This was in the late spring of the year—and what a beautiful country! We even wore our light tropical clothing from India."

"It got a little hot and we had to start heading back across Siberia, with a few left behind as prisoners."

After another long trek across Siberia, "with everybody lousy and dirty, we finally got to Vladivostok, where we embarked on the old CPR freighter Montéagle, which had wooden bunks built in the holds for us."

They crossed the Pacific to Vancouver, went across Canada, and finally onto an old White Star Line ship, the Tamsian, across the Atlantic to home, after having covered some 37,500 miles. Doug was discharged in 1920.

He then worked in motor engineering, but got "itchy feet" as he says, and decided to join his two brothers in Canada.

Before leaving the Old Land, Doug was able to attend the first reunion dinner of his old regiment, and here he met once again, his platoon sergeant, and all the others who had been taken prisoners at Ekaterinburg. Not only that, they had arrived home before Doug's platoon.

Sgt. Litlington told Doug that they had never had such a good time. The Bolsheviks had wine and food and had given them the best of everything. They sent them back with a request not to interfere with the internal problems of another nation.

After this, Doug arrived in Canada travelling third class on the CPR Minnedosa, tourist class to Vancouver and Victoria.

The Princess Maquinna sailed up-Coast three times a month, in 1923, and Doug eventually arrived in Quatsino, and took a gas boat up the West Arm to Holberg.

At that time, there was a little store, and about half a dozen houses, mostly shacks.

The Princess Maquinna sailed up-coast three times a month, in 1923, and Doug eventually arrived in Quatsino, and took a gas boat up the West Arm to Holberg.

At that time, there was a little store, and about half a dozen houses, mostly shacks.

Doug biked up to San Josef Bay, near Cape Scott, to his brothers' place.

Doug fished in Rivers Inlet, and in 1923, there were no gas boats—they used oars and sail.

He got a job at the Old Sport Mine driving hose and go devil, packing in dynamite and steel. Then on to the fisheries patrol vessel Black Raven as engineer.

Doug had to hike all the way from San Josef Bay over the trail around the northern end of the Island to Shushart Bay to catch the Union Steamship boat down to Alert Bay.

In 1923, Doug left the fisheries patrol to go as chief engineer on the tug Ellison, on Nimpkish Lake.

Then, when operations closed down, he took on relieving chief's position on the Columbia Coast Mission hospital ship Columbia.

About this time, romance stepped into Doug's life. He met his future when he met Bessie. That was at Pender Harbor, where Bessie was matron at the new hospital.

Another change was in store for the Danes and an entirely new experience. They rowed across to Eaglewood with the usual delivery of milk and entering the store and post office they came face to face with an official position vacant sign for a fog alarm engineer, at Sisters Lightstation. Doug wrote for the position and in due time received a letter from Col. Wilby, agent D.O.T. lighthouse service, to report to Campbell River for examination.

The Danes went into a huddle to see if they could afford such a trip. "We borrowed $21, putting up a cow as security," says Doug.

Doug then took steerage passage on the Princess Mary, arrived at Campbell River, sat for examination, and came home the same way. He waited three months and finally in desperation "I wrote a stinky letter to Col. Wilby," said Doug. It worked.

A week later, Doug received a letter appointing him to the position of lighthouse engineer, and the lighthouse tender C.G.S. Estevan would pick them up at a certain date.

Great excitement; the salary was to be $88 a month, with house. "We sold all our stock and farm equipment for $50, which we did not receive," says Doug. "The buyer, like everyone else, was broke."

The Estevan came, picked the Danes up and took them to the Sisters—three big rocks and on the largest was the Lightstation. This consisted of the house with the big light above it, a shed for fuel and oil drums.

"Not a blade of vegetation," says Doug. "On the second largest rock, we had the company of the seagulls who nested and bred there." Doug was given a quick briefing of how everything operated and away went the Estevan, wishing them luck.

"And there we were," said Doug.

The officials had omitted to explain about the fresh water system, but the Danes found out—the hard way. The water supply was obtained from the rain falling on the roof and draining down through the gutters via pipes into a large cement tank underneath the house.

A hand pump at the kitchen sink pumped water up for domestic use. Then came their first storm—a southwester.

"We were fascinated," said Doug, "watching out of the living room window as the white caps would break against the rocks, with water and spray going right over the roof."

"Next day, we found our fresh water tasted very salty—we had not been warned to disconnect the pipes from the roof in case of storm."

The Sisters Lightstation was, I think, a "proving ground" and if you stuck it there for a year, you had kind of earned your wings," said Doug.

A year later, the Danes received the good news that they were being transferred to Ballenas Island Light.

"That proved to be a paradise compared to the Sisters," remarked the Danes. "A beautiful untouched island. We spent four years at that station, which we enjoyed."

By this time, the Danes had got in touch with the people who owed them the $50, for the livestock, and in settlement, it was agreed that they send a freshened heifer, Scotty.

The Estevan arrived with Scotty and they dumped her into the saltchuck about a quarter of a mile off shore, to sink or swim. Doug went out in a rowboat to encourage the heifer and guide her in. "Never did I have so many orders," says Doug. Advice came from the master down to the cook as to what to do while the cow was floundering in the water.

Bessie Dane, on shore, struck the right note and kept calling "Come Scotty," and finally the cow turned and struck out for shore and was welcomed with a feed of oats.

The shock, however, caused the calf to be stillborn.

The population of Ballenas was now Doug and Bessie Dane, two dogs, one cat, and one heifer. Finally, the Danes felt they were getting too contented; they planned another move.

Doug says they later bought a boat of their own and went into business. The basis of their business was selling drygoods—doing movie shows—radio repair and playing for dances.

Another war hit the country at this time—the Second World War. Both the Danes thought they could help their country so they sold their boat and entered Vancouver, and on to Victoria.

Bessie Dane was offered a lieutenant's commission in the WRENS. She turned this down for a less remunerative position as YMCA war service supervisor.

At HMC Dockyard she was responsible for the social and recreational activities of all shore and ship establishments, at Esquimalt and Naden.

In his wanderings, Doug bumped into the Rev. Lee Gillard, an old friend from the coast. Rev. Gillard was already a padre in the navy. He invited Doug to lunch at Naden and before Doug quite knew what was happening, he was made a chief petty officer in the navy.

After basic training, Doug was chosen as a key man in charge of engineer workshops at HMC Dockyard.

At the end of the war, in 1945, Doug was released from the navy.

This was to enable him to take over the job of projection and sound supervisor for the YMCA war service for B.C. and Alberta.

Later he worked for Bell and Howell as technician.

After 14 years of married life, the Danes' daughter, Elizabeth, was born. "It was a long wait for a baby," says Doug, "even though Bessie wanted six boys."

Doug was then projectionist for the Cloverdale Theatre. Again he decided on a change—he would try his own business. He did and went broke.

That was in Langley Prairie. After this, he went back to the naval dockyard as an engineer on auxiliary vessels.

In the meantime, Doug had been studying radio and communications and had passed the examinations for his 2nd class D.O.T. certificate and amateur experimental licence.

About this time, he heard of an opening for an engineer on the MV Cy Peck, veteran ferry on the Fulford-Swartz Bay run.

In 1951 the Danes settled in Fulford on Salt Spring Island and "mighty glad to be where there is peace and beauty," declared Doug. He worked steadily on the Cy Peck and other ferries as they came on the run.

In 1964, Doug received his retirement.

The years between 1951 and 1965 on Salt Spring Island have flown by, with Doug and Bessie Dane becoming a part of the island community and serving in many capacities.

Doug helped to get the Fulford Hall into shape, and was secretary, chairman and just plain member of the committee in turn. He became trustee of the fire protection district in its inauguration year of 1961. He campaigned for the new Lady Minto Hospital and was vice-president of Branch 92 of the Royal Canadian Legion. He was nine years on the District 64 school board, two and a half of which he was chairman.

In parades and public affairs, Doug has been there with his loud-speaker system and has kept up a lively interest in all community activities.

Keeping pace with her husband has been Bessie Dane, who is ever an untiring worker in the district.

For seven years Mrs. Dane was superintendent of St. Mary's Anglican Sunday School, and she was an inspiration to the students and to the community.

Engineers have shaved down the side of perpendicular mountains that rise to 8,000 feet in constructing wide roadways beside the wild and turbulent river in British Columbia's Fraser Canyon. With seven tunnels, it cost $63,000,000. There is now a modern highway where, just a few years ago, the serpentine road hung precariously for about 70 miles above the gorge. It leads to paradise for any fisherman. This is the most exciting part of Canada and its fantastic beauty takes your breath.

THE FABULOUS FRASER

By TOM H. INKSTER

Through rugged terrain marked by high peaks, the Fraser River flows and boils southward until it has spent its force and fury when at last eluding the mountains at the town of Hope. Narrow and savage, the Fraser seethes along, making whirlpools and in some places boring its way through walls of solid rock.

Alexander Mackenzie entered the Fraser's upper waters in 1793, not knowing where the river would take him. He soon discovered it was the worst he had ever encountered. Wrecked near Fort George, he and his men nearly drowned. They patched their canoe, but they left the river at Alexandria and went overland to the coast, at Bella Coola.

In 1806, Simon Fraser, who thought he was on the Columbia River, followed the Fraser to its mouth with the idea of establishing British rights to the entire Columbia region. When he entered the Black Canyon, with white water swirling around him, he knew he had to go on or perish. In awe, the voyageurs stared up the canyon walls, thousands of feet above the river. They abandoned their canoes, crawled sideways with their packs along the cliff, getting from one ledge to another by hanging on to stout vines.

The Fraser River first gained major importance with the building of Fort Langley in 1827. American trading vessels from Boston dominated the coastal trade, and the fort controlled the Fraser River, trade artery to the north country. When the Washington Treaty was signed in 1846, ending the years of joint occupation by the British and Americans, the Hudson's Bay Company was forced to operate above the 49th parallel, the boundary established between the United States and Canada. Being unable to use the Columbia River route to the vast interior, traders used the Fraser and Fort Langley became of strategic value.

However, about 12 years later, Fort Langley's importance began to fade. The American side-wheel steamer Surprise fulfilled the promise of her name by proving — in 1858 — that the Fraser was navigable into the interior as far as Fort Hope, 78 miles farther up the river. With the help of an Indian pilot, the vessel made Fort Hope the new terminal of river travel for steamboats, condemning Fort Langley to economic decline.

Before passing from the scene, Fort Langley achieved another measure of fame. The British Parliament had passed an Act providing for the government of the colony of British Columbia, and Fort Langley was chosen to be the capital.

To proclaim the new colony, Sir James Douglas travelled from Victoria to the fort in the Beaver, first steamboat on the North Pacific coast. He was accompanied by Rear Admiral Baynes, the man who — during the dispute over ownership of the San Juan Islands in the following year — scoffed at the idea of two great nations becoming involved in a war over a pig.

The party was welcomed at the fort on November 19, 1858. Royal Engineers provided a guard of honor, a salute of 18 guns boomed out, and the province of British Columbia was born. Just 35 miles east of Vancouver, the fort was restored. Every year on Douglas Day, Nov. 19, the provincial premier and his entire cabinet meet there to pass on legislation, signing their names with quill pens used when the fort was an important outpost.

In 1858 the magic word "gold" was heard in the interior and within a year 30,000 fortune hunters swarmed into the area. Most of them came from San Francisco and the idle mining camps of California. As there was some fear that the invasion of adventurers would be used as a lever to extend American hegemony, an armed vessel at the mouth of the Fraser exacted a head tax from every American prospector, as a symbol of British sovereignty.

Wild and amazing experiences have been recorded in some of the little gold towns along the Fraser River and its tributaries, such as the Thompson, Lillooet and Quesnel. Some of the places are just ghost towns, and the descendants of the men who once brawled in them live elsewhere.

Prospectors washed clean the sandbars in the rivers, but the amount of gold taken out was trivial in comparison with the hardships endured to obtain it. Disappointed and disillusioned gold-seekers turned back, but harder prospectors pressed north into the Cariboo Mountains. In 1860 the news of Billy Barker's strike flashed around the world and the new rush to the gold fields swelled into flood.

More than 400 mules were used in pack trains that edged along the ledges above the Fraser River. Frank Laumeister introduced camels to the area. These animals would go 50 miles a day and carry 1,000 pounds, compared with the leisurely 15 miles a day and 300-pound packs of the mules. Laumeister paid $6,000 for 28 camels that the United States had purchased in Morocco for an abortive military transport experiment in the desert country of Arizona.

Rocks hurt the padded feet of the camels. They also had an odor that upset the mules, and other drivers told Laumeister to get rid of the camels or they would get rid of both him and the camels. Turned loose, they roamed the Cariboo area — with its severe winters — until 1905.

Between 1861 and 1863 a detachment of 400 Royal Engineers built a wagon road through the canyon to the Cariboo Mountains. It was an 18-foot-wide ledge in the side of the cliffs and, in some places, the drop from the unguarded edge was thousands of feet. Many a horse and mule, and quite a few men went off the road and hurtled to their deaths.

In that stretch of wild and beautiful country, man has tamed both mountains and river. The canyon road, which was often a perilous trip for motorists, can now be travelled with speed, safety and comfort. From some high places, the white swirling river looks like a slow-moving snake. Parts of the old road and its timber or rock walls, which were painstakingly built by hand, are still visible.

At Hope one can see across the great westward bend of the Fraser River and up to Holy Cross Mountain, where the snow — even in early summer — forms a cross in the ridges. The oldest church in British Columbia is at Yale, named after James M. Yale, an agent for the Hudson's Bay Company and a descendant of Elihu Yale, after whom Yale University was named.

The Fraser's well-known fisheries are at Hell's Gate. Blasting for a railroad along the river in 1913 caused a rock slide and the salmon, unable to reach the headwaters and spawn, became greatly reduced in numbers. The salmon fishery there — once the world's largest — was doomed. Then, in 1927, the International Pacific Salmon Fisheries Commission was created, and two giant flumes were built to let the salmon through Hell's Gate at any water level. Revival of the salmon runs on the Fraser River is said to be one of the greatest fisheries accomplishments of the century.

For an unusual travel experience, motorists can cross the Fraser River on an aerial auto ferry from Boston Bar to North Bend. Believed to be the only aerial car ferry in North America, it can carry one three-ton vehicle or 40 passengers. Crossings are every 20 minutes and the pedestrian fare is five cents.

At Lytton, the confluence of the Fraser and Thompson Rivers, one can see the merging of a crystal clear river with a muddy one. In less than a hundred yards after the meeting, the Thompson is swallowed by the murky gray Fraser.

One can get a touch of the old days by driving along the not-yet widened part of the highway that winds beside the Fraser from Lytton to Lillooet. Once the gateway to the Cariboo country, Lillooet offers a reminder of those stirring mining days at Hanging Tree Park.

There is still a considerable amount of jade to be found around Lytton and Lillooet, and great varieties in color and size are on display for sale at both towns.

TOUR of the PAST

By DOREEN HUNTER

"The time for talk is long past. Either we act soon or write off the whole idea of saving our historic buildings." Those words spoken by Dr. C. H. Borsman at a luncheon for some 35 community leaders a year and a half ago sounded a sober warning for the citizens of Victoria.

The idea of saving buildings of historic and architectural importance had been half-formed in the minds of many people over a number of years, but no concrete plan of action had ever been forthcoming. The anguished cries of many of these concerned persons over the loss of Cloverdale, home of one-time premier of the province, Dr. Simon Tolmie, at last united their intention, and provided the catalyst for a concerted approach to the problem.

At this luncheon on Feb. 19, 1961, a private trust to preserve historic buildings in Greater Victoria was proposed by Dr. Borsman, who was then appointed to head a steering committee. Eight months later, the Greater Victoria Historic Buildings Trust Foundation was incorporated under the Societies Act. Prominent citizens of the area, including Mayor R. B. Wilson, were nominated to the board of trustees, and an executive council elected. Dr. C. H. Borsman as president.

The aims of the Foundation are, firstly, "to promote or foster and encourage interest in, and the preservation of, buildings and sites of either an historic or architectural significance within the area generally known as Greater Victoria," and, secondly, "to acquire by gift, purchase or otherwise sites and buildings of an historic or architectural significance with the object of preserving the same for the people of British Columbia."

The phrase "for the people of British Columbia" is significant, for Victoria, after all, is the birthplace of our province. Fathered by the Hudson's Bay Company and nurtured by the stalwart and enterprising pioneers who came out on English ships like the Tory, the Thames City, the Tynemouth, and the Norman Morrison, the small fort soon boasted some fine homes.

Built by carpenters and shipwrights, of durable redwood shipped from California, some are still standing.

As the little town bustled with the activity of the Cariboo gold strike and later the fabulous Klondike, more elaborate mansions were built for prosperous merchants and prominent members of our early government.

Legendary Craigdarroch Castle rose in their midst to dim their glory, but to add lustre to the growing city.

Today, many of these relics of the past are lost in a forest of apartment blocks, parking lots and modern subdivisions, and remain virtually unknown to the latest generation of Victorians, and to British Columbians in general.

To preserve them and to gain the financial and moral support of the public, a familiarization course seemed in order.

One brilliant blue-and-gold day in September, the first of a series of highly-successful tours sponsored by the Trust Foundation took place. Stately old homes, so inextricably woven with the names of their owners into the history of British Columbia, were pointed out by architect Peter Cotton and historian James Nesbitt who served as conductors. The following weekend, two additional tours were sold out in advance, and only the winterizing of the London double-decker buses prevented further bookings.

In the lumbering red coaches, each group covered the older districts of Victoria and Esquimalt. Occasionally was heard an entertaining sidelight from one of the passengers who knew the house when still occupied by descendants of the original family, which added dimension to the simple viewing of the exterior. Architectural details such as stained or bevelled glass, wrought-iron tracery, and attractive vergeboards were described by the conductors.

The outstanding example of this "fancy" type of architecture was the house built by Capt. V. Jacobson in Esquimalt and now being lovingly restored by Mr. and Mrs. G. V. Lawrenson. It is deliciously iced with a frieze of carved hearts, birds, butterflies, and flowers.

Other notable stops were at Point Ellice House, still lived in by a descendant of the Hon. Peter O'Reilly, which was built in 1867. Tall maples faithfully try to conceal its advancing age with a thick, rustling mantle of pink-gold leaves.

A quick tour of historic Craigflower Manor was next, and where the stern features of the Mackenzie family stared down at us from their framed portraits above the organ. The manor house was built in 1853 for Kenneth Mackenzie, who headed a settlement of some 30 or 40 families came out from Scotland to operate a farm for the Puget Sound Agricultural Company. In later years, a newspaper reference was made to some of the children of the community who were dressed in the Highland costume of "knee breeches, loose coats, kilts, etc., with the legs bare."

A highlight of the tour was a lavish tea served in the sumptuous atmosphere of the Dingle House.

Bears Wired for Sound by Wildlife Biologists

Scientists are tracking five black bears through the woods north and south of Elma, Washington, hoping to learn more about the living habits of the animals that damage millions of dollars worth of Pacific Northwest timber each year.

The bears were trapped, put under sedation and fitted with a radio transmitter attached to a collar. They were then released and since then have been tracked with portable and mobile radio receivers.

Scientists hope to learn about why bear damage is great in one area and almost non-existent in other areas. Extensive damage occurs in the forests north of the Chehalis River, for example, but there is almost none south of the river, although the forests and bear populations seem to be about the same.

By studying the feeding habits of bear, scientists also hope to find out why the animals feed on the sapwood of trees. If they can find what nutrients bears seek in sapwood, they may be able to breed a tree low in these nutrients or find a substitute food source.

Last stop on the tour was the house of Small, who, as we know, was Emily Carr, and where she sang to Cow, slept in fear of the Killing Tree, and where she met and observed the members of that genteel society of the 80s she so tellingly described in her book. It is empty now, and forlorn—its spirit vanished and its former occupant.

The survey was intended to foster and encourage membership and active interest in the Greater Victoria Historic Buildings Foundation in its endeavor to guard and restore the historic homes of Victoria. Its members fulfilled their ambition, and at the same time allowed us a glimpse through the windows of yesterday into that other world of elegant balls, candle-lit drawing rooms, and formal teas served at the tea-hour.

Laurier's Problems were the Same As Canadians Today Have to Face

Reviewed by PETER BOWER

Joseph Schull's Laurier represents a significant addition to the ever-growing list of biographies of Canadian personages. This work, however, contributes to Canadian history in a special sense; it is a scholarly and authoritative work, yet presents the material in a clear and interesting fashion. It is the sort of book one might read, not because of an interest in history, but because of an interest simply in a good book.

Laurier, already going into a second printing, also performs a valuable service to the reputation of Canadian history. One of the most common complaints about Canadian history is that it is uninteresting and filled by dull men, concerned with dull and little matters. It is difficult to know exactly how this all too common opinion arose, but undoubtedly the writers and popularizers of history had something to do with it.

On the other hand, Canada has produced some first-rate historians so this cannot be the full reason for low opinion of Canadian history. Books such as Laurier will go a long way to help erase the unfortunate misconception so many persons seem to have about our history.

Joseph Schull, in his preface, wrote that the study of Laurier began seven years ago, first for a radio presentation, then for a short biography, finally, with a good deal of interest being shown from various quarters, the present book appeared. The result of this extensive period of research has been the most complete study of Laurier to date. New material and a new approach to old material contribute to give this book an insight into a figure of history often obscure, and always controversial. Schull presents a picture of Laurier, not only in the stiff formal pose as the politician, but also as the man who was of frail health constantly being nursed back to health by a wife whom he adored.

Perhaps from this picture of Laurier 'the man' complementing Laurier 'the politician' comes the greater understanding and insights of what made Laurier "tick." No other biography takes into account so many aspects of Laurier's life, public and private, and combines them into a comprehensive unit.

Laurier was prime minister for 15 years after winning the election of 1896, having finally wrested the power from the Conservatives who had been in power so long as to think they had a special right to run the country. Sir John A. Macdonald had died five years earlier, and had finally been replaced by Sir John Thompson, who appeared at first likely to continue the Tories in power for many more years. But Quebec turned against the Conservatives, and Laurier took over the helm with a majority of 33 seats, and remained in power for the next 15 years and three months.

The problems Laurier and his cabinets had to face included many of the same problems Canada is facing today, such as the bicultural and bilingual problems, the relationship of Canada to the United States and the Commonwealth and the rest of the world, political chicanery and the position of the Canadian constitution.

Laurier was of French-Canadian descent, and was equally at home with French and English; he had strong principles, and while many of them became slightly tarnished during the years in power, he never lost sight of the ever-changing nature of Canada. In 1911, the year he left office, he said: "We are making for a harbor which was not the harbor I foresaw 25 years ago. Exactly what the course will be I cannot tell, but I think I know the general bearing and I am content." The direction he foresaw was Canada as a nation within the Empire, yet at the same time he supported trade reciprocity with the United States. His opponents saw reciprocity leading to annexation of Canada by the States, and used the loyalty cry to snatch power from Laurier in 1911.

The same dilemma is pressing Canada hard today for a solution. Is it possible for Canada to maintain its position as a separate nation yet allow herself to be tied by so many bands to the United States? Laurier's words typify the Canadian confusion: "I am branded in Quebec as a traitor to the French and in Ontario as a traitor to the English. In Quebec I am branded as a Jingo, and in Ontario as a Separatist. In Quebec I am attacked as an Imperialist, and in Ontario as an anti-Imperialist."

These problems are not yet solved, and still bear the marks of Laurier's hands upon them. This is why this book will be read by some. Others may read it simply for entertainment, others for the historical concern, and more yet for various other reasons.

Laurier will disappoint very few.

New Biography Gives Fascinating Glimpse Of Founding Family

Massey College and Massey Hall are only two of many monuments proclaiming the continuing vitality of the family that produced Vincent, first Canadian-born Governor-General, and Raymond, internationally famous actor. In business and statecraft, theatre and theology, the Massey energy has been exerted effectively in Canada since Daniel left Vermont in 1802 for opportunity in Upper Canada.

The first biography of this outstanding family, The Manseys: Founding Family by Mollie Gillen, has been published by The Ryerson Press.

Incidents recorded in the book include Daniel's staunch resistance of an angry, restless mob, demanding its customary free liquor before the men would work, and the humanity of gruff old Hart, who sent a complete winter outfit to a paper boy who had shivered in the cold as Hart ranted against his tardiness. Details of the business ventures of the Massey men are mixed with descriptions of the wedding dresses of their women.

The Massey history is continued up to accounts of the young, present-day members. A wealth of photographs, some discovered in forgotten family albums, some taken especially for a recent magazine series, are included in the life and times of this remarkable family.

THE AUTHOR

The Manseys: Founding Family evolved from a three-part series in Chatelaine magazine in 1964 for which Mollie Gillen won the President's Medal of the University of Western Ontario in the category of General Article.

Born and educated in Sydney, Australia, Mrs. Gillen has travelled extensively and lived in England, Scotland, and the United States before settling in Canada. A varied career has included lecturing at Carleton University Extension Department, interviewing on radio and television, and editing North, a publication of the Department of Northern Affairs.

As a freelance journalist, the author has written for the Saturday and magazines as far away as the Evening Post, Ladies Home Journal, Malay Straits. Mollie Gillen is now associated editor of Chatelaine magazine.

Absorbing Reading

THE RABBI, by Noah Gordon; McGraw-Hill, Canada; 320 pages; $6.95.

This is the story of a modern American Jewish boy who refuses to go into his father's clothing business, becomes a rabbi and marries a Gentile who converts to Judaism.

The story is really a search by these individuals for themselves against the kaleidoscope of modern stresses made more stressful by religious and racial disparities.

The book explores many angles, but fails to solve any satisfactorily.

As a novel, The Rabbi makes absorbing reading. I couldn't put it down. But there is no impact and I have no desire to re-read it and doubt whether I shall remember a word of it in a month's time.

How-to books in the arts bother me.

Every artistic field has its shelf of books outlining rules for successful accomplishment in painting, singing, dancing, acting.

But most are written on the unspoken assumption that you can formulate systems and schools in the arts.

But can you do this? Can an actor or a musician realize his potential following another's rules?

I suspect art may be such an individual thing every artist must build his own set of theories and put them into practice.

Now comes a how-to book that says the same thing, rules cannot apply from one individual to another in a creative work.

Champion of Individual Effort

ON MIME, by Angna Enters; Burns and MacEachern; 128 pages; $5.

Famous mime, Angna Enters, taking a refreshing look both at mime and at the theatre, champions individual effort.

Her book, not a set of rules, is a log of 20 seasons she spent trying to help a class of young performers discover for themselves what they could do.

A second enjoyable aspect of the book is Miss Enters' habit of pursuing every action to its foundation.

Never content with saying what should be done, and how it should be done, she insists on asking why something is done.

Miss Enters, who gave her first performance in 1924 in New York, has had a profound effect on North American theatrical style.

If her book is read only by those interested in mime, and avoided by other performers, much of its benefit will be missed.

For she has much to say about basic concepts of performing. For example:

On inspecting your own performance: "Character is not something which comes into being backstage in front of a mirror."

On mimicry: "Mime creates a character, the mimic is an imitator. Chaplin is a mime, those who imitate him are mimics."

On costumes: "To wear historical garb requires understanding, not only of the dress itself, but of the person who wears it and of the society in which he lives."

On technique: "I restrain any display of technical proficiencies. I do not wish an audience to marvel at how something is accomplished, only what."—PATRICK O'NEILL.

myself munching doggedly for the sake of international relations if nothing else.

Because Moslems are forbidden to drink alcohol, the meal is completed with steaming, sugary mint tea. However, the male members of the family occasionally enjoyed a glass of wine. Usually I was made to go in to buy the wine as they considered it a disgrace to be seen carrying a bottle of alcohol.

The Arab tea ceremony is a precise and time-honored ritual. First a handful of only the most tender sprigs of mint are chosen. These are placed in a warm, silver teapot with a small amount of green tea. Approximately 17 lumps of sugar are added, then boiling water. The contents are gently stirred, care being taken not to bruise the mint. The beautiful, long-spouted teapot is then placed with a semi-circle of small glasses on a tray, or more often a round silver table, standing only a few inches off the floor. The master of the house then pours himself a sample glass and being satisfied with the flavor, proceeds to fill the glasses for his guests.

Morocco, like many countries is still a land of contrasts. Speeding along on an excellent highway one can still see camels treading blindly around a well to draw water. In the cities drinking water is still sold by a man ringing his bell, a brass cup in hand and a goat skin of cool water on his back.

With curious suddenness ancient ways pop into 20th century life.

One morning following breakfast there was an unexpected knock at the door. It was opened to an old woman, wrapped in white according to the peasant custom, and her son. The young man bent to kiss Monsieur Ouajjou's hand and presented his gifts; a skin of fresh milk, fruit and vegetables and three squawking chickens, which were later put in a cage on the roof terrace.

The couple were tenants from Monsieur's farm in the "bled" or country. They had set out to see their landlord at four o'clock that morning, starting with a nine-mile donkey ride, followed by a bumpy bus trip. The woman, a widow, and ruler of her large family since her husband's death, was contesting the right of her eldest son to collect rents from the other tenants. She sat cross-legged and erect on the floor. Whipped to indignant fury, then self-pitying tears she continued her protest most of the day.

The outcome of this case I never learned but it was an indication of the feudal existence that many Moroccans still lead.

near light, not only had the task of carrying the heavy containers of seal and whale oil up the stairs to the lantern, but they were hampered and terrified by a ghost that haunted the tower. The ghost, said to be a beautiful princess whose untimely death was attributed directly to the dictatorial rule of Baranof, was said to haunt the northwest chamber of the castle where she had been murdered or met self-destruction.

Baranof, aware of the love between the princess and her lover, is said to have sent the latter to Siberia and told the girl he had been killed at sea. She was then forced to marry against her will and mysteriously vanished from the wedding festival and later was found dead in her room.

The Trans-Canada highway turns north-east at Lytton and runs close beside the Thompson River, recognized as the finest stream for fishing ocean-going trout, called steelhead, in British Columbia — and the world, for that matter. A clean swift-flowing river out of the mountains, steelhead fishing upstream for 65 miles — from Lytton to Savona — is superb. Fish here are much larger than the average 9-pounder caught in coastal streams. Wary and averaging 16 pounds, the landing of a steelhead on the Thompson River is a thrill for any angler.

At Cache Creek, the traveller can go eastward to catch the big trout around Kamloops before going over Rogers Pass of 84 miles — that Keepers, carrying seal and whale oil to the lantern claimed that twice a year the swish of her ghostly wedding gown was heard as she walked through the halls wringing her hands. Anguished and miserable she wandered about the castle, grieving the fate of her dead lover. These visits were said to be followed by the lingering fragrance of wild briar roses.

In 1837 a new castle was built, and a lighthouse placed in its tower. The princess continued her ghostly visits. The lantern-tenders complained that weird noises would fill the castle on certain nights. Worse still, in the dark cold of Alaskan nights, the fire would go out as she walked the hallway below the tower.

After the United States purchased Alaska from Russia in 1867, Baranof Castle continued in use though in need of repairs. However, in 1894, 27 years later, the castle was destroyed by fire. The cupola that housed the light and the phantom that haunted the keepers vanished with the flames.

Baranof Castle appears to be the first tower haunted by a ghost, but probably, in the future of electronic wave warnings, there will be more stories of ghosts wandering about the spiral stairways of abandoned lighthouses.

Though modern devices replace the dark empty beacons, seamen of the future, hearing the roar of wind and the crash of waves still may ask: "Watchman what of the night?" and add sotto voice: "Is that the wall of wind or ghou?" For what better accompaniment to the sound of weird rattlings, tappings and anguished cries than the mournful dirge of wind and sea.

THE FABULOUS FRASER

replaces the grave loop road of 125 miles — to Lake Louise, Banff and Jasper among the lofty snow-capped peaks in the majestic Rockies.

The curious tourist will continue north from Cache Creek to Barkerville, the recently restored town that was named for the English sailor who struck it rich and started the gold rush that enriched British Columbia. Williams Creek alone yielded $50,000,000. Boots cost $50 a pair, soap was $1.25 a bar and a dance with a buxom "hurdy-gurdy" girl cost a man $10 a whirl.

Adventurers from many lands sought their fortunes. Rogues and unscrupulous gamblers followed them. Rough though the Cariboo was, there was little violence or robbery, for stern but just Matthew Baillie Begbie — the "hanging judge" who became British Columbia's first Chief Justice — was feared and respected by all.

Barkerville is fun because it is nostalgia nicely handled. In Kelly's saloon the gold scales, that told the value of a miner's poke, are on the bar just like in the exciting days of a century ago. Good meals are served in the Wake-Up-Jake coffee saloon. The graveyard tells of men who died young because they could not afford enough to eat at goldrush prices or were killed in mine accidents. Life on the plush side can be seen by the piano and candlebra in the parlor of the Bowron House.

There is now a provincial park where a town was named after Billy Barker — who died a happy pauper. Wandering through the place, one can recapture the color and romance of one of the most amazing eras in Canadian history. Cariboo Cameron embalmed his dead wife in alcohol. H. T. Davis gained international fame under the name "Twelve Foot Davis" when he noticed two claims that exceeded the limit by twelve feet, which he promptly staked. His 12-foot claim yielded more than $15,000 in gold. Barkerville was the largest and liveliest place in Canada west of Toronto when gold — like a magnet — first drew men to the Fraser River.

January, 1916 In Victoria

Soldiers, Snow and Sir Richard McBride's Departure

By JAMES K. NESBITT

By January of 1916—half a century ago—Victorians were beginning to believe that the war would not be over as soon as everyone had thought.

The casualty lists were growing longer each day, and citizens who had boys overseas lived in daily dread that a messenger boy would call with bad news.

The populace here worked hard for the war effort, but the general life of the place carried on, too.

Sir Richard McBride, who had been premier from 1903 to his surprise resignation in December of 1915, left Victoria to the cheers and plaudits of crowds of citizens and soldiers. He was on his way to become British Columbia agent-general in London. He was 45.

The Colonist front-paged Sir Richard's departure, saying the handsome, white-haired knight "was given a rousing send-off, not only by the citizens of Victoria, but by officers and men in the entire military establishment of this centre."

"When Sir Richard motored over the James Bay causeway he found waiting for him long lines of soldiery standing at attention in his honor. As the former premier passed along he was greeted with cheers, which were sustained throughout his progress, breaking out afresh as he came into view."

"On stepping from his motor, Sir Richard was immediately surrounded by a large crowd—among them men who have been his close and intimate friends—Hon. D. M. Eberts, Speaker of the legislature; Hon. Thomas Taylor, provincial secretary; H. B. Thomson, MPP; R. F. Green, MP, who was accompanied by his daughter, Cecelia."

"The new agent-general will go east over the CPR, visiting Ottawa en route, and then proceeding to New York where he will embark in Ss. Philadelphia."

Editorially, The Colonist said farewell to Sir Richard: "The popular demonstration that marked his goodbye was unique. It showed how large a place he occupied in the affection of his fellow townsmen. It was a tribute, not to the successful public man entering upon a new sphere of labor, but to the whole-souled, broad-minded, patriotic and kindly gentleman whom we have seen grow up from not much more than a schoolboy, to a figure of Imperial prominence."

As Sir Richard stood on the deck of Ss. Princess Alice that cold January day 50 years ago, and waved his farewells, little could he, or the crowd, know that he was taking his last look at Victoria, the city he loved best, and where he hoped to eventually retire. The next year Sir Richard died in London.

It was McBride's government which had sponsored the Pacific Great Eastern Railway, which, by the time he departed, was floundering about in financial difficulties, the government having had to take it over from Stewart, Foley and Welch. Mines Minister Lorne Campbell had made a formal enquiry into it, and he reported: "The more important of our railway projects is that of the PGE, which is now operating as far as Clinton, a distance of 180 miles from Squamish; approximately $22,500,000 has already been expended on the line, and the company, owing to its inability to market its bonds, is now out of construction funds. It has been estimated it will take $6,500,000 to finish the work, and secure the completion of a real link of communication with the rich interior of the province."

Well, the Bowser government was soon voted out of office, and the PGE fell into the lap of the Liberal governments of Premiers Harlan Carey Brewster and John Oliver, then of Conservative Premier Simon F. Tolmie, and then Liberal Premier Duff Pattullo. The PGE slowly moved north to Quesnel. Then Liberal Premier Byron Johnson sent it into Prince George, and since then Premier W. A. C. Bennett has marched it right into the Peace River country.

Soldiers were to be seen everywhere on the streets of Victoria in January of 1916. They were constantly on the march: "The 68th battalion, Victoria Fusiliers, spent a day at Clover Point range. Forming ranks at the Willows, they marched to the range. Lunch was served on the spot, and, while it was a trifle cold, the tang of the wind appeared to give everybody a better appetite. After shooting several hours the unit formed up, and headed by the bugle and brass bands, marched through Beacon Hill, and along Government Street to the centre of the city, returning to barracks via Yates Street."

Despite the snow, a military ball at the Empress Hotel was a great success: "There was an attendance of 350 . . . the ball was under the auspices of the 67th Battalion, Western Scots, the function being arranged by the sergeants, and was prompted by the desire to have the officers and men of this popular unit meet Victorians in a public and social manner before they leave on overseas service. Most of the distinguished patrons were present, but Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Frank Barnard and Mayor and Mrs. Alexander Stewart sent their apologies, explaining that indisposition made it impossible to give themselves the pleasure of attending."

"The Grand March was picturesque and brilliant in the extreme . . . It was led by Pipe-Major W. J. Wishart, and members of the battalion's pipe band, all of whom wore their Highland uniforms of the Douglas tartan. Places of honor were occupied by Mrs. Gordon Hunter, wife of the chief justice, who was attended by Lt.-Col. Lorne Ross, the OC of the battalion. Next were Mrs. Ross and Hon. George Black, Governor of the Yukon, and Mrs. Christie and Maj. C. C. Harbottle, 3rd in command of the Western Scots."

SIR RICHARD McBRIDE, as he was about to leave Victoria for London. His long-time secretary, Miss Lottie Bowron, prepares to hand him his ticket.

Two young Victorians were in the news: "Mr. Russell Ker, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. R. Ker of this city, has passed the entrance to Royal Military College at Kingston, at the head of the list of Canadian candidates. Mr. Ker has left to take up the advanced studies at that institution. Just before the outbreak of war he returned from Haileybury, England. While there he attended military school. His examination for admission to RMC was taken at Work Point. He is 18 years of age."

"With completion of his course at Kingston, Mr. Ker looks forward to joining his brother, Mr. Robert Ker, in the service of the Empire. The latter, who is 20 years of age, has graduated from the Central Flying School, England. He has entered the military branch of the British Aero Service."

Red Cross funds were enlarged by a performance of The Messiah at the Royal Victoria Theatre: "A choir of 200 voices, recruited from Victoria churches, was assisted by an orchestra of 40 pieces, all trained by Mr. Thomas Steele of this city. The solo work was probably the feature of the concert, being taken by Mrs. J. Macdonald Fahey (soprano), Mrs. Jesse Longfield and Miss Lugin (contraltos), Mr. J. MacMillan Muir (tenor) and Mr. S. R. Adamson of Vancouver (baritone)."

"The singing of the evening, which everyone, understandably, looked forward to with eagerness, was that of Mrs. Fahey. Her first solo 'Rejoice Greatly' was probably her best of the evening. She displayed a remarkable ease in her singing, which made it a great joy to listen to her. To her everything seems to come so naturally, and without the least effort. Her voice was strong, and full at all times, and under complete control in the most difficult passages."

"The work of the large orchestra was especially satisfying, fully supporting the standard set by the soloists and the chorus. Mrs. J. R.—

Green, who has gained a reputation in musical circles in Victoria, took the leading violin, and was assisted, among others, by Miss Margaret Tilly."

Then, as now, the Arion Club was a tower of strength to local musical circles, and one night the "boys" had a fine time "at one of their smokers," for it was a special occasion: "advantage was taken to make a presentation to Mr. E. Howard Russell, conductor for many years, who has given over to Mr. Frank J. Sehl . . . besides a full turn-out of the active members, there were present a number of associate and honorary members, among them Hon. Mr. Justice Gregory, Dr. Richard Nash, Messrs. F. H. Worlock, H. J. Pollock, F. W. Blankenbach, J. C. M. Keith, J. G. Brown and W. Galt."

Judge Gregory, on behalf of the club, presented to Mr. Russell a gold watch, upon the front of which was engraved the club motto "Ecce quam bonum," and the inscription: "Presented to Mr. E. Howard Russell by the active, associate and honorary members of the Arion Club, in affectionate recollection of his sixteen years' companionship as conductor."

"A pleasing diversion, after the speeches, was created by the presentation of a silver entree dish to Mr. Charles Conyers, an active member, who has recently been married."

And there was a bang-up concert for the soldiers in that January of 50 years ago: "Seldom, if ever, has the old Victoria Theatre presented such a charming appearance as on the occasion of the entertainment arranged by the Misses Spencer for the officers and men of the 67th Western Scots, and the 11th Canadian Mounted Rifles."

"The appreciation evinced by the soldiers must have repaid the hostesses for the trouble they had been put to in their preparations, as the various musical numbers, the dances and all other features were applauded to the echo."

"Miss Charlotte Spencer, Miss Teresa Mesher, Miss Helen Bagley, the Misses Mary and Jessie Shearer, and Miss Violet Mesher were among the young ladies who assisted."

So went January of 1916 in Victoria. It was a snowy month, and everyone grumbled, and then came the stunning snowfall of early February, about which old-timers are still talking.
